SUMMARY.

The obscurity of the general situation in the Balkans continues.

There is no indication of King Constantine's intention, though it is believed he still adopts a benevolent neutrality towards Servia.

He shows no desire to obstruct the passage of the Franco-British forces.

An eye-witness of the landing at Salonica describes the arrival of great Trans-Atlantic liners early on Tuesday morning.

These were followed by smaller transports with war material.

Destroyers escorted the transports into the harbour, and warships guarded the entrance.

The landing proceeded swiftly. The troops marched to a prepared camp through lines of curious but silent spectators.

The landing was effected just in time to prevent the Greco-Servian railways being held up.

Wholesale arrests among the leaders of the agrarian party in Bulgaria have commenced.

The Government announces that it is prepared to take stern measures to crush attempts to impair Bulgarian unity.

It is reported in Berlin that two Russian cruisers are bombarding Varna.

The Germans claim to have crossed the Drina, Save, and Danube rivers at many points.

A Servian communique states that an attempt by the enemy to cross in the south was repulsed.

The news of the Austro-German offensive has aroused anxiety in Britain, France, and Italy.

It is recognised that the Servians hold a strong position on the lines where they signally defeated the Austrians a year ago.

The Bulgarians are arming the forts at Dede Agach with powerful guns, and are laying mines off the port.

The Germans resumed a furious offensive against the positions they lost northward of Tahure, in the Champagne.

The attacks failed everywhere, with very heavy losses to the enemy.

The capture of Tahure is stated to be one of the important results of the resumption of the French offensive.

The public, it is stated, now realises that General Joffre does not intend to make a general assault.

He is taking instead selected points, thus disorganising the enemy's lines, and finally resulting in strategic piercing.

A Petrograd communique states that violent fighting has taken place north-west of Dvinsk.

The enemy seized part of the Russian trenches. The battle continues.

Heavy fighting is also reported south of Lake Bogoinskoje, imposing a heavy strain on both combatants.

The Russians seized the village of Koziany by a night attack, and captured three rows of trenches.

The communique records that other villages were captured, and it pays a tribute to the supreme courage of the troops.

Military experts in Rome estimate the German losses during September at 300,000 in Russia and 100,000 in France.

The Austrian losses are estimated at 250,000, including 80,000 prisoners.

News has been received in Rome of an important advance by the Italian troops towards Rovereto, 12 miles from Trent.

The Italians can view the town from the summit of their new positions.

They have commenced the bombardment of the fortifications of Finocchio, which is the last of the Austrian defences near Rovereto.

Sir Ian Hamilton reports that during the past month fighting at Suvla Bay has not been on a scale calling for special report.

The Minister for Defence has received word from the Imperial authorities that additional men are wanted for the Australian Imperial Forces.

Instead of 6500 monthly reinforcements which Australia has hitherto been sending 9200 are required, beginning with December.

The Cabinet has decided to refer to the caucus the question of the earlier closing of liquor bars.

After prolonged deliberation Ministers came to a decision amongst themselves that hotels should close at 10 o'clock.

The caucus is to be asked to decide whether the closing hour should be 9 p.m. or 10 p.m.

The Presbyterian Church urges that effect be given to the Assembly's resolution in favour of the early closing of hotels.

A great deal of organising work has been done within the past few days for the second recruiting campaign commencing on Monday.

Already 156 meetings have been arranged to be held in the north and north-west of the State during the next ten days.

The Premier attaches importance to the route march from Gilgandra to Sydney.

He says that in all probability other route marches will be arranged to traverse the whole of New South Wales.

Another transport arrived yesterday morning with 211 wounded or convalescent soldiers.

The Premier states that there will be no lack of accommodation for the wounded soldiers.

The Randwick Asylum has been taken over by the Federal Government, and this will relieve the strain for a few weeks.

The directors of the Randwick Asylum have accepted the offer of the State Government to take control of the children.

A cable has been received from Brigadier-General Ryrie stating that "everything is all right." The bullet has been extracted.

The annual report of the Swimming Association states that up to September 16 some 89 swimmers had enlisted.

The Governor-General paid an unexpected visit yesterday to the Soldiers' Club, where the Queenslanders were entertained.

His Excellency, in addressing the men, said he knew they would do a great service to the Empire by stimulating recruiting.

A fete was held yesterday at Leura and Mona, Bellevue Hill, in aid of the Sheepskin Waistcoat Fund.

The last surviving member in Australia of Stuart's exploring expedition, Stephen King, has died in Adelaide.

The sole survivor of the expedition is now Mr. Billiet, who lives in England.

Mr. Hughes made a statement yesterday relating to enemy contracts in Australia.

He said that in the aggregate contracts amounting to some millions had been entered into when war was declared.

A provisional committee has been formed for the establishment of a Metal Exchange in Sydney.

The Broken Hill miners are determined to continue the fight for a 44 hours week.

There is every indication that the threatened trouble in the coal trade will be averted.

The Dairy Bill was taken through the committee stages in the Legislative Assembly early yesterday morning, a number of amendments being carried.

Twelve months' notice is to be given for the termination of the agreement with the States' Railways for the carriage of mails.

The real estate market showed signs of improvement this week, and a fair amount of business was recorded.

The business transacted on the Sydney Stock Exchange yesterday was on limited lines, though values were well maintained.

An unusually large number of Edna May Deep shares changed hands yesterday, prices being firm.

Though not so active, tin stocks were in favour. Barriers were quiet, but Hampdens held at firm rates.

In the general markets there was a fairly brisk distributing demand, and prices generally were unaltered.

All harvesting and shearing requisites attracted attention at full rates. Many inquiries were made for fencing wire.

Forecast.—Fine generally for the present, except for a shower or two along the coast, with moderating winds and sea, but becoming warmer generally.

A REMARKABLE REVELATION OF STYLE AND ECONOMY IN BOYS' CLOTHING.

As every wise parent is aware, clothing for Boys requires to be of durable material in order to give satisfactory wear, also good cut and finish are necessary if they are to look smart little men. Then comes the thought, such clothing would be expensive, perhaps? Not if it is purchased from Farmer's, however, for it is our policy to give the utmost in quality and value, and so ensure satisfied purchasers. An inspection will reveal the high quality and moderate prices which prevail.

YOUR SUMMER SUIT—SIR?

If there is a weak spot in a man's wardrobe it is always discovered after the holidays. This fact applies more especially to his Suit, which is subjected to much harder wear than at any other time of the year. What better reason could we have for reminding you that now is the best time to place your Summer Suit order.

Every day finds the temperature getting higher, and it is just now, at the change from Cool to Warm Days, that you can appreciate a change in your wearing apparel.

Come in any day—you will count the time well repaid by an inspection of the New Season's Suitings now being shown, and we would be more than pleased to answer your inquiries and to keep you up-to-date with the fashion changes for the New Season's Wear.

COUNTRY CUSTOMERS and those who find it inconvenient to call may make an inspection merely by requesting us to send Samples and Patterns, which, with our big Catalogue of Fashions, we send free to any address.

CARRIAGE PAID ON ALL COUNTRY ORDERS.

CHEAPER FUEL FOR OIL ENGINES.
The economies effected by using our SPECIAL ENGINE DISTILLATE are very substantial, and users frequently write to us giving their experiences. The following is typical of many letters received:—"I beg to advise you that I duly received the four cases of Engine Distillate, and after a thorough trial found it to be equal, if not better, to any Benzine that I have used in my engine."

"The management has added Mary Law, a violinist possessed of such stage tact, technique, and artistry that she had both the matinee-goers and those who attended the evening performance applauding with equal fervour works of the great masters and fantastic fragments. The daintiness and wealth of expression in her work had the audience demanding more, some of which they got, and then were not satisfied, for a musician of her class it was a triumph to 'get' such an audience. Many good things were said of her, but one that the writer overheard stands."—Daily Telegraph.

SYDNEY'S CONTRALTO, who was Chosen out of all the Musical Students in London to Sing at A COMMAND PERFORMANCE
at the Royal Alexandra Palace, with a
CHORUS and ORCHESTRA of ONE THOUSAND.

Acknowledged by press and public as a rare treat. We reprint but one of the many flattering notices from Sydney's press:—"Music-hall traditions are being severely dealt with by the Tivoli management, and, it may be said at once, to their general uplift. More and more the Tivoli is getting into the rarified atmosphere of the highest musical art. For some time past we have had Ella Caspers, the golden-voiced Australian contralto, and Hector Goldspink, tenor of the Quinlan Opera Company, flooding the building with rich and ennobling song, and winning great gusts of general applause from an audience, sections of which may be said to have hitherto preferred the 'real music hall stuff.'"—Daily Telegraph.

"ON DANGEROUS PATHS."

VIOLA DANA, the Little Broadway Child Star and Victim of the vivid Play, "THE STONING," which recently caused a sensation for reality of depiction, is featured in "ON DANGEROUS PATHS" as a little Country Lass. As the self-willed but well-meaning girl who goes to the city to help her father and becomes ensnared by a magnetic Doctor Miss Dana is in her ideal role.

THE TWO FIVE HUNDREDS
WON BY PALMER CORD TYRES.
WON BY PALMER CORD TYRES.

In the 500 Mile Road Race at Indianapolis the first Six Cars past the winning post carried PALMER CORD TYRES.
In the Chicago race all the Cars carried these Tyres.

The particularly severe conditions in races like these demonstrated more than anything else the remarkable stability of these remarkable Tyres.

USE THEM ON YOUR CAR.

BUICK,

THE CAR THAT GLIDES IS A TRUE STATEMENT.

The phenomenal success of the BUICK SIX has exceeded our most sanguine expectations. On Tuesday last we received ten orders for BUICK CARS.

We need no salesman; order takers are all that is required. The BUICK SIX sells on sight, and in many cases without being seen. It is light, flexible, durable, economical, and handsome. What more could be desired? Think it over—a six-cylinder car, with BUICK reputation, at less than £400 is worth consideration.

BUICK competitor has yet to be built.

Our only trouble is to get sufficient supplies. Book at once if you wish to secure one from an early shipment.

PRICES:—
TOURING CAR, £395.
RUNABOUT, £365.

WHY THE "OVERLAND"

PUTS OTHER 4-CYLINDER CARS OFF THE MARKET.

When a manufacturer has made a 4-cylinder car of "Overland" quality at the Overland price, that is the car he will continue to offer to his customers, provided it gives satisfaction in competition with the Overland—but when he cannot make a 4-cylinder car of Overland quality and sell it at the Overland price, then he is forced sooner or later to make another type of car so he will be able to get some business in competition with the Overland.

Watch the new models of other makes and you will see—new sizes—new eights—new anything, in fact, in an effort to compete with the Overland. Do not let a salesman bluff you into paying extra money for six cylinders when the quality cannot be equal to the Overland.

The Overland Factory is the largest factory in the World making a full-sized quality car. Over 100,000 Overland cars will be made this year—that's why the other factories cannot compete, and are resorting to new untried models in order to get the extra money they must ask for inferior cars.

GOODYEAR

SOME TYRE TROUBLES,
AND HOW GOODYEAR MET THEM.

TYRES THAT BLOW OUT.

Most blow-outs are due to wrinkled fabric, buckled in the cure. This can be remedied by final-curing on air-filled fabric tubes. But the method is expensive.

Goodyears are the only tyres which get this exclusive "On-Air" cure. It adds to our cost £90,000 per year, but it prevents these needless blow-outs.

TREADS THAT LOOSEN.

That's a very common cause of tyre ruin. There is now a method to lessen this danger—to reduce it by 60 per cent. Hundreds of large rubber rivets are formed in the tyre during vulcanisation. We paid £10,000 for control of this method, so Goodyears are the only tyres which employ it.

COSTLY ANTI-SKIDS.

Many anti-skids have proved costly. Some soon wore down. Some caused vibration, some centered strains at small points in the fabric. And some, when most needed, proved inefficient.

On Goodyears alone you find the All-Weather tread. It is tough, double-thick and enduring. It is flat and smooth-riding and regular. It spreads the strains like a plain tread. It grasps wet roads with deep, sharp, resistless grips.

HIGH COST PER MILE.

We have kept scores of experts working for years to attain lowest cost per mile. Their efforts have cost us £20,000 per year. They have built thousands of tyres in thousands of ways to compare in metered road tests. Now they all agree that Goodyear tyres mark the present-day limit in this respect.

Those are the reasons why Goodyear rule Tyredom—why they outsell any other tyre. And why, every month, they are winning legions from other tyres to Goodyears.

If you suffer these troubles, and wish to combat them, Goodyear tyres will do it. Any garage will supply you. Just say you must have Goodyear.

A GREAT RUSH ON THE 1916 MODELS

OF THE

MAXWELL 25.

The Factory advises that they are turning out 1500 CARS per week, and are already 1 month behind on the orders in hand. We have already landed two shipments of the new model, and have only four cars on hand. Further shipments are now on the water. Intending buyers should inspect immediately, and book their orders to arrive, in order to avoid disappointment.

The MAXWELL is a great hill-climber, doing the bulk of its work on top gear, and is easy on tyres and light on petrol, doing up to 30 miles to a gallon.

GOVERNMENT NOTICES.

Chief Secretary's Department,
Sydney, September 29, 1915.

IT IS HEREBY NOTIFIED FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION, that the waters of the rivers, as specified in Schedule "A" hereto, have been closed against fishing generally, and by any method of capture, except by rod and line or hand-line, with not more than two hooks attached, from the 1st day of October to the 30th day of November, 1915, inclusive: Provided that it shall not be lawful to capture trout by such methods: And provided that the waters specified in Schedule "B" hereto shall not be closed against the taking of trout by means of rods and lines with artificial flies and landing nets during the month of November next.
GEORGE BLACK, Minister.

SCHEDULE A.
The whole of the waters of that part of the Murray River, together with all its lakes, lagoons, creeks, inlets, billabongs, and tributaries, within the State of New South Wales, including the Darling, Edward, or Kyalite, Barwon, Murrumbidgee, Lachlan, Bogan, Macquarie, Castlereagh, Namoi, Gwydir, MacIntyre, and Severn Rivers, together with the whole of their lakes, lagoons, inlets, creeks, billabongs, and tributaries, and also the whole of the inland lakes, lagoons, and billabongs, whether connected by flow or disconnected with any one of the herein-specified waters lying west of the Great Dividing Range, in the State of New South Wales.

SCHEDULE B.
The head waters of the Murray, Murrumbidgee, Namoi, Lachlan, Macquarie, Castlereagh, Gwydir, Severn, and MacIntyre Rivers, together with the whole of their tributaries.
"Head waters" shall mean and include such portions only of the waters specified in Schedule "B" as trout may be found to exist in. (1169)

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO ANYONE LOOKING FOR AN UP-TO-DATE RESIDENCE OR A SOUND LUCRATIVE INVESTMENT.

ONE OF THE BEST AND MOST MODERN RESIDENCES IN BATHURST.

THE ELMS, No. 216 Russell-street, three minutes' walk from the Post and Telegraph Offices.

CLEMENTS and M'CARTHY have received instructions from J. R. BLACKET, Esq., to sell by auction at THE ROYAL HOTEL, BATHURST, on SATURDAY, 23rd OCTOBER, at 3 o'clock,

The above-named well-known Gentleman's Residence, THE ELMS is a faithfully built two-storied House, containing 9 rooms, large and lofty, exclusive of halls, kitchen, laundry, scullery, maid's room, bathroom, office, wide verandah and balcony front and back.

The land has a frontage of 99 feet to RUSSELL-STREET by a good depth. Tastefully laid out in a flower garden, lawn, fowl run, stables, etc.

The only reason for this magnificent Residential Property coming into the market is that Mr. Blacket has decided to remove his family permanently to Sydney. A grand opportunity is therefore afforded to anyone requiring a comfortable up-to-date home or a safe lucrative investment for trust or other funds.

LIBERAL TERMS CAN BE ARRANGED.

FAULCONBRIDGE.

A FEW CHOICE LOTS IN THE PINES ESTATE,

STILL LEFT.

Were you prevented from attending the great auction sale there on Saturday last? Did you miss the chance of securing a Lot in the first Estate to be made available in this promising Mountain Town?
IT IS NOT YET TOO LATE.
There are still a few excellent Lots unsold, and, though they are not likely to remain available for long, you may still become the owner of a Block in this newly-awakened district, where land values are rapidly increasing.
THE PINES ESTATE
was the first land to be thrown open right at this beautiful Mountain Station (just beyond Springwood), and is positively the last chance you will have of securing such first-class land, RIGHT AT A RAILWAY STATION anywhere on the mountains.
Land at Katoomba Station
NOW WORTH AS MUCH AS £70 OR £80 A FOOT.
When first made available, sold for hardly as many shillings.
And Faulconbridge offers Greater Advantages than Katoomba, being Nearer Sydney.
And the present prices (but not for long) are from 15/ to 50/ per foot.
TERMS: £1 deposit, and 10/ monthly for each £30.
A good train service, a beautiful climate, and glorious views. Chosen by Sir Henry Parkes, when he might have chosen any spot on the Mountains, in preference to all others.
Call in or write for plan and all other information.
Our Representative will be on the Estate this afternoon, and will glady show intending purchasers round.

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.

What Germany wants—Plots in America—A Missed Opportunity—Sir John Jellicoe—A Belated Despatch—Frederick the Great and Emperor Wilhelm.

WESTMINSTER, Aug. 21.

Keen interest has been excited both in France and this country by the publication of the text of a secret memorandum addressed to the Imperial Chancellor by the six most important economic organisations of Germany. It discloses with uncompromising frankness, the aspirations of the Junker party in connection with the war. In brief, the Chancellor is told that Germany must appropriate Belgium, make an end of France, dismember Russia, strike over the Balkans to Constantinople, and confiscate all mines, industries, and other desirable possessions which may be found on the conquered territory. There is nothing novel in this disclosure of the object of the war for which Germany has made long and costly preparation. Last year the Emperor's birthday was celebrated by a remarkable incident. The Military Government at Lodz prepared and officially published as a birthday present to the Emperor, what was styled the "Journal of the Eastern Army." A specially printed, luxuriously bound copy was presented to the Emperor, who graciously accepted it.

Some extracts appeared in the German papers which struck me as being worth filing for future reference. With German South Africa annexed to its neighbour, a British colony, the moment seems opportune for reproducing one passage from this sublimely audacious screed—"A victorious war," it said, "will create for us a German colonial empire by the annexation of Belgian and French Congo, and if Portugal should transform into action her hostile attitude towards us, the Portuguese colonies in the east and west coasts of Africa as well. . . . Between Egypt and East Africa, and the Anglo-Boer South Africa (which to-day are still English) there will then lie the unending girdle of our gigantic colonial possessions, from the Indian Ocean to the Central African Lakes, and the Congo to the Atlantic. Of North-east and South Africa we say that these to-day are still English; but who knows what will happen." We all know what has happened. It is scarcely in accordance with this forecast.

Another newspaper disclosure that has created something of a sensation in both countries is the discovery by a New York journal of an elaborate propaganda against American industries and labour, a scheme partly based upon attempt to "nobble" the American press, and to influence public opinion in that country, by the publication of books and pamphlets. In this last device I happen to have some slight personal concern. Under the auspices of the agency of this conspiracy, a book was published, purporting to give what was called the verdict of twelve British jurymen upon the deadly quarrel between Germany and this country. Needless to say that the jury unanimously arrived at a verdict condemning England and justifying Germany. It illustrates the lavish bestowal of labour and cost upon these little manoeuvres, that a copy of the work was posted to every member of both Houses of Parliament.

Many showed their copies to me, and I discovered that of all innocent persons, prominent place was allotted to me in this jury-box made in Germany. Some time ago I mentioned in this column the fact that immediately after the outbreak of war Lord Fisher, not yet returned to his old post at the Admiralty, wrote to me extolling the prompt action of Winston Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, in despatching the Fleet to the station in the North Sea, where it has since remained on guard over the German Grand Fleet ignominiously skulking in safe home waters. A newsagency cabled the paragraph to New York, where it was widely quoted, and editorially commented upon. The ingenious German mind found in it evidence of the indictment, ludicrous in presence of admitted fact, that it was Britain who perfidiously prepared for war, and forced it down the throat of innocent, peace-loving Germany. Hence my appearance in the jury box.

The Emperor and his naval chum, Von Tirpitz, must have had a bad quarter-hour when they learned that the Prime Minister and the Chancellor of the Exchequer had paid a week-end visit to the Fleet in the North Sea, passed an interesting time on board the Admiral's flagship, and returned safely to Downing-street. What a chance lost for submarines and floating mines! The blowing up of the Lusitania and the murder of over a thousand civilian men, women, and children, sent through Germany a glow of rapturous satisfaction, and did something to soothe the breast of the Emperor troubled with memories of Louvain. I fancy he and his people, had they enjoyed opportunity of barter, would rather have blown up Mr. Asquith and Mr. M'Kenna.

In welcoming the Chancellor of the Exchequer on board his flagship, Sir John Jellicoe greeted an old friend. It was at Mr. McKenna's table at Admiralty House, I first met the man who in command of an incomparable British Fleet has vindicated afresh Britain's command of the sea. He at that time held the comparatively obscure position of a Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty. A constitutionally quiet-mannered man, reticent in speech, he took little part in the conversation at the table. I confess I had never before even heard his name spoken or written about. When, with characteristic assiduity, he left the luncheon table early to get back to his work, I asked the First Lord to tell me something about him. "If," Mr. M'Kenna answered, "at no distant time we find ourselves at war, Jellicoe will be placed in supreme command of the fleet, and will make for himself a name as renowned as Nelson's."

On the 25th and 26th of April last the British navy added a laurel to a wreath of far-reaching renown by taking a leading part in the landing of the Expeditionary Force under Sir Ian Hamilton, on the Gallipoli Peninsula. Scraps of news from a special correspondent aroused throughout the nation a feeling of pride in its gallant tars, saddened by reflection on the sacrifices of life demanded for the superb achievement. More than two months after the event, on the 1st July, the Admiral in command of the fleet, sat down to write a detailed narrative of the historic event, with a long list of officers and men recommended for decoration or promotion. This would reach the Admiralty within a week or ten days. It would seem natural that, with desire to make up for the, perhaps, necessary delay in the Admiral's report, it would have forthwith been communicated to the public. This step was not accomplished till Monday last, a further delay of something like six weeks. Thus a period of nearly four months elapsed before the public were fully informed of the historic event.

One hundred and twenty-nine years ago last Tuesday Frederick the Great died. In a well-known passage Macaulay wrote:—"On the head of Frederick is all the blood which was shed in a war which raged during many years, and in every quarter of the globe—the blood of the column of Fontenoy, the blood of the brave mountaineers who were slaughtered at Culloden. The evils produced by his wickedness were felt in lands where the name of Prussia was unknown; and in order that he might rob a neighbour whom he had promised to defend, black men fought on the coast of Coromandel, and red men scalped each other by the great lakes of North America."

With the substitution of proper names, this scathing denunciation is applicable with striking precision to Frederick's successor to-day on the throne of Prussia. On the head of the Emperor Wilhelm is all the blood shed in a war which, for more than a year, has raged in various quarters of the globe—the blood of the columns retreating upon Paris, and fighting their way back from the Marne to Flanders and Alsace; the blood of the brave Russians slaughtered round Warsaw. "In order that he might rob a neighbour whom he had promised to defend," Boers have fought on the plains of South-west Africa, and Arabs, emerging from the desert, have been mown down by machine-guns on approaching the great waterway by Suez.

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

Notes on Coming Fashions.

LOWESTOFT (NORFOLK), Aug. 25.

I cannot write a "fashion" section for this letter, because, save for seaside and in the smarter county sets of social life, there is practically no change. I see the same white skirts, the silk sports coat in beautiful tints, neat small hats, white shoes and stockings. As a seaside resort poor Lowestoft is not itself. And the people who usually spend several weeks on this lovely coast have gone Ireland.

From what I can gather, both coats and skirts will keep the fuller outline to which we are accustomed. The coats have deeper basques fluted to allow of skirt fulness. Many skirts are put on to deep yokes, which fit closely round the hips. These are very neat, and give some credit to a good figure. The waists, at any rate, of tailor-made costumes are just on the normal line. Coats are much belted—that is to say, the belt appears somewhere. In some coats it comes from the side seams, passed under the flowing back, which is very fashionable. Here I pause to remark that coats belted in front with flowing backs are very much liked by middle-aged women whose figures have lost line over the hips and spine as the years have encroached upon contours which were perfect in their day.

So many women dislike capes and wraps—witness our old friend the Dolman, in which one was actually "trussed." It was thought becoming to women of mature years, but we renegades in our sixties prefer to have our arms free; hence the success of coats of all kinds. Many of the new models button right up to the neck, and are finished with a high neckband. Pockets are placed on everything—on the skirts of dresses, on coats, as breast pockets on blouses; in fact, everywhere. They have come in, as a kind of compliment to the service tunic worn by officers, who all have a big pocket on the skirt of the tunic. All silk gowns are made very full, often gathered with a heading on to the already eased upper part of the skirt. Blouses to match in colour are of ninon with facings and cuffs of silk. Taffetas is the favourite material for such gowns; there is a tremendous run on it. But silk of all kinds is immensely worn. Tailors have taken it up, and turn out smart coats and skirts in a thick make of dull grosgrain. For the innumerable black costumes that are entailed on us through this war good black silk is one of the safest investments.

Sleeves are nearly always set with a wide armhole, with shoulder pieces, into which comes the fulness of the fronts. Transparent sleeves to the wrist, where they are ruffled, seem to be a perfect uniform. The elbow sleeve, except for an evening gown, is hardly seen. Even with evening bodices, the sleeve, per se, is merely a loop of draped chiffon tulle or net to match the evening bodice, which is draped from a point on the shoulder, coming together at the waist. There may be a thin covering of tulle at the right height, for discretion, if the bodice is kept open to the waist. Gloves, of course, are much shorter. We are faced with a great scarcity of kid gloves, and until we can manufacture the "fabric" for the suede finished cotton glove I fear we shall not be "bien gantee."

One of the reversions of fashion is the waterfall back. They are put on at the backs of many kinds of gowns—made full and worn hanging loosely. This is quite a good way of renovating a skirt which is a little too narrow for the present fashion. You make your "waterfall" of silk, for a soft woollen gown, or of net lace, ninon, or any material you wish. The edges should be fully ruched. They look well when worn under a coat with the flyaway back.

The hats of autumn are more or less wrapped in mystery, but one gathers they will be small, with exceedingly high crowns, with towering loops of ribbon or great torsades of flowers carried out in silk and velvet.

Much will depend upon the way the war goes. A winter in the trenches will still further depress our spirits, while the ever increasing cost of food, will narrow the spending power of people with ordinary incomes. Still, the news is that our line in Flanders has been widened, and that munitions of war are adequate. There remains the stern task in the Dardanelles, which is taking a heavy toll from the Australian and New Zealand troops—too sad a number of those stalwart sons of yours have lain down, crowned for valour, alas! thus early has the crown been won. As I finish, looking across on to the North Sea, a great white hospital ship has just steamed majestically out of sight. Another cargo of suffering souls on their way to treatment in our hospitals.

The tale is unending. One needs all one's fortitude to bear the sight of the wounds for which these men have fought so finely in defence of our king, our country, and ourselves.

BRITONS YET.

LOYAL WELSH PATAGONIANS.

It is not generally known that there exists in the wilds of Patagonia a Welsh settlement of some 5000 souls. The idea of the settlement was first conceived by the Rev. M. D. Jones, a Welsh clergyman, who had observed during a visit to the United States that his countrymen in the new land speedily lost their national characteristics, their religion, and language. A colony large enough to continue the old traditions, to keep alive the Welsh tongue, the Welsh faith, and the Welsh institutions, was only possible in a country such as Patagonia, which was sparsely settled, and in which they could practically govern themselves. Accordingly in 1865 a ship was chartered and left Wales with 153 families on board. In July of that year they landed at what was afterwards called Port Madryn—from Madryn Parry, one of the directors of the expedition, who subsequently became a member of the English House of Commons. From that point they had a journey of 40 miles through the great Shingle Desert to their new home. They were without firearms, without a tent or shelter of any kind, and without horses or other means of conveyance. But for the good offices of the Indians (who, by the way, were in stature a great contrast to the diminutive Welsh) they would have perished, and it was only after the most incredible hardships that they won through. On this journey a girl child was born, who in the person of Mrs. Davies survives to-day. The spot is still known as "Bryn Mari" (Mary's Hill). At first, owing to their ignorance of the country and their lack of implements, the settlement was a failure, and on two occasions the British Government were compelled to come to their rescue with shipments of food and stores. But the spirit of the pioneer was strong within them, and over these and greater difficulties they triumphed until they are to-day a prosperous community. The original settlers and their descendants still cling to the Welsh tongue, though with the fine adaptability of the Celt they speak also Spanish and Italian as common languages. Very few of them speak English, due to the fact that when the original settlers left Wales little English was spoken in the principality. In his account of the Swedish expedition to Patagonia Dr. Carl Skottsberg describes the "Valle 16 de Octubre"—an offshoot of the original Welsh settlement—in the following terms:—

"Shut in by magnificent mountain chains, this valley is a real gem, green with vast meadows, wheat fields, and clover fields, adorned by nice country houses, where fruit trees and berry bushes, cauliflower and lettuce were a delight to behold. We became quite homesick when we rode through. At the school house we stopped; the children are taught in Welsh."

This is probably the only school in the world where children are taught solely in Welsh.

Two newspapers are published (in Welsh) in the settlement, and a recent copy of one, "Y Drafod," to hand bears evidence that these Welshmen, although governed by the Argentine Republic, are Britons to the core. A subscription list was opened by this paper on behalf of the British soldiers and families, to which a ready response was made. Accounts are also published giving the experiences of a number of local men, who, despite the disadvantages in the matter of transport, each having to pay his own passage, are at the front fighting for freedom's cause.

HOPES AND FEARS.

LONG VIEWS AND SHORT MEMORIES.

(BY ARTHUR MASON.)

LONDON, Aug. 19.

In general, the mood of London in this beginning of a second year of war resembles the temperature record of any normal week of London's summer. Our summer thermometer, though it is never quite still, so seldom varies more than a few degrees above and below a mean centre of moderate warmth, that only rarely, and by way of phenomenon, does sudden violent change disturb the placid uniformity of our habitual days. That also is the way of our present outlook upon the angry world. We blow neither hot nor cold. We are rarely more than calm, and we are never less than temperate. We watch the war without excitement. Before us moves an unceasing daily procession of momentous events, but we are only faintly stirred from our normal. For one thing, we understand no more than a fractional part of the immense detail of war, and, for another thing, the sum and substance of that detail is become our customary surrounding.

The war, that is to say, once an astonishment and almost incredible, is so no longer. Its breadth and reach across the whole area of Europe, its multitude of battles, its interminable incident, its prodigious activity in a thousand directions, long since eluded even our best effort to keep pace with them. But, more than that, our familiarity with the war begins so to cloud our vision that we have come to look upon it and all its revolutionary raging about the world as part and parcel of our appointed scheme of things. Therefore, is it that reading our scraps of news we forget, as soon as we have read them all, but their outstanding features, and we remember those only because to be outstanding, nowadays, they must be impressive enough to pierce the surface of our so hardened consciousness as to be burnt deeply in upon us.

With the war thus familiar and ordinary about us, and its intensity of attack upon our habits accepted and accommodated until it is blunted and ineffective, it is perhaps inevitable that we should be as we are—undemonstrative, coolly aloof, troubled in some regards, no doubt, but for the most part satisfied that matters go sufficiently well with us. Now and again, it is true, a disaster depresses us into shivers of apprehension, but we never have long to wait for an achievement that will swing us back to normal. Indeed, we are coming to take even achievements and disasters calmly, for both alike, by grace of the press censorship, are set before us so vaguely, and, therefore, so unimpressively, that to focus them at their real stature we should need to be the highly imaginative people we certainly are not. And if that is so with its great events, how should we be disturbed by the countless details of war, details that beat upon us with the ceaselessness and the regularity of waves upon an ocean beach?

People come occasionally from Paris who express themselves as amazed by this spectacle of a still unruffled London. They forget, or are not aware of, several facts concerning these English. They forget their traditional four-square stubborn strength of mind. They forget their lack of the imaginative faculty. They forget that by comparison with Paris, London is merely touched, so far, by the finger-tips of war, and that its business and its amusements, and millions of its men and its women, are still free of the throttling grip of war's iron hand. Nevertheless, and when one has allowed this unimaginativeness and this stoicism as part of the British genius, one still can marvel at the strength of their resistance to the alarums and excursions of a war that exceeds any experience the world has ever known. And when you agree, as you must agree when you have studied them a little, that the apparent insensibility of these English is no more than a mask behind which they feel, and feel deeply, still you are amazed at them; still you are conscious than even the worst terror of this thing in the midst of which they live passes them by, is ignored by them, or is accepted as, if somewhat uncomfortable and unpleasant, only, after all, what was to be expected.

Everything, too, has conspired so far to nourish the British habit of stoical calm. The actual noise of war is still outside Great Britain, or is only faintly heard in occasional muffled thunders on the Channel. The soldiers of Britain have died by the thousand, but on foreign fields. Britons read with sympathy of the havoc of Belgium and Northern France, but they read of it in the towns and villages of a Britain which from one end to the other is a smiling garden wrapped in the peace and comfort of summer calm. And if they have no more than a dim and flickering sense of the reality of the things that have happened even so close to them, the agony of Poland and the heroic struggles of the Russian armies are little more than the grim rumour of far-off things and wholly incomprehensible names. And all this is so chiefly for the reasons suggested, first that the publicity of war has, by official decree, been reduced to the fine art of presenting the incidents of war in the vaguest and most shadowy terms, and second, that those incidents have been so many, and are so increasing, that the contempt of familiarity is heavy upon them.

So, for other example, our latest total of casualties—330,000—though a total unparalleled in our history, and one which, not many months ago, would have been dismissed as an incredible possibility, was received with no more than a word of remark. Our almost daily casualty lists since that total, go unread save by those who have anxious enough reason to read them. Our meagre despatches from headquarters, and the entirely second-hand articles of most of our war correspondents, are read, if at all, only languidly. The millions of London—and of England—go about their daily business untroubled, apparently, either by news of disaster or news of victory. They take the placards of the newspapers in their stride. A dramatic event holds their interest momentarily. The more usual commonplace—its headlines promising much and meaning nothing—is quickly scanned and as quickly forgotten. The Lusitania tragedy was crowded out in a week. The Royal Edward tragedy, with its thousand soldier-souls torpedoed into the darkness, scarcely so much as stopped a laugh on Regent-street or the Strand. The Arabic horror lives a day or two for the sake of its bearing upon the problem of America.

All the reverses together, in truth, have had no greater effect than that of sobering us somewhat from our first sportive war enthusiasms. There has arisen among us a sectional press campaign in favour of compulsory service. For support of its cause this section of the press is enlarging upon the unfavourable facts of the campaign, and urging upon Britons the peril of their position. Britons refuse to be impressed. They make no sign one way or another. They are calm under voluntary service. They will be as calm under compulsion, if it should ever come. They are more than calm under the warning of Britain's peril—they do not believe in it. They believe less and less, indeed, in what the strangled press urges them to believe. They believe only this, really—that Britain and her Allies cannot fail to win the war. They know, these British who have only the vaguest notion of half the facts of the position, and no notion at all of the other half, that victory is assured—and that is one other reason, perhaps the chief reason of all, why, in the midst of the chaotic upheaval of Europe, the British people is wholly calm and almost wholly satisfied.

LEMNOS HOSPITAL.

Trooper T. V. Roberts, who is with the Fiji contingent at the Dardanelles, praises the arrangements at the Australian Hospital at Lemnos in a letter to his sister, Miss Roberts, of The Eirie, North Sydney.

"We are all most thankful to arrive here and find ourselves in an Australian hospital," he writes. "It is just great, and the attendance is amazing. I know comparisons are odious, and I shall not compare it with the R.A.M.C. hospital I was in last. It is astonishing how the staff have managed, considering they only arrived here on the day we started fighting—one day before the wounded started to pour in in their hundreds. The staff work day and night. Men have won V.C.'s on the battlefield. Many of this staff merit at least D.S.O.'s.

IN THE SHADOW.

AN AIR RAID DESCRIBED.

(BY W. GORDON SPRIGG, F.R.G.S.)

It was the second air raid in the same district within the space of five days, and a third raid was promised before the week ended. The clock was pointing almost to the hour of 10 at night. The ladies and children, just a dozen of them, had all retired. I was sitting alone, reading in the front room of a seaside bungalow, situated facing the North Sea at a quiet watering-place "somewhere on the East Coast," whence could be seen in the daytime rising out of the water the masts of a merchantman recently torpedoed by a German submarine. Suddenly there came a loud and authoritative knock at the front door of the house, accompanied by the command, "All lights out at once, please." I immediately went out and faced a khaki-clad member of the regiment stationed at this particular resort, and questioned him as to the why and wherefore of this order. "Zeppelines sighted," came the laconic reply. "Have the lights out immediately." Fortunately, the children were already asleep, and most of the ladies were almost ready to keep the children company, when I went round the house and imparted the unsettling intelligence, having the whole place in darkness within the space of a few minutes. Military regulations and orders brook of no delay. "Those lights out there," was very soon shouted from the roadway by the soldiers if any one showed dilatoriness. "I'd have every one taken out and shot at dawn who disobeyed orders," said one would-be commander-in-chief.

Our building, having conformed to military regulations, I then went outside to the front, when a voice called out, "Hullo, there." Having acknowledged the summons, a non-commissioned officer said, "Do you want to see the Zeppelins?" "That's what I am out for," I replied. Coming close up to me he pointed straight ahead of where we were standing, and there, fairly high up, and advancing in almost a direct line towards the house, was to be seen one of these great German airships, sailing steadily onwards in quest of its murderous mission, swaying slightly to and fro like a vessel crossing the ocean in a somewhat heavy sea swell. The night being rather cloudy, the "Zepp." would be lost to view now and again, but the headlight would soon be distinguished, and the outline of the huge monster of destruction would be observable once more.

A little later all the ladies assembled outside, leaving the children in the house undisturbed, and some of the military police coming up at this moment, the conversation generally became more interesting as the story of Zeppelin exploits was recounted by one and another. All the time the air monsters, for there were several of them, were getting nearer, and later on we could hear the throb and the whirr of the engine, and when the clouds obscured the Zeppelins the situation became more exciting, it being impossible to determine which course the airships were making.

I have been in some peculiar places and in unenviable corners at various times, was right through the Anglo-Boer campaign, have travelled up and down thousands of miles of lines of communication, been in and out of numerous blockhouses on the veldt, guarding river bridges and off the beaten track, carried my life in my hands for periods together; but have never before experienced such an uncanny sensation as that gone through on the East Coast of England last week. It is practically a case of meekly waiting to be killed, there is no opportunity for putting up a fight, no chance for defence, no immunity from danger. The risk indoors is as great as that outside the house. In London non-combatants are warned to make for the basements, to get under cover, in the event of an air raid, but at this place there are no basements. Nothing could be done to protect the lives of the members of one's family. We just watch, we wait, we hope, and we pray.

Closer and more distinctly can be heard the frightful whirr of the airship's engine overhead, the clouds now obscure the sinuous devilish machine, we anxiously watch the heavens whilst we hear the dread sound of exploding bombs as the raiders drop their agents of destruction on some neighbouring place, and wonder whether it will be our turn next. "They are busy to-night." "Listen to that." "There goes another," remark the military police, as bomb after bomb explodes. "Well, we can only die once," is the attempt at a message of comfort which a corporal hazards as he stands by our side. The mothers in our midst have everything in readiness for the children, who are sleeping quite unconscious of the great risk so close at hand. Blankets, coats, and other coverings are prepared in the event of the order coming from military headquarters to "leave the houses and take to the fields." This period of uncertainty is more than trying. The tension is great, the strain is severe, the whole experience is nerve racking and exhausting, and yet there is not the slightest indication of anything approaching a panic. We move about from point to point anxious to get a glimpse of the air monsters each time the clouds permit. We are being spared the torture of others not far distant, for we hear the repeated reports of exploding bombs and a little later we breathe more freely as we learn that the raiders have passed overhead and that immediate danger is past. "Well, good night," our military protectors call out as they move off. "We will come back and give you warning if they get any closer," and as we are feeling somewhat weary in consequence of our vigil, at midnight the ladies go to bed. A little later I went indoors, and at 3.30 o'clock, just as the dawn was beginning to break, I undressed and turned in, after having heard, but not seen, for a heavy mist and cloud-bank arose later, the raiders' return seawards.

A few hours later we witnessed the results of this mission of death and destruction as seen in one of the east coast towns, where the raiders centre most of their efforts. Beholding the havoc of the German bombs, I asked one of the sufferers how long it took to bring about such a smash up. "All done in an instant," he replied. "I was outside last night watching the raiders as they came closer and closer; they were flying fairly low down, but I thought we were safe, so I went indoors. I had scarcely got inside the dining-room when the whole house seemed to come down about my ears. The ceiling came down, the doors were blown in, glass was falling everywhere, and there was confusion all round. You see what it left." "How many bombs were dropped?" I asked. "Well, there may have been two; some say there were; I can only be certain of one." And what a toll of death and suffering is left behind!

A full description of an airship's murderous work makes sorry reading. It is a terrible sight. Surely one of the worst horrors of war, because the defenceless women and children are usually the victims. Lives lost, homes gone, wreckage and misery everywhere. And all for what. Germany replies, "For moral results. England is simply a spectator in this war. We desire and demand a hard punishment for this frivolous and huckstering people. Therefore we cannot rain bombs enough on England."

VARICOSE VEINS BOOM.

One of the most popular places at lunch-time of late has been the steps of St. Paul's Cathedral, where between 1 and 2 a recruiting meeting takes place daily, with a good band in attendance. Latterly, however, eligible men have found it something of an ordeal to be present, and a walk round finds them concealed in the courts and adjacent alleys, listening to the music and the speakers. An unwary eligible on the steps was pounced upon by the recruiting sergeant, but he produced a blue paper, and the sergeant passed on (says the "Graphic"). A vigorous-looking, likely recruit was next approached. There was an animated conversation for a few seconds, and suddenly, on the steps of the ancient edifice, up went a trouser, revealing a brawny leg and varicose veins. "None of them won't believe me till I show them," remarked the likely one to the crowd in general, as he puffed away at his pipe. The recruiting sergeant says there is an epidemic of varicose veins in the city. A feminine recruiter endorsed his statement, too. On emerging from a big city house she was asked: "How many?" "None," she replied; "all the men in that building have varicose veins."

CURRENT LITERATURE.

WITH THE RED CROSS.

Amidst the multitude of books describing the work of the Red Cross, "Field Hospital and Flying Column," by Sister Violetta Thurston, possesses features of peculiar interest. The author's experiences are unique in that she has served under four of the belligerents—England, Belgium, Germany, and Russia—and this variety of service has enabled her to see the war from a different angle from most of those who have written about it.

Sister Thurston was mobilised shortly after the outbreak, and her first task was to improvise hospitals in England for the Territorials who had been called out. Then, almost at a moment's notice, she was sent to Belgium in charge of a detachment of English nurses. They reached Brussels and found it calm and a trifle incredulous. There had been little definite news, and the people refused to believe that their capital was in danger of occupation. Then, like a thunderbolt, came the report that the Germans were at the gates of the city. Those of the inhabitants who could left the city, but the great majority had to remain, and the author, with her flock, of course, stuck to her post. It is curious to note the change in the attitude of the Belgians in Brussels towards the invader. At first, though they resented his presence, they did not cherish any bitter individual animosity. They had not yet heard of Termonde and Louvain, and for a week they were on fairly good terms with the German soldiery. They took pity on the exhausted, travel-worn men, and good-naturedly supplied them with beer and food—indeed, in the author's opinion, they treated them with "almost unnecessary kindness." Then stories of German savagery filtered through, and these civilities abruptly ceased. Meanwhile, the British nurses were not idle, though their work was by no means what they had hoped for. "The Germans put in 80 soldiers with sore feet, and the glorious vision of nursing Tommy Atkins at the front faded into the prosaic reality of putting hundreds of cold compresses on German feet that they might be ready all the sooner to go out and kill our men."

The tide of invasion swept on. The author was in fact, if not in name, a prisoner of war, and she was sent to Charleroi to take charge of a German field hospital there. There had been heavy fighting, and streams of French and German wounded were coming in. Here, at any rate, the boasted German organisation had broken down, for the author found everything in an awful state of confusion. There was no adequate staff, no water supply, no linen, very little food. For days at a time the patients, severe surgical cases, had to live on potatoes and lentils. Worst of all, the commandant decreed that no windows should be open lest someone should shoot through them. Gradually the author straightened things out, though to the very end her hospital lacked a sufficiency of the most ordinary supplies. The patients were a decent lot; indeed, Sister Thurston 's loud in her admiration of the French. The Germans were grateful and well-behaved, but she adds significantly, "Mercifully we had no officers." The German doctor in charge seems to have been a particularly offensive person. When he was operating and she could not get away he would give long accounts of fictitious British disasters.

Sister Thurston was struck by the official inhumanity of the Germans. All the cases in her hospital were very bad ones, and few or none of them would ever be fit for active service again. But the Commandant would constantly issue orders that all, French and German alike, should be transferred to Germany. It was quite useless to plead that the most serious cases should remain until they were better able to stand the journey, or to point out that to move these men would inevitably kill them. The Commandant was inexorable. The worst of it was that often when, after an agony of suffering, the poor wretches had reached the railway station, they would be sent back again because no train had been provided. Men with terrible septic wounds, men who had had limbs amputated a few hours before—all had to go, and it is not surprising that a great number of them succumbed on the way. "One could not help wondering," observes the author, "what would become of our wounded if the Germans treated their own so harshly. I heard from other ambulances that it was their experience as well as mine that the very lightly wounded were very well looked after, but the severely wounded were often very inconsiderately treated. They were no longer any use as fighting machines, and only fit for the scrap heap. It is all part of the German system. They are out for one purpose only, that is to win, and they go forward with this one end in view—everything else, including the care of the wounded, is a side issue, and must be disregarded and sacrificed if necessary." This callousness to the wounded is quite in keeping with other attributes of German policy as we know it.

After a time the authorities decided that they would not make further use of British nurses and doctors, one of the reasons alleged being that they were in the habit of gouging out the eyes of wounded German soldiers! Since their services were not required, the Germans had to let them go, but appeared to be at special pains to make their departure as inconvenient as possible. They were supposed to be sent to Holland; actually they were put on a train which took them to Denmark, the idea being that they would thus provide the German citizens with a fine spectacle. Crowds lined all the platforms, "laughing at us, spitting, hissing, jeering, and making insulting remarks." Even the waiters resented having to serve the hated English. However, the most wearisome journey comes to an end, and in Denmark the author, so far from welcoming the thought of returning home, looked about her for further adventures. With three others she volunteered for service on the Eastern Front, travelled to Russia through Sweden, and round the Gulf of Bothnia, for fear of German men-of-war in the Baltic, and took up duty in a hospital in Warsaw.

Since then her experiences have been varied and exciting. She was in Lodz during the bombardment and the evacuation; she was attached to a flying motor-hospital train. She was under fire on several occasions, and was wounded by shrapnel. This book, indeed, was written during her convalescence, and she proposed to return to the front as soon as ever the doctors would let her. The work in Russia was extremely hard—so hard that her three companions collapsed under the strain—but engrossing. Her comparison of the Russian and British medical services is interesting. The Russians, she thinks, are not very up to date in this branch, and less attention is paid to details of hygiene, partly perhaps because the numbers they have to deal with and the distance from supplies handicap them severely. They are casual in some things; untrained subordinates are allowed to administer narcotics and stimulants at their own sweet will. The staffs are usually inadequate, overworked, and badly housed. Yet "for sheer selflessness and devotion they could not be surpassed." All the time the author was there "she did not hear a grumble or a complaint either from a doctor or sister, or an orderly, and she never saw a dressing slurred over, omitted, or done without the usual precautions, however tired or overworked everybody might be." There appears to be a large pervasive bonhomie in Russian hospitals, which compensates for the lack of system. At any rate, the patients were far happier and more at home in them than the Germans were in their hospitals. (Putnams: Angus and Robertson.)

TRAVEL BOOKS.

The title of "Round the World in Strange Company," by Mr. Nicholas Everitt, is quite a misnomer. In the first place, there is nothing queer about his companions; they are the ordinary variety of persons one meets when travelling. In the second place, the author did not go round the world; he went to America, crossed the continent, and returned. However, in spite of the misleading nature of the title, the book is quite readable. Mr. Everitt has an easy, breezy style, and records his impressions of America pleasantly enough with humour and shrewd observation. He had no very exciting adventures; indeed, even in the Wild West the greatest peril he encountered was that of dyspepsia, induced by the lavish hospitality of his hosts. He liked the people exceedingly, though at times he criticises national ideals and points of view in which he sees seeds of danger in the future. He fell captive to the charms of the American girl rather against his own better judgment, for he considers that her upbringing is not conducive to her happiness later in life. She is set on a pedestal by parents, brothers, and friends; every whim is indulged, with the result that long before she has reached middle-age she is both bored and tired. Such at least is the author's verdict, and he couples it with an epigram, "The American girl seldom loses her heart and never her head." American men he found for the most part delightful, and he is eloquent in his admiration for a characteristic that seems to be the birthright of every American, namely, the knack of getting up at a moment's notice and making an amusing and appropriate after-dinner speech. He even appreciates the much-derided American humour. "It has been said," he observes, "that when an Englishman fails to understand an American joke it is because he has no sense of humour; when an American cannot understand an English one it is because the joke is not funny. In my opinion this is indeed true." Which perfidious sentiment, no doubt, accounted for some of Mr. Everitt's popularity in the United States. (J. Werner Laurie.)

"A Summer on the Yenesei," by Miss Maude Haviland, is an interesting account of a journey in the remote parts of Siberia. The Yenesei is one of the great rivers of the world; it flows from the mountains south of Mongolia to the Arctic. For nine months of the year it is frozen solid, but in summer it breaks its bonds with dramatic suddenness. A hundred miles of ice, three feet thick, are shattered in a day, until the river batters its way down to the sea. The annual break-up of the waters is said to be one of the most remarkable sights in the world. The author was unfortunate enough to miss it, but she had compensations. She describes in a vivid way the great forests through which the Yenesei passes in its earlier reaches, the tundras to which the forest gives place lower down, wastes of lichen and dwarf willow, ablaze with birds. And with the summer return the human denizens of these regions, uncouth Samoyedes and Yuraks, with reindeer sledges and quaint tents made of skins. Wherever two or three of these are gathered together the enterprising geographer prints the name of a town in the map. One such place, for instance, Krestoffkala, "in type covering a space representing three hundred miles," consists merely of two huts and three tents on a shingle beach, and these are occupied for only three months out of the twelve. Miss Haviland and her companions stayed here engaged in ethnological and ornithological researches until advancing autumn warned them that it was time to go. The route they chose for their journey home was an unconventional one: they followed the Yenesei down to its estuary, took passage on a small steamer, and returned to civilisation by the stormy Kara Sea. To those who are interested in the out of the way parts of the world, the narrative of the author's experiences should appeal. (Edward Arnold.)

Mr. F. Ramakrishna is a Hindu writer of some local distinction. Not long ago he made a trip to Europe to attend the Universal Races Congress, and "My Visit to the West" is the result. The author has an excellent command of English, and his comments on British social life, politics, education, and so forth, are shrewd and readable. It is always interesting to hear the other fellow's point of view, and Mr. Ramakrishna's attempt to show us how British institutions strike an educated native is quite successful. The book possesses one odd feature. In the boat which carried the author to England were a number of members of the Federal Parliament, including some of the present Ministry. They were kind enough to give Mr. Ramakrishna a sort of testimonial which he publishes with artless pride. (Fisher Unwin.)

MR. G. B. SHAW AND THE WAR.

In the early days of the war when the leaders of British literature were unanimous in proclaiming the justice of the British cause there was a single discordant voice. It belonged to Mr. G. B. Shaw, who saw in the spontaneous arising of the nation nothing but the unreasoning stampede of a flock of peculiarly stupid sheep. In his characteristic way he resolved to put us all right, and "Commonsense About the War" was the result—a pamphlet which has been widely distributed by German propagandists in their campaigns in neutral countries. In Britain it fell rather flat, and, goaded by this unusual neglect on the part of the public, Mr. Shaw out-Shawed himself in a flood of letters to the press justifying his attitude and sneering in a superior fashion at his fellow countrymen. These, too, fell upon deaf ears, which is fatal to a controversialist of Mr. Shaw's type. He thrives on opposition, but when he is ignored he is helpless. So we have heard very little of Mr. Shaw during the last six months. In "Commonsense About the Shaw" Mr. Harold Owen revives interest in a subject which had almost been forgotten. It is an indictment of Mr. Shaw's pamphlet and an analysis of his controversial methods, and Mr. Owen has little difficulty in coming to the conclusion that Mr. Shaw as a publicist is not to be taken seriously, which, to say the least of it, is not a very novel discovery. Mr. Owen hits hard, but he is nowhere unfair. He takes the pamphlet paragraph by paragraph and exposes the shallowness and disingenuousness of the arguments used. This was scarcely worth the trouble, for in many cases the falsity of Mr. Shaw's hypotheses is so patent that refutation was unnecessary. For instance, Mr. Shaw seems to cherish the amiable delusion that militarism existed in Britain no less than in Germany, and that we wanted war and prepared for war. Facts can speak for themselves. Again, Mr. Shaw is greatly annoyed because honour and self-interest alike demanded that Britain should bear her part in the struggle, though why it should be so heinous a crime to do one's duty to one's own advantage is not made clear. However, Mr Shaw consoles himself with the reflection that Britain thought not of the moral obligation but only of the expediency! Even when by chance we blunder upon what Mr. Shaw in his wisdom decrees to be the right course he coolly informs us from his exalted aloofness that we did so from wrong motives. Mr. Owen demolishes Mr. Shaw's glittering sophistries pretty thoroughly, and his verdict on "Commonsense About the War" is, "In this Mr. Shaw has written his own epitaph, a scurrilous scribble upon the edifice of the greatest and most righteous effort of our country." But one feels that Mr. Owen has overrated the importance of the whole business. Except in Germany Mr. Shaw's views on the war made no impression on any one, and to write a book to demonstrate their perversity is to use heavy artillery to bring down a mosquito. (Allen and Unwin.)

NEW NOVELS.

Ever since Rider Haggard and Andrew Lang wrote "Phra the Phoenician" the subject of successive incarnations has been popular with novelists, and Mr. Jack London is the latest to enter the lists with "The Jacket." The story is supposed to be told by one Darrell Standing, who is serving a life sentence for murder in a Californian prison. A man of considerable force of character and intellect, he is prompt to tell the authorities what he thinks of them and their methods and is soon regarded as an incorrigible. A brutal warden sets himself to break the spirit of this rebel; one of his favourite forms of torture is to lace Standing up in a sort of canvas strait-waistcoat—"the jacket" of the title—and to leave him trussed, helpless and in agony for days at a time. On one of these occasions Standing finds that he has the power to induce a kind of cataleptic trance, in which his mind floats free, feeling nothing of the sufferings of his racked body. In this state he lives over again the experiences of a hundred pasts when his spirit inhabited another frame. These Mr. London relates in the intervals between the descriptions of the warden's campaign of persecution. They are curiously unequal in merit; where the author is writing about a period on a subject with which he is familiar, the result is excellent. Thus the story of the party of overlanders wiped out by the Mormons, and that of the castaway wrecked on a tiny Antarctic island, could hardly be bettered. But when Mr. London takes his hero to ancient Rome or Europe of the Middle Ages, he is less successful. These stories, whose actual plot is often effective enough, are spoiled by the language in which they are told. Mr. London affects an extraordinary mixture of pseudo-archaic English and modern American in a manner that is sometimes little short of ludicrous. For instance, this is how a Viking who has become a Roman legionary defines the charm of a woman to himself: "The charm of woman is wordless. It is different from perception that culminates in reason, for it arises in sensation and culminates in emotion, which, be it admitted, is nothing else than super-sensation." This is the man who later protests that he "talks with simplicity and straightness as befits a rough seafarer." For the rest the scenes in the prison give Mr. London an opportunity for "strong" writing, in which he revels, although he does not always distinguish between strength and verbosity. He would have achieved his purpose more effectively by the exercise of greater restraint. Moreover, it is hard to believe that such brutalities as he describes are permitted in any prison nowadays, and one is also inclined to take the intellectual prowess of the two recidivists in the adjacent cells with a grain of salt. These three engage in lengthy philosophical discussions by means of a code of finger-tapping, which they alter daily, and play intricate games of chess against each other by sheer visualisation. The author of "The Jacket" is not the man who wrote "The Call of the Wild" or even "The Valley of the Moon." (Mills and Boon: Dymock's.)

To those who have read the Irish stories of Miss E. Somerville and Mr. Martin Ross, "In Mr. Knox's Country" will need no commendation. Again we meet the estimable Flurry, dark and sparing in word, very definite in action, and his remarkable grandmother. Mrs. Knox is older than when we first had the pleasure of making her acquaintance, but her faculties are as acute as ever, and age cannot wither the infinite variety of her victories. She and Flurry are the only antagonists worthy of each other's steel in the district, so they have abandoned the usual convention which governs the mutual relation of grandmother and grandson, and meet on level ground as respectful adversaries. Though Flurry has the advantage of youth on his side, Mrs. Knox's tactical superiority enables her to score off him as a rule, and about the most successful effort of Flurry is to achieve a draw. However, these stories are not confined to the mutual and friendly game of diamond cut diamond between the pair. They are, as usual, told by the police magistrate, who possesses a nice wife, some enfants terribles, a sense of humour, and an eye for the "characters" in which Ireland seems to be peculiarly rich. Racing, hunting, fishing, yachting, auction sales, "regattas," mumps—these are some of the subjects of a very catholic assortment in which the plot is the merest peg for the authors to hang their description and commentary. Once we touch the fringe of tragedy, but for the most part we are given wholesome fun, and very clever fun at that. (Longman's, Green, and Co.; G. Robertson.)

Because Julian Cartmell had been deceived in his youth by one woman he jumped to the conclusion that no woman was to be trusted, and he brought up Jacqueline, his ward (who was also his unacknowledged child), upon this principle. "The Auction Mart," by Mr. Sydney Tremayne describes the effect of this training on the impulsive, unsophisticated girl. Cartmell is in the habit of delivering himself in her presence of such aphorisms as this:—"All women are bargainers. They go to the highest bidder. Every woman has her price, with one it is a pearl necklace, another a marriage license, another a coronet, another can be bought for the price of an oyster supper. You should be very expensive, Jacqueline." But Jacqueline, brought up in an atmosphere in which the word "don't" is never heard, develops her individuality in a fashion disconcerting even to her guardian. Sometimes she takes him at his word, and seems to justify his opinion of her success. And yet instinct, sharper than the veneer of lawlessness which his teaching has imposed, preserves her from the dangers which inevitably beset the path of such a one as she. Mr. Tremayne tells his story capably enough, but Jacqueline's extraordinary combination of naivete and knowledge hardly rings true. (The Bodley Head: Dymock's.)

Last year Mrs. C. S. Peel scored a notable hit with "The Hat Shop;" this year in "Mrs. Barnett, Robes," she has essayed a more ambitious flight, but has not met with quite the same success. It enforces the truth that no man can sow without reaping. There is no harm in Ivor Selincourt's disposition, but he is young and thoughtless, and eager to take all that life can offer him. He lightheartedly enters into his affair with Kitty, and though, to do him justice, he does what he can for her, the idea of marriage never enters his head. When her child is born he is in India; all efforts to trace her fail, and he thinks that she has passed out of his life for ever. Meanwhile Kitty, with the little Gladys, has a hard struggle, but, by dint of perseverance and courage, she wins through, and blossoms out as the proprietress of a fashionable dressmaking establishment. And here once more her destiny becomes intertwined with that of Ivor. He has married, but marriage has brought him nothing but bitterness. His own hopes of happiness have vanished, and the only one of his family who feels any tenderness for him is Anthea, his daughter, a neurotic, sensitive girl on the threshold of womanhood. The tragedy of her love brings the book to a close. Kitty and Gladys are the instruments of fate in saving her from disaster, but they cannot inspire her with the will to live when all that makes life worth while has gone. The earliest portion of the story, which describes the gradual rise in the fortunes of "Mrs. Barnett, Robes," is excellent, but the latter part is not very convincing. (The Bodley Head: Dymock's).

In South Africa there is apparently a law designed to protect white women in a community where the blacks far outnumber the whites, and perform most of the household duties. By protecting the few against themselves it helps to ensure the safety of the many. But Miss Mary E. Martens is struck by the anomalies of the law rather than by its justification. The plot of "A Woman of Sin" is in effect a protest against the unequal treatment meted out to the two sexes should their footsteps wander from the paths of rectitude in this respect. The infidelities of Lulu Meyer's husband are constant and notorious, though apparently not inconsistent with a genuine affection for his wife. His conception of the obligations of marriage drives his wife into the arms of an educated Zulu, whose training has made him out of sympathy with his own race, without winning him a place among the whites. Lulu's lapse bids fair to ruin her life. Friends, relations, and husband cast her off, and the bitterest drop is that those whose condemnation is most venemous are by no means in a position to cast the first stone. However, some who can view the whole affair in a just perspective, stick to her; her husband returns to her, realising that he is responsible for her faults, and the author leaves the pair, with the hint that after her imprisonment is over they will start life anew under happier auspices. The latter part of the book is frank propaganda; indeed, the final chapter describes a public meeting where various people speechify, and resolve to elect a member whose "platform" will be the repeal of the hated law. The episode on which the story is based is a very unsavoury one, but it must be admitted that Miss Martens has treated it with the utmost restraint possible for her purpose. And it does not bulk very large after all, for long before we even suspect Lulu's dereliction, we are given some excellent pictures of the best and the worst types of Boers. The strong-minded Tanta, for all her contempt for the English, is a delightful person, and an admirable piece of work. The author's name is new to us, but her first effort, if it be her first, contains a great deal of promise. It is to be hoped that in its successors she will be content to exploit the rich vein, which her Tanta's and her Meyers (Philip, Andries, and all the rest of the clan) afford her, without having recourse to what is at best a squalid business. (Elliott Stock.)

The only way a pill can work is by helping the system to do the work it wants to do. Helping, not whipping. Cockle's Pills are gently helpful.—Advt.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Musicians who were at first inclined to wonder why the first director of the State Conservatorium should arrive here six months before the actual opening (February) of the institution, are beginning to realise that such a complicated business could not possibly be started in less time. Mr. Henri Verbrugghen is taking in hand a mass of important details one by one. He recognises the necessity for providing for the education of church organists and choir-masters, since upon their taste and knowledge largely depends the cultivation of city and provincial congregations. He has accordingly advised the council to instal a good, but not large, organ. The question of furnishing the main concert hall in this regard can stand over for a time. The actual class-work cannot thus be set aside. Mr. Verbrugghen has, therefore, decided upon a minor concert hall for students' concerts, lectures, and ensemble-rehearsals in which a small practice organ will be erected. For this purpose the director proposes to use a long and lofty oblong room, splendidly lighted by large windows looking across Government House grounds. An adjoining room of smaller dimensions, and not so well lighted, can be thrown into it, and by a simple system of gradually-rising tiers of seats, from 120 to 140 people can thus be accommodated. The chorus-master, standing on a low rostrum, would face the tiers of students forming his choir, and would have them conveniently under control. Mr. Verbrugghen found that the design included five main entrances with unusually spacious vestibules. He has reclaimed two of these, amounting to about 1400 superficial feet, in order to provide for his own teaching-room for special classes and a general reading-room for students in connection with the library. This has been done without interfering with or reducing the number of teaching-rooms already provided. In fact, he feels that things are taking definite shape on lines suggested by his Continental experiences, and is hopefully confident of success. Next Thursday he will leave for Melbourne to examine the Conservatorium there, to interview applicants for employment upon the Sydney staff, and to give two classic concerts at the Athenaeum Hall with Mr. Edward Goll. The council will publicly introduce Mr. Verbrugghen to Sydney music-lovers at an orchestral concert, which he will conduct at the Town Hall on Saturday afternoon, November 6—a little later than at first proposed. The first half of the programme will be confined to Beethoven, the "Egmont" overture, an excerpt from "Prometheus" not yet heard here, and the "C Minor Symphony," directed by him with the London Symphony Orchestra at Queen's Hall both last year and this. There will also be the "Lohengrin" prelude and entr'acte, the prelude to Elgar's "Gerontius," a dainty piece for strings by Bizet, and Tschaikowsky's famous "Overture 1812."

Miss Margaret Edson, a Sydney pianist of talent, whose style is marked by scholarly refinement, writes from London that she hopes to leave that fascinating city with Miss Ethel Liggins, so as to reach home before Christmas, after more than two years' absence. Not long ago this artist accompanied Miss Liggins (contralto) at a concert arranged by Miss Natalie Rosenwax to cheer up the Australian wounded at Harefield Court. All the artists were Australian, and the soldiers seemed to enjoy their efforts immensely, twice as well as if they had been strangers, even of the starriest, from London! "In turn our heroes held us spellbound afterwards with their tales of what they had been through at Gallipoli, and the half-hour at these bedsides was precious. "The London musical world has been very slack, as you may imagine. Mr. Isidore de Lara's fine efforts in organising concerts for English artists and composers literally by the dozen have relieved distress. We have him also to thank for a knowledge of the works of Dr. Ethel Smythe, and Eugene Goossens. Vladimir de Pachmann, the great Chopin pianist, who gave only one recital, keeps two or three attendants busy either fetching his music or taking away the music stool, and everyone is pleased, just because it is Pachmann. He is a quaint little old figure, with his long, straight grey hair, and with it all, one must always feel grateful to him for his Chopin playing. Dalcroze, who had a fine school of music in Dresden, lost everything when the war broke out, and fled to England. He now has the London School of Dalcroze Eurythmics and I found his annual demonstration an extremely interesting affair, and beautiful, too. I feel I must take a course, if only to see what it feels like to walk in four-time, and clap three-time, and nod two-time, all at the same time!"

"Nobody's Widow," a new American comedy drama, to be produced at the Melbourne Theatre Royal to-night, will bring forward Muriel Starr as Roxana Clayton. This self-reliant American girl, whilst travelling abroad, hurriedly marries the Duke of Moreland (Chas. A. Millward), abruptly leaves him on seeing him kiss another woman, and returns alone to Palm Beach, Florida, with the news that her husband "Mr. Clayton," died suddenly of "enlargement of the heart." She appears dressed in widow's weeds, at the home of her friend, Betty Jackson (Grace Palotta), who also has the Duke of Moreland on her visiting list. The tangle begins when the Duke, who is madly in love with his wife, is angled for by Betty, who is fond of this sort of sport, and is persuaded to attend a little midnight supper with Betty. Of course, they are discovered by the indignant Roxana, and the exhilarating interest is maintained till the end. Frank Harcourt, "the man who (formerly) stayed at home," has now joined this cast as Peter.

Miss Eleanor Carrara, a granddaughter of Mrs. Kingsmill-Shaw, the well-known teacher of singing here, and erstwhile contralto, has now been for three years on the operatic stage of Italy, where she resides with her mother at Milan. Nellie Carrara has paid more than one visit to Sydney, as she lived here for a time in her childhood, returned again to Milan, and then revisited her grandmother for six months, when about 17 years of age, making many friends in musical circles. Her highly successful debut, after long study under Signora Ricci, was at Vignolia, in the role of Amelia ("Un Ballo in Maschera.") At the end of July Miss Carrara was at an open-air patriotic concert in Milan, at which Signor Toscanini conducted an orchestra of 400 and a choir of 1500. Many artists took part, and the "Hymn of Nations," "God Save the King" (in honour of England), and Garibaldi's Hymn, were all rendered. Toscanini at that point directing the vast audience of 50,000 people. This magnificent function closed with a popular street song, just now all the rage in Italy—and a very good song too. The refrain runs, "Abbasso l'Austria, e la Germania, e la Turchia in compagnia"—"Down with Austria, Germany, and Turkey in company." So mote it be.

In the seventies, when the late John Bennett directed the fortunes of the Theatre Royal, and Manager George Coppin, with Hennings, the scenic artist, and Dick Stewart, sen., were names to conjure with, there rose to fame a beautiful actress, Eleanor Carey. This artist subsequently won distinction in America, and till the day of her death, on May 1 last, maintained her hold on the affections of the public as grande dame. Australian playgoers of the older generation will hear with great regret the passing hence of a good and charming personality.

Mr. Allen Doone since leaving Sydney has enjoyed a prosperous tour of New Zealand, and is now meeting with similar success in Brisbane. His principal news is that on October 30 he will open at the King's Theatre, Melbourne, with a new military drama, entitled "O'Leary, V.C." Strange to say, this new play, of which Mr. Doone has the sole rights for this side of the world, is written by an American, Theo. Burt Sayre. This is the same dramatist who was responsible for "The Wearing of the Green" and other pieces.

Geo. M. Cohan lately specially wrote a new play for Fred Niblo's re-appearance in New York on his return from Australia, entitled "Hit-the-trail Holiday." A cable received by the J. C. Williamson management announces Mr. Niblo's great success in the production of the comedy on Broadway. Mr. Niblo plays the title role, that of a temperance lecturer and an erstwhile bar-tender, based on the celebrated Billy Sunday.

It is not generally known that Sidney Stirling, that fine all-round actor with the Muriel Starr company, is a brother of Ernest Shand, the comedian who appeared with Ada Reeve and Bert Gilbert in "The Gay Parisienne" and "The French Maid" in Australia years ago. Shand is now a headliner in vaudeville, and is at present appearing at the big London music halls.

JAMBEROO AND MINNAMURRA.

(BY J.B.)

To the initiated these are names of fadeless charm. As they are read by any of the fortunate elect, the great artist memory will paint for such a pure vision of delight. The wonder is that those who have made this particular "dowry of the raptured eye" their own, are comparatively so few. The enchanted ground lies an easy drive inland from Kiama, that picturesquely-placed, ozone-charged, slumbrous South Coast town. Taking the old coach road, and climbing the winding ascent of Spring Hill, on looking back between green, rounded knolls and dark quarried cliffs one gets a glimpse of headland, and ocean, and sky-line dying away into infinite space. Then southward rises Saddleback Mountain, strong and commanding, with its double peaks and long intervening hollowed ridge between, a veritable seat of the mighty fitly named. One should gain the top of its scarped watershed another day, for it commands north and south easily 50 capes and bays and a hundred hills and valleys, to say nothing of the vasty Pacific. Right ahead, dominating the banking foothills, lie the sheer ramparts of the Wingecarribee Range, too far off to frown, empurpled in faintest transparent haze, and toned to innumerable elusive tints. The curve of the range yields no jot of its height, and breaks down in no pass through its solid barrier front, until, sweeping far round, it comes seaward again. It makes half of a mighty amphitheatre wall, with the vale of Jamberoo as its undulating floor. This delectable valley sinks by unequal gradations marked by patches of bush-land, left as shelter for cattle from winter winds and summer heat, and ribbed by shadowy gullies, down which tumbling little streams find their rapid descent. Some tracts happily exposed stand dressed in living green, and around isolated farmsteads orchards break out just now in cream, and white, and pink, tinged with sapphire. It is not fitting to call the green expanses divided up by dark stone walls, paddocks; these verdant, irregular patches, in which well-contented cattle graze or stretch at ease, chewing the cud reflectively, the famous Illawarra herds, are, for their carpeted succulence, fields; and some of them in the damp and fertile hollows are lush and knee-deep enough to be fairly called meadows, and nothing less. By the creeks willows are in their first vivid leafage. The coral-tree is conspicuous in the landscape, with its touch of fire, and in contrast with it cabbage-tree palms stand tall and slender, and now somewhat forlorn, dotted at intervals over the slopes. But they are the remnant of an army, surviving their fellows, slaughtered by the woodman's axe long ago. One by one they fall, and they will have no successors; each winter's storm reduces the number. The wide-stretched country side, dimpling into hollows, and swelling into hills, and climbing up the mountain sides, mingles with the unconquerable strength of nature a gentle subjugation under the hand of man, by which she gains the contrasted beauty of culture and restraint. The village of Jamberoo, after a common-place entrance, takes a charming turn, where two roads break off to ascend the hills again; and here embowered in trees stand the four churches of the little place, all decently built of stone, while by inverse ratio the inhabitants find that their wants in another direction demand no more than one hotel. The Minnamurra River flows close by. Is this poetic name, so reminiscent of Longfellow's North American Minnehaha, a bit of pure Australian aboriginal nomenclature? It suits well this pleasant murmuring stream, which, however, can become torrential when unduly charged by the rains of the highlands. At ordinary times it is a vivacious stream, only lingering at intervals in deep reaches and shadow pools, and again glinting and gurgling over its pebbly bed, or between the heavy boulders flung along its course. It is a stream that flows on for ever, and that would be a historic drought in which the Minnamurra should become a dry track of sand and gravel. Following the stream as to direction, and crossing and recrossing it, one becomes more and more conscious of the height of the mountain, for the road aims straight at their base. Presently the rest-house is reached, and horses or motor can go no further. The road has been negotiable by the latter, but not in the hands of nervous or 'prentice drivers. The surroundings of the resthouse make an unspoiled leafy bower, and the virgin freshness of the whole extensive scene is a grateful feature. Nature is untramelled and unsullied. The stately, pillared, and unusual tamarind may be seen, lithe palms, clustering lillipillies, noble eucalypti, great, valuable cedars, huge, fantastic figtrees grow side by side in compact array. Ferns find a home in the rocky shelves and slits, parasites make good on the damp bark of trees, lusty creepers climb aloft, and flinging out new feelers leap from tree to tree in strong festoons, and staghorn ferns may be counted by the dozen on a single tree—fifteen on one taken at random. The path lined with columns of grey and silver trunks of noble height, and roofed in with branches delicately traceried against the sky, is more and more pressed in by the sides of the gorge, until it narrows to a canyon, on the edges of which far above trees overhang as though ready at a word to take the desperate plunge into the crevasse. Only rock lilies and ferns can here and there cling to the sheer walls, and the massive sides refuse to be clothed except in shreds and patches of verdure. The floor of the crevasse has some lovely pools, shadowed by mighty boulders, and so sheltered that no breath touches them, though there might be a hurricane high overhead. Yet at some points of the compass this calm, unquivering spot can be a veritable funnel for the storm-wind. Suddenly the pass is cut clean off, and over its straight and solid barricade come the waters from the great plateau above, apparently held high in suspension, but falling and scattering in multitudinous unspeakable forms of gracefulness. The music of the waters whispers to the woodland beneath, and the woodland by its silence bids the waters be still, but they will not hear, and they go on for ever. Flinging one's head back, the blue sky is seen flecked with a passing cloud. It is afternoon, and sunset comes early in this narrowed gorge; then from the grateful earth, and from every breathing leaf, and from the river setting out for its eternity, the sea, there comes an odour delicious and restful and invigorating, that has in it strange primal forces appealing to something aboriginal in the blood, and it is good to be alive. Nature has no more finished bit of work in all New South Wales than Minnamurra Falls, nor has she worked it out in miniature, but on a large, impressive scale.

PATRIOTISM BY POSTERS.

The British way of calling for recruits and of awakening the national spirit by means of posters is beginning to be adopted in France (reports the Paris correspondent of a London journal), and one of the first instances of their successful application has been witnessed at Perigord, where the chief of the local steel foundry posted the following announcement:—

> OUR DUTY.
> A deluge of shells must be had.
> Shells must be made to rain in torrents, to enable us to break down the barrier of German trenches.
> When the enemy trenches are reduced to dust, then our infantry will be able to move forward.
> Victory lies in the hands of the engineers, foremen, and working-men occupied in the manufacture of shells.
> Every extra shell may save the life of one of our heroic soldiers.
> Every extra shell made in every munition factory may bring nearer by one day victory and peace.

The effect of this poster has been magnetic, according to the testimony of the manufacturers, and steps are being taken to use similar posters throughout France.

THE CHURCHES.

CONGREGATIONAL UNION.

The fiftieth annual session of the Congregational Union of New South Wales will begin in the Pitt-street Church on Monday week. The Union sermon, to be delivered by the Rev. W. T. Kench, will open the assembly, and will be followed by a united communion service. By reason of the ill-health of the incoming chairman (the Rev. J. Marshall Brown), the customary address from the chair will not be delivered to this year's assembly. Instead, there will be a discussion on "The Work of God in Our Churches," led by the Rev. F. V. Dowling, M.A., the retiring chairman. "The War and the Changed Spiritual Outlook" is the subject set down for the Home Mission festival on Wednesday, when, by an innovation that will make it possible to hear two voices from beyond the borders of the denomination. The speakers will be the Rev. R. Scott West, the Moderator of the Presbyterian Assembly, and the Rev. Joseph Woodhouse, the President of the Methodist Conference. A paper by the Rev. M. L. Johnson, B.A., will treat of "The War and Christendom," and the Rev. Dr. Roseby is to read a paper on "The Christian Gospel in the Present Crisis." The Rev. A. J. Griffith is to read a paper on "The Australasian Congregational Union—What it is, and what it can do," and Mrs. Andrew Harper is to initiate a discussion on "Women and National Righteousness."

PRESBYTERIAN MEN'S LEAGUE.

There are in connection with nearly every church leagues for various purposes, all aiming at greater efficiency. The Presbyterians have a league of their own, the purpose of which is to bring about by voluntary methods universal service by the men of that Church on behalf of the Church and the good for which Christianity stands. It is recognised that the women of the Church were doing, as they do in every Church, more than their reasonable share of church work, and this league is intended to make every good Presbyterian "get out and push." The Presbyterian has long been recognised as a loyal supporter of his "kirk." The Presbyterian—at least, if he or his ancestors came from north of the Tweed—is said to believe that he can run the universe, and is quite sure that education and theology are his own peculiar sphere. And, lest the enervating climate of Australia should make him lie back at ease in Zion, the Presbyterian Men's League enrols him in active service, and decorates him with a neat badge to his watchchain with the historic emblem of the "Burning Bush." The league, which was instituted in Sydney, has spread to the other States of the Commonwealth, and promises to be a real force in Presbyterianism. Its main purpose is not to engage in any specific work of its own, but to supply reinforcements to the various departments of church activity. The annual conference and rally of this organisation is to take place in St. Stephen's Church, Phillip-street, next Monday. At the afternoon session, from 4.30 to 6 o'clock, the subject for discussion will be "Efficient Service." The principal speakers at the public meeting in the evening will be the Revs. Professor Macintyre, T. Tait, D. P. Macdonald, and J. A. Barber.

BIBLE CHRISTIAN CENTENARY.

The Bible Christian Centenary is to be celebrated in South Australia to-morrow, and on Monday and Tuesday. Mr. William Thorne, of Brisbane, is to preside at one meeting, and Sir Samuel Way, Chief Justice of South Australia, at another. The celebration gives a good opportunity of recalling the outline of a striking chapter of Methodist history (says the "Christian Commonwealth"). The first service was held by William O'Bryan, a Wesleyan local preacher, who resolved to evangelise parts of the west of England, where the moral condition was exceptionally low. The service was held in the farmhouse of the paternal grandfather of the late Rev. John Thorne, who rendered Australia valuable service as a pioneer evangelist and temperance reformer. Necessity compelled O'Bryan to form a separate body, which did valuable work in many needy parts of England and Wales. In 1831 the work extended to Canada, where the great success attained led to the formation of circuits, districts, and a conference, which continued to prosper until all the Methodist churches of the Dominion united in 1882. Bible Christian work in Australia began with devoted local preachers and laymen at Burra, South Australia, in the late forties. The first sermon was preached there by James Blatchford. In 1850 the Rev. James Way, father of the South Australian Chief Justice, and the Rev. James Rowe, reached Adelaide. The former was stationed there, and the latter at Burra. From each centre the work spread. At length a conference was formed, and its first president was the Rev. T. Piper, now retired at Goodwood, S.A. In round numbers the Bible Christian denomination in Australasia gathered about 6000 members, 15,000 Sunday school scholars, between 30,000 and 40,000 adherents, and aided the English conference to work its mission in China, where invaluable results were attained. The Bible Christian denominations in different lands took into united Methodism nearly 50,000 members and over 200,000 adherents.

The general synod will meet on Tuesday afternoon in the Chapter-house. The Primate is to give an address, but it is unlikely that any other than purely formal business will be transacted.

The Bishop of New Guinea (Dr. Sharp) arrived in Sydney yesterday from Brisbane.

The Bishop of Melanesia (Dr. Wood) is expected to arrive in Sydney from New Zealand on the 18th inst., and will sail from here for the Solomon Islands at the end of the month.

The Rev. C. E. Fox, M.A., of the Melanesian Mission, returned to Sydney on Tuesday from seven months' furlough, spent in England. He will go back to the Solomons in the Mindini, which he will join at Brisbane.

The Rev. W. P. Hughes, lately assistant curate at Broken Hill, who is proceeding to Auckland, was tendered a farewell by the parishioners on September 30, and presented with a purse of sovereigns.

Archdeacon Bartlett, of Goulburn, has had trouble with his sight, and will be absent from Goulburn for some weeks.

Archbishop Kelly will lay the foundation-stone of the new presbytery at Lithgow to-morrow.

The following clerical changes have been announced:—Father D. Conaghan, of Michelago, to be in charge at Richmond; Father H. O'Farrell, St. Mary's Cathedral, to be in charge at Michelago; Father T. O'Farrell has been appointed to Parramatta.

The Very Rev. Father T. Brown, C.SS.R., who replaces the Very Rev. Father P. M. Lynch as superior of the Redemptorist community at Manila, Phillippine Islands, is a native of Dundalk, Ireland, and has been eight years in Australia. He succeeded Father Lynch as superior of the Monastery at Waratah, and has given missions all over Victoria and New South Wales. Many will (says the "Catholic Press") be glad to hear of the return of Father Lynch, who has been four and a half years in Manila. Father Brown leaves Sydney by the Tango Maru on the 22nd instant.

Other changes made in the Redemptorist communities in Australasia include the following:—Father Treacy to be rector at Waratah; Father Whelan, superior at Tweed Heads; Father Hunt, rector at Ballarat (Vic.); Father Creagh, rector at Perth (W.A.); Father Roche, rector at Wellington (N.Z.). Father Gleeson will retain his position as vice-provincial.

The Rev. J. H. Bates, B.A., of Ballina, has gone to Queensland, and is now in camp at Enoggera, prior to proceeding to the front.

The Rev. James M'Kee, of Penrith, has gone on a holiday to New Zealand, and will be away for a few weeks.

The Rev. John Flynn has returned to Sydney. Mr. Flynn is to take a further period of work in New South Wales.

The settlement of the Rev. A. Boyd at Narrandera is to be carried out by the presbytery of Murrumbidgee on the 20th instant.

The Rev. D. Finlayson has resigned the charge of the Coraki Church, in the Richmond River district.

The Rev. W. Beck, of Port Fairy, Victoria, is to pay a visit to New South Wales next month.

The president of the Methodist Conference (the Rev. J. Woodhouse) left on Thursday for the Northern Rivers. He is to open a church at Coff's Harbour to-morrow. He will return to Sydney next week.

The Rev. A. C. Plane, of Queensland, who went to the front as a chaplain, has been invalided home. He arrived in Sydney by a troopship during the week.

The Rev. Dr. J. Greenwood Tasker was elected president of the British Wesleyan Conference recently held in London.

The Rev. J. W. Dains, who will shortly be leaving on troopship chaplaincy duty, was given several presentations at Uralla, of which circuit he is superintendent minister.

Miss Watson, a Methodist missionary sister from Fiji, arrived in Sydney on Wednesday on furlough.

To-morrow is to be observed in Methodist churches throughout the State as foreign missionary thanksgiving day.

The Rev. N. S. Robinson, after a self-denying and successful work at Alexandria, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the churches in the Sutherland district. He was welcomed by the Sutherland congregation on Wednesday evening.

The Rev. S. Oliver, pastor of the Wollongong Congregational Church, and Mr. Harold Weir, who has been in charge of the Holmesville Church, leave for the front next week. Both have enlisted in the Army Medical Corps.

The Rev. C. W. Abel, of the London Missionary Society, will return to Papua next week.

The Rev. Norman Beaney, who has accepted the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Bordertown, South Australia, will begin his ministry there on Sunday week.

The weekly intercession services in St. Andrew's Cathedral on behalf of the men at the front continue to be well attended, and the list of those for whom special prayers are asked is growing. The precentor (the Rev. E. N. Wilton) was the preacher yesterday. The lessons were read by clergymen of other denominations.

It is estimated that, through the war, the Australasian University Students' Christian movement has lost a thousand members, all of whom have gone to the front to fight, or work in some other capacity. During the week Mr. Stanley Addison left Melbourne for Egypt to take up his duties there under the Australian Red Cross. He is the third prominent officer in the movement to go from Victoria. Mr. D. L. B. Seymour, travelling secretary in Victoria, is doing hospital work at Lemnos, and Dr. T. P. Dunhill, who holds the rank of major, is supervising hospital work in England.

The National Training School of the Young Women's Christian associations for Australasia, opened with six students—Miss Dean, Dublin, Ireland; Mrs. Lindsay, London; Misses Barlow and Clarke, Victoria; Miss Hooper, Adelaide; Miss Swyny, Sydney. At the opening session, Mrs. Henry Pratt, Chairman of the secretarial department, presided; and Miss Heard, the National President, and Miss Barnes, the national secretary, gave addresses. The Rev. R. A. Thompson lectures on Acts of the Apostles, Rev. A. H. Austin on Sunday School Work, and Rev. N. J. Cocks will begin a special course on Monday on Psychology.

Letters received in the last mail by Mr. Gillanders, general secretary of the Sydney Y.M.C.A., indicate large extensions in Y.M.C.A. work in Egypt. A chaplain from Sydney reports that he was amazed at the extent of the Y.M.C.A. organisation in Egypt. "If the people of Sydney only knew what it stands for out here," he says, "they would not hesitate to stand by it."

Mr. William Owens, B.A., the Sydney Y.M.C.A. secretary, at the request of the military authorities, has gone to the front with a Y.M.C.A. tent and 100 cases of stores, for the men in the trenches. Just as soon as Anzac Beach is free from shell fire, he will be able to erect his marquee, but at the time of writing he has not been able to do so, as the building would have been blown to pieces. Mr. Owens will co-operate with the War Chest Fund and the Red Cross Society in every way.

THE WEST WIND.

Wind of the west, hast thou no word for me?
It seems the gods from trumpets pour aloft
Thy sweeping breath upon this leafy sea,
Where winter, with his misty chaplets doffed,
His last thin moan has sighed.
The mad light skims on grass and smoking croft
And silver trunks, each like a queenly bride
Yielding her grace to thy fierce mastery,
Panting and happy-eyed;
Lend me thy tongue that I may give this land
Tempestuous answer to thy loud command!

A moment since I basked amid the haze,
Like a still lizard, fed on quivering air;
The robin flecked, a drop of crimson blaze,
The old green-lichened fence; the gold was rare
On drooping wattle boughs;
And on fire-darkened trees the shoots were fair
As ruby diadems on Sheba's brows;
Each forest-leaf kept poised its piercing rays,
So deep the morning drowse,
And from the mountain crest was spread a skein,
Brilliant above the peace of the champaign.

Then with a swiftness all this holden light
Burst its fine bounds, and in a riot game
Shot tangling interplays of gold and white,
And made the air a thing of sound and flame
Filled with Epiphany.
As when some Sibyl hears the sacred Name,
Caught in a trembling trance, and wonderingly
Drinks the Divine, then shakes her tresses bright
And leaps in ecstasy,
Thus wert thou moveless, thus thy frenzy burst
Upon this vale, and on my spirit's thirst.

Above my lifted eyes the cloudy fires
Race like the snowy hounds of Artemis
Toward young Desire, the fawn that still retires
To crystal coverts of uncaptured bliss
A shadow and a gleam,
Whereof is born the earth's ecstatic kiss
That wakes the ruddy Spring's encavernéd dream,
And fills the air with rushing of sweet lyres,
While freshening odours stream
From sapling-tufts that toss their crimson maze,
And break in roaring on the hillward haze.

In other moods my heart has felt thy lure;
One hour divine my soul shall ne'er forget,
When Richmond's plain, with whitest blossom pure,
Billowed and bowed and flung a foamy jet
Of whirling petal-showers;
Some brushed my temples, like a circlet set
In benison from thee to give my powers
A song that might some little day endure
To chant thy magic hours;
For this my Land breathes from thy parted lips
Upon its child, and breaks his long eclipse.

It is in thee I hear prophetic notes,
Thou jubilation of a life reborn,
The rhapsody of myriad lark-like throats
Dropt fountain-wise upon these plains that mourn,
For grief attends their waking,
And the fresh dews that tender fronds adorn
Quiver like tears that the long dream now breaking
Is tinged with sombreness that dimly floats
Thro' the light's joyful quaking.
What shadows fill the hollow of the leaf?
What, birds and wildflowers, is your subtle grief?

Beneath the clarion sounds an undertone,
Faint-audible sighings to the listening ear;—
"Is it not bitter that the manhood sown
Within our breasts, than our own life more dear,
Is vanished in dark death?
Wherefore our beauty donned to meet the year,
The fragrances of our love-kindled breath,
The gem-like flashings of our loosened zone,
But for a burial wreath?
Fruitless our milky breasts! The forest-surge
Drowns not the burden of our children's dirge!"

Land of my passionate love, the rushing wind
Gives me the god-filled cry, and bids the vale
Drink the new life, though chilling death has thinned
The lives that erewhile fenced the grassy pale
And turned the furrows brown!
Their voices ride in the triumphant gale
Deep-chorusing of hellish powers o'erthrown,
Of victory with the eternal future twinned,
Of thee to fulness grown!
Fling loose thy tresses, consecrated Land;
Be glad and bloom; it is their high command!

Have I not loved thee, as thy freeborn child,
From the sea's sapphire to the snowy crest
Of Kosciusko in his vapours isled,
Whence draws the crystalline stream his waters blest
In pools and fretted falls?
And my quick bosom held a dear behest
To pluck thy red and golden coronals,
And cast them to the tempest's revel wild
That, with exultant calls,
In token of thy brightness and thy birth
He fling thy scents and hues o'er all the earth!

CHAPTER XXII.

Samuel Hesketh got into telephonic communication with Sir John Boddington at a very early hour next morning, and long before midday the latter was ensconced in Slippery Sam's offices listening to the result of his interview with Miriam Guryado.

Of course, Hesketh knew that Amery as well as Joe Laronde had left Little Pennington, and had spent the night with Miriam Guryado in their rooms at the Imperial Hotel. He had not the faintest idea what caused this sudden move on their part, but he was not frank enough to own as much to Sir John.

He pretended that their flight from Little Pennington was due to his clever tactics.

"Of course, the first thing was to get them out of earshot of the hall, so to speak," he said, rubbing his fat hands together. "To get them out of the county, Sir John, before people began to talk—what? It's extraordinary how soon people begin to talk in country villages, isn't it?"

Sir John merely nodded and looked glum. Perhaps the people had begun to talk already.

"There was a time," Hesketh continued, "when a man, if he had a skeleton in his cupboard, could keep it respectably hidden, unbeknown to anyone but himself and his family. But nowadays, Lord, family skeletons are as common as motor cars, and it's no more use trying to hide the former from your friends than it would be to keep the other out of sight of the tax collector."

Before many days had passed Boddington began to wish that he had not been quite so hasty in giving Samuel Hesketh a free hand to deal with his two old friends, now turned blackmailers, and a daughter whom he feared to recognise. Moreover, though Sir John paid daily visits to his son's rooms in Duke-street, hoping either to find the family jewels there, as George had tacitly promised, or a message telling him where they were to be found, neither jewels nor letter arrived for him. Not a word from his son; not a hint as to where he had disappeared.

No one, not even his most intimate friends, could tell him anything about his movements. Sir Charles Maxwell, apparently the last of George's friends to have spoken to him, knew no more than Sir John. He told the latter he had last seen his son on the racecourse at Windsor, and that he seemed very cut-up at losing the race on Mintlaw.

"He confessed he owed a lot of money," Sir Charles said lightly to Boddington, as if owing money was nothing to worry about, "but I assured him that we all got into debt when we were young men, eh, Sir John? Begged him to let me be his banker, as I understood he didn't want to worry you. But of course he wouldn't hear of it. A fine chap, Sir John. No wilder than any proper young man should be, and as straight as a die. It's a wonder his head hasn't been turned by the fuss people have made over him, especially women."

Boddington merely nodded. He was beginning to wonder if he had not been unnecessarily harsh on his son. Youth will be served. . . . And he had done worse than run into debt when he was young!

His conscience pricked him as he looked back. He thought of Miriam, his daughter, the daughter of whom he was ashamed; and he trembled.

What right had he to judge his son? How had he dared turn a deaf ear to his appeal for help that night in the study—when he himself was sorely in need of help?

"I hope there's nothing wrong," Sir Charles tried to say unconcernedly. "I expect George has got a bit fed-up with everything. He's just run over to Paris for the week-end; he may be riding there."

If Boddington had been able to put more reliance in Samuel Hesketh's methods he would have run over to Paris himself to look for his lost son. But he did not dare go away from Crowhurst Hall until he had settled with Miriam and made terms with the two men.

He knew they would come to terms. Hesketh had progressed so far, and that was a great relief to Sir John.

The price he was asked to pay for so lightly regarding a woman's love and the legal effects of a Mexican marriage was terribly high.

Curiously enough the delay in effecting a settlement which he was so anxious to avoid acted upon him in a quite unexpected fashion. When Boddington worried, Hesketh invariably said: "Wait a bit, they'll accept our terms if you're patient. Then perhaps I can knock 'em lower still."

But with every day that passed Boddington found his conscience, which had slept cheerfully for so many years, grow wider awake. Day or night it gave him no peace. Again and again in imagination he lived the years spent in Mexico, a thousand details he had forgotten returned to his memory. He could not understand how he had forgotten them so completely from the moment the summons came for him to return to England. The revolution in his life, so sudden and unexpected, must have temporarily upset his mental and spiritual balance.

He shuddered to think what sort of position he might have found himself in if Anita had not died.

And gradually he worked himself up into feeling that he owed reparation not only to the living, but also to the dead. When over a week had passed and there was still no sign of the missing jewels and no news of his son, he gave George up for lost, and brokenheartedly told his wife what had happened. He did not try to excuse or to spare himself; he confessed he had absolutely refused to help George again, with the result that the latter had been tempted to take the family jewels in order to raise money on them to pay his debts of honour. That the theft had been discovered, and that George in an interview with his father had promised to return the heirlooms. Sir John had given him a cheque for five thousand pounds which had been duly presented to his bankers and cashed. But the jewels had not been returned.

"A bad egg," he said brokenly, "but, I, his father, am responsible."

Mother-like, Lady Boddington's only anxiety was to find her son and know he was safe. "When he realised what he had done he would be overcome with remorse and horror; he might be tempted to—to take his own life," she cried. "You must go and search for him at once, John. You ought to have told me long ago."

Boddington did his best to calm her fears, to assure her that the boy would never be cowardly or foolish enough to attempt his own life.

"We have our daughter to think of," he reminded her. "For her sake as well as our own we must prevent a scandal."

His wife suggested they should advertise: "George, return, and all will be forgiven."

But Sir John eventually persuaded her to leave everything in his hands. With a woman's quick instinct Lady Boddington at once penetrated Samuel Hesketh's disguise.

"The moment I saw him walking about with you in the garden that morning I thought he looked more like a detective than an architect."

Fortunately Lady Boddington had never suspected Miriam's presence in the house; but there was one who either knew or suspected—Rachel, the parlourmaid. Whenever Sir John saw her he felt a thrill of fear, and when his wife told her regretfully that their parlourmaid had given notice, and was leaving at the end of the month, he felt almost elated.

"Going to get married, I suppose. I must give her a little cheque."

Which he did: a substantial little cheque, at which Rachel was not in the least surprised and accepted gracefully.

Forthwith, to further ease his conscience, Sir John satisfied all his son's debts; paid the rent of his rooms for another half-quarter, and satisfied every claim that was made against him. Then he gave Slippery Sam a severe shock by calling on him and telling him to straightaway agree to Miriam Guryado's terms.

"I should hang on a bit if I were you, Sir John," Hesketh said warily. "If you give way to her so easily as that you'll have Amery and the other chap putting up their prices."

"I have no conscience about them," Boddington replied hastily. "But I've made up my mind that what Miss Guryado wants she shall have—especially if she's going to give up all further claim on me and my name."

Hesketh would have argued, but he discovered it was useless. He thought that Sir John Boddington had grown suddenly afraid. But it was not fear which had won Miriam Guryado the day, which was going to purchase her freedom and the power to purchase all the things she craved from life.

It was conscience. Sir John had sinned. He was going to pay for his sins.

LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Isaacs and a jury.)

ALLEGED CONSPIRACY.

The hearing was continued of the charges preferred against Arthur Kidman, Major F. W. Page, Major A. G. O'Donnell, and Sergeant Edward Leslie, of conspiring to defraud the Commonwealth of large sums of money by procuring that the Government should pay excessive prices for the supply of goods for the armed forces of the Commonwealth.

The whole of the morning session was taken up by counsel in arguing the point as to whether Mr. de Witt, the paymaster of the 2nd Military District, one of the witnesses for the Crown, could be treated as hostile, he having, as alleged by Mr. Bolin, K.C., for the Crown, made statements at a private inquiry in May last which conflicted with a part of his evidence given on Thursday.

His Honor ruled that he could not treat de Witt as an adverse witness, as there was no sinister motive.

Edward Watson Graham, an observation officer at the telephone exchange at the G.P.O., continuing his evidence, after explaining the method of "tapping" subscribers' lines, which he said was a regular part of the telephone organisation, stated that he had Kidman's lines, among others, under observation. The notes produced, which were sent twice a day to the assistant manager, referred to conversations on those lines. O'Donnell and Kidman's voices were heard by him. He began to listen on the lines about December 18 last, and continued to do so up to the time of Kidman's last trial.

Mr. Lamb, K.C. (for Kidman) objected to the admission of the evidence. He said it was the first time that that class of evidence had been given, and he thought there should be a ruling given on the point.

His Honor said that we lived in a world of progress, and the jury, as men of the world using their common sense, would have to wait and decide the amount of credence to be given to the evidence. He could not say that it should be excluded.

Sydney Hill, another observation officer, said he was on observation line No. 2 for seven months, and often heard Mr. Kidman's voice in conversation. The notes produced were written by witness at the time that Kidman was conversing over the wires.

In reply to Mr. Lamb, witness said he was not a shorthand-writer, and the notes (produced) were not a record of all the conversations he had heard on Kidman's line—he took down all he could.

John Stanley Silvester, employed in the Telephone Department, said that he fitted up three of Kidman's lines to an observation desk in December last.

Charles Brown, a carcase butcher at Glebe Island, said the signature on the tender produced was not in his writing.

Edward Charles Simes, a carcase butcher, was shown some tenders bearing his name, but he denied having signed them. About 15 months ago Kidman asked him if he would allow him (Kidman) to use his name in connection with tenders for meat, and he gave his permission. The first witness heard about the particular contracts before him was when Kidman told him that he had been given contracts for supplying meat to Chowder Bay and the Randwick Rifle Range. Witness went twice to the Barracks in connection with the contracts, being accompanied by Kidman on one occasion. O'Donnell witnessed one of the contracts, and Leslie the other. Witness later on saw Kidman in his office, when he (witness) told Kidman that he (Kidman) could fulfil the contracts. Beyond signing the contracts witness had nothing whatever to do with them. Two authorities to collect were afterwards signed by witness, and handed to one of Kidman's clerks, also two claims, which were left in the office.

In reply to Mr. Lamb, witness said that he considered that Kidman's actions were above board when he gave permission for his name to be used. If he had been tendering his prices would have been above Kidman's. Kidman bought the best meat procurable.

The case remains part-heard.

SUPREME COURT.

IN CHAMBERS.

(Before Mr. Justice Sly.)

HABEAS CORPUS MOTION.

Re A. B. Rutter.

Mr. Mack, instructed by Messrs. Minter, Simpson, and Co., appeared for Arthur Butler Rutter, who was a trainee on board H.M.A.S. training ship Tingira, and moved for an order nisi for a writ of habeas corpus, directing the commander of the vessel to release applicant from custody. It appeared that several weeks ago the boy Rutter was remanded in custody for an alleged offence of which, according to the subsequent written confession of the accuser, he was not guilty, but he was still held in custody, and the Minister for the Navy, upon being communicated with, said he could not interfere. It was now sought to obtain his release, on the ground that the commander of the Tingira had no power to hold applicant in custody.

His Honor granted the application; but it transpired that before the order was brought up for his Honor's signature, applicant had already been released from the ship.

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Simpson.)

A WOLLONGONG PARTNERSHIP.

Davies v Tynan and another.

The suit of Davies v Tynan and another, pending the hearing of which Samuel Henry Davies asked for an injunction to restrain the defendant, Christensen, from collecting any moneys due to the firm, in which Davies and Christensen were partners, from the customers of the firm, and that he (Christensen) be ordered to pay all moneys so received into the joint account of the firm in the Wollongong branch of the Commercial Banking Company of Sydney, was mentioned.

Mr. Nicholas, instructed by Messrs. A. J. Taylor and Greenwell, agents for Messrs. Owen and Son, of Wollongong, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. A. A. Lysaght, of Wollongong, for the defendants, Marcus Tynan, news agent, and John Peter Christensen, engineer, both of Wollongong.

By consent, the matter was allowed to stand over till the 18th inst., the interim injunction previously granted by his Honor to continue in the meantime.

WILL OF E. L. JONES, DECEASED.

TRUSTEES ASK FOR DIRECTIONS.

This was an originating summons, instituted by Frederick Percy Ford and Harold Clarke Thompson, as trustees of the will of Edward Lloyd Jones, a member of the firm of David Jones and Co., Ltd., who was killed in the Redfern railway disaster 21 years ago, for the determination of certain questions arising under the will in consequence of the following circumstances:—The testator's estate, after payment of legacies and expenses, had produced an income much more than sufficient to provide the annuity given by the will to testator's widow. Since the testator's death the trustees had accumulated the surplus income, which had now reached some thousands of pounds. The period allowed by law for such accumulations, viz., 21 years, being about to expire, the trustees asked the Court for the determination of the following questions:—(1) Who are the persons entitled to such accumulations at the expiration of the 21 years? (2) Who are the persons entitled to receive the surplus income arising after the expiration of the period mentioned and before the death of the testator's widow?

Mr. S. A. Thompson, instructed by Messrs. Joseph Thompson and Hunt, appeared for the plaintiff trustees; Mr. W. A. Parker, instructed by Mr. James P. Jones, for the defendant, Eric David Lloyd Jones; Mr. Maughan and Mr. Weston, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, for the defendant Charles Lloyd Jones; Mr. Sheppard, instructed by Messrs. Thompson and Nott, for the defendants, Helen Ann Jones (widow of the testator), May Ross Nott, and Edward Lloyd Jones; and Mr. Bethune, instructed by Messrs. Thompson and Nott, for the infant defendant, Helen Ross Cowper.

The matter stands part heard.

WILLS OF J. HEAMAN AND JEMIMA JELLY, DECEASED.

TRUSTEES ASK FOR DIRECTIONS.

In the originating summons instituted by William Henry Cordeaux and Horace Howard Peek, executors and trustees of the wills of James Heaman, who died in 1860, and Jemima Jelly, who died in 1887—Jemima Jelly was the wife of the defendant, Alfred Jelly, and the widow of the testator, James Heaman—for the determination of certain questions arising out of the two wills, his Honor decided that under the will of James Heaman his widow took an absolute interest in a farm on the Manning River. With respect to the question as to whether she took the farm for her separate use, and whether the will in favour of her husband was invalid, and the property passed to her next of kin, his Honor reserved his decision.

Mr. R. H. L. Innes, instructed by Messrs. T. Marshall and Marks, appeared for the plaintiff trustees; Mr. Parker, instructed by Messrs. Garland, Seaborn, and Abbott, for the defendant, Alfred Jelly; Mr. Davidson, instructed by Messrs. M'Donell and Moffitt, for the defendants, Isabella Brevett and William Henry Bentley; and Mr. Weigall, instructed by Messrs. T. Marshall and Marks, for the defendant, Alfred Mitchell, representing the heir-at-law of James Heaman.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

"CHARLIE IN THE BANK."

MOTION TO CONTINUE INJUNCTION.

Mr. Leverrier, K.C., and Mr. R. H. L. Innes, instructed by Messrs. Allen, Allen, and Hemsley, appeared on behalf of the Clement Mason Cinematograph Company, Limited, plaintiffs in the suit against West's, Limited, and the Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, Limited, and moved to continue the interim injunction which had been granted against each of the respondent companies, restraining them and their directors, servants, and agents from infringing plaintiff's alleged right of exhibiting, performing, or representing the cinematograph film, "Charlie in the Bank," and from advertising such exhibition or performance.

Mr. [illegible] Manning, instructed by Messrs. John Williamson and Sons, appeared on behalf of the respondent companies.

The plaintiffs set out in their statement of claim that the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company was the owner of the copyright in the [illegible] of the cinematograph film performed by the well-known actor, Charles Chaplin, called "The Bank," for all parts of the United Kingdom. On September 23 last the Essanay Company assigned to plaintiffs the copyright and performing rights in the film for the Commonwealth and New Zealand. They alleged that on September 22 and [illegible] the respondent companies exhibited the film or motion picture of "The Bank" under the title of "Charlie in the Bank," without their consent, and had threatened to exhibit it at their theatres. They further alleged that the exhibition by the respondent companies was an infringement of their rights, and had caused them serious loss and damage.

It was decided to take the application in respect of the suit against West's, Ltd., first, the decision in which was to govern the application against the other defendant company.

After hearing certain evidence the matter was allowed to stand over till Wednesday next, each party to have the custody of their own film, and to undertake to show it on their own premises, and make it available for inspection by the expert witnesses, the interim injunction to continue in the meantime.

DIVORCE COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Street.)

GAHERITY v GAHERITY.

Mr. Windeyer appeared for Lucy Ethel Lena May Gaherity (formerly Paterman), who sought for a dissolution of her marriage with William Henry Gaherity, on the ground of desertion. The marriage took place on March 6, 1907, at St. Stephen's Church, Newtown. His Honor granted a decree nisi, to be moved absolute in six months; petitioner to have the custody of the child, and respondent to pay the costs of the suit.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Heydon.)

IRON AND STEEL WORKERS.

Mr. Waldron (Messrs. Waldron, Dawson, and Glover) applied, on behalf of Messrs. G. and C. Hoskins, for the reconstitution of Board No. 12 Iron and Shipbuilding Trades Group. He asked for the inclusion in the board of persons engaged in driving steam winches used intermittently, and engineers working in connection with shears, saw, and punching machines. His Honor granted the application, and directed the amendment of the constitution of the board accordingly.

IRON AND LIMESTONE QUARRYMEN.

The position of the employees in Messrs. G. and C. Hoskins's iron, ore, and limestone quarries (Board No. 22, Iron and Shipbuilding Group) was before the Court. At the instance of Mr. Waldron, it was agreed that the constitution of the board remain as at present.

(Before Mr. Justice Edmunds.)

COLLIERY MECHANICS.

In the Coal-mining South Group, No. 2 Board, appeals against the award were made by Mr. Henwood (on behalf of the blacksmiths) and by Mr. Dengate (for the engineers). His Honor said that he would ask Mr. Trivett, Government Statistician, to compile figures showing the cost of living at Wollongong and Helensburg. As there was an appeal against the Coal-mining North Group award, of which his Honor was himself chairman, he would confer with Mr. Justice Heydon on the matter generally.

WOOL AND BASIL WORKERS.

Cross appeals were before the Court in connection with the Leather Trades Group, No. 6 Board. Mr. J. Stuart Thom, for P. M'William, an employer, contended that wages fixed by the board were too high. Mr. Henwood, for the Wool and Basil Workers' Union, appealed on the ground that the rates for casuals were too low.

The hearing was adjourned till the 21st instant.

MARINE COURT.

(Before Judge Backhouse and Captains Christie and Vine-Hall, assessors.)

YULOO-WAVE COLLISION.

This was an inquiry into the circumstances attending the collision which occurred off Long Reef, early in the morning of August 22 last, between the steam collier Yuloo, owned by the Sydney Coal Company, Ltd., and the ketch Wave.

Mr. H. E. Moore, of the Crown Law Department, appeared for the Superintendent of Navigation; Mr. P. H. Sullivan, of Messrs. Sullivan Bros., for all connected with the Yuloo; and Mr. H. A. Russell, of Messrs. Sly and Russell, for Captain Louis Momersen, master and part-owner of the Wave.

The Yuloo was on her way from Newcastle to Sydney with a cargo of coal, and the ketch on a voyage from Sydney to Newcastle with a quantity of dynamite on board. Damage to the extent of £150 was occasioned to the ketch, and to the extent of £30 to the collier.

The Court found that the collision was caused by the default of Thomas Johnston, master of the Yuloo, in not keeping a proper look-out, and called upon him to show cause on the 15th inst. why his certificate should not be suspended or cancelled.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Docker and jury.)

Mr. Herbert Harris, Crown Prosecutor.

ALLEGED FRAUDULENT CONVERSION.

At the Water Police Court yesterday, Frederick Sydney Gannon was charged with converting to his own use, £700, which, it was alleged, he held as trustee for the benefit of Maria Floyd and Martha Mortimer. Mr. Milner Stephen, instructed by Messrs. Stephen, Jaques, and Stephen, appeared for the prosecution; and Mr. Carroll for the defence. An Equity suit for the recovery of the money had been instituted. It was alleged that the defendant had misappropriated the money.

The defendant, who reserved his defence, was committed for trial to the Quarter Sessions. Bail was fixed at £250.

SOCIAL.

All contributions and accounts of weddings or other social entertainments intended for the "Social" Column in Saturday's issue should reach this office not later than Friday morning, and be fully endorsed.

Her Excellency Lady Helen Munro Ferguson has consented to attend Mdme. Charvin's war concert to-night at the Town Hall, in aid of the Regimental Comforts Fund.

The usual monthly meeting of the National Council of Women was held on Thursday afternoon, at the Royal Society's rooms, when the topic discussed was the occupations of women. Mrs. Bogue Luffman gave information as to the extent to which gardening has developed as a women's industry in England. Mrs. W. Burley Griffin spoke on women as architects. Miss Ruby Board announced that the council was sending six members—Lady Hughes, Dr. G. Boelke, Miss Louisa Macdonald, Mrs. Edgley, Miss Fidler, and Miss Board—to the Universal Service League. Miss Rose Scott disagreed with the policy of joining the above league, but had written to the president, Lady Aberdeen, with whose decision members of this council would concur.

Mrs. Matthew J. Harris, of Eltham, Darling Point, is holding a gift afternoon next Wednesday, in aid of the Darling Point branch of the A.M. Comforts Fund, to procure Christmas presents for our men.

On October 1 a children's bazaar was held at Wargunyah, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Falkiner, Singleton. The bazaar, which was organised by little Miss Betty Falkiner, assisted by the Misses Gwen Starr, Winifred Shaw, and Jean Brown, was in aid of the Soldiers' Comforts Fund.

The Rev. Victor and Mrs. Clarke-Duff entertained the members of their congregation at a musical evening at The Manse, Singleton, recently. As several members of the Presbyterian Church are now on active service, each guest was invited to bring a gift for the soldiers.

A valedictory dinner and dance was tendered to Mr. George Dorahy, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Dorahy, Greenbank, Austenham-road, Leichhardt, at Sargent's Rooms, on September 18, on the eve of his departure for the front. The Mayor of Leichhardt presented the guest of the evening, on behalf of his friends, with a wristlet watch, case of pipes, and a tinder light.

On Saturday afternoon Mrs. Fred. S. Willis entertained a large number of friends at her residence, Willisden, Killara, invitations having been issued for a linen tea in aid of the Convalescent Soldiers' Home now being established at Turramurra. Several of the returned wounded soldiers were present. Musical selections were played during the afternoon by the United Eastern Suburbs' Band. The gifts of linen were very numerous, and included 17 pairs of sheets, 134 pillow slips, 111 towels, four table-cloths, 24 serviettes, blankets, pillows, tray-cloths, etc. Several cheques were sent by friends unable to be present.

The tea-cloth made by Miss McCausland, of Garden Reach, Hunter's Hill, the tickets for which were sold by Mr. J. R. Alston in the country, realised £12/12/6, in aid of the Red Cross Fund. It was won by G. Donnelly, Brial-street, Burrowa.

A Xmas Gift at home, to raise funds for the Lawson Red Cross League, will be held at Queen Victoria Club on October 27. Tickets are procurable from Mrs. Sulman, president.

Mrs. Langtree asks that anyone wishing to send parcels to the 4th Battalion for Christmas will please send same to 2 Greenoaks-avenue, Darling Point, by October 12.

The Citizens' Association held their meeting for October on Thursday morning at the Town Hall, Mrs. Francis Anderson presiding. On the subject of hostels for women, it was stated that Mr. Geo. Black was in accord with the association, and intended to erect such. It was decided to ask the Chief Secretary to allow a women's committee to state their views on the matter. Dr. Kesteven related how early agitation had saved Hyde Park from being cut up by a city railway station. The meeting was averse to our parks being utilised in that way.

The comforts committee of the A.S.C. desires that all Christmas gifts for the members of the corps should be left at the depot, 18 Barrack-street, by the 13th inst., to permit of timely packing. Seven cases of comforts were shipped last week.

Instead of holding their usual annual dinner, the committee of the Methodist Ladies' College Old Girls' Union decided this year to have a gift afternoon, which was held at the Y.W.C.A. rooms, Liverpool-street. Each member of the union was invited to bring comforts for our soldiers in the trenches at Gallipoli. Besides a representative gathering of members, the Rev. L. H. and Mrs. Kelynack, Mrs. E. J. Rodd, and Miss Sutton, were present. The gifts handed in included 40 pairs of socks, 19 washers, five eye-bandages, 65 handkerchiefs, three Balaclava caps, and four mufflers.

Donors working for No. 3 Hospital, at Lemnos, are asked by Lady Anderson Stuart to send in all parcels to the depot, 48 Bridge-street, before October 18, as the committee wish to send off the cases early. One thousand gifts for general distribution in the wards and 130 private parcels have already been sent off.

The October council meeting of the Women's Liberal League took place on October 5, Mrs. John Waugh in the chair. Two delegates were appointed to the Health Congress. Acknowledgment was received from the Army Medical Corps of a gift of two copper urns and one primus stove. The Commissioner of Railways sent a communication granting free railway passage for Christmas gifts to the Ghezireh Hospital. The league is working in connection with the Universal Service League, the campaign for efficiency and economy, and the League of Honour. The Girls' Liberal League has been addressed by Miss Gladys Marks on "How Girls Can Help in War Time."

The next general meeting of the 1st Battalion Comforts Fund will be held at the depot, Eastway's, 330 George-street, next Tuesday, at 3 o'clock. A very successful gift afternoon and flower sale were held at the depot on Wednesday, October 6. Many valuable Christmas gifts for soldiers were handed in, and £10 was realised from the flower sale. Mrs. Fred. Vale arranged the programme, which included Misses Millie Gallagher, Hilda Thorndyke, Geraldine Ward, Barrington, Linda Thomson, Ward, Mrs. Glanville, and Messrs. Chas. Smythe and Stan Buddle.

The Misses Dickson, Lincoln, Balmain, held a soldiers' gift evening at their residence recently. Progressive euchre, a guessing competition, and dancing were indulged in. Among the gifts received were Balaclavas, socks, handkerchiefs, tobacco, writing paper, soap, tins of fruit, sweets, pyjamas, and 1000 cigarettes, which will be forwarded to the 1st Field Artillery at the Dardanelles.

The workers at the Town Hall are still busy with the order received early in the week by the Lady Mayoress. Besides a large quantity of alterations, the completed consists of 46 doctors' coats, 74 pyjamas, 231 doctors' operating caps, 44 prs. doctors' operating sleeves, 30 fly veils, 70 hot-water bag covers, 48 handkerchiefs.

The pupils of Beecroft College gave an entertainment at the local School of Arts on September 29. Musical items, recitations, dances, and tableaux made up the first half of the programme; while a comedy, "Our Toys," was performed with much spirit by Miss Eleanor Ross's pupils. A dolls' dance was specially arranged by Miss Macnab for her pupils. The tableaux, "Britannia and the Allies," "Australia's Offering to Britannia," and "The Sleeping Beauty," were all very well carried out. The money collected during the afternoon through the sale of sweets, etc., will be sent to the funds for our wounded.

At St. Andrew's Cathedral on Saturday evening the marriage took place of Dr. Gladys V. Stephen to Dr. S. R. Stafford. Dr. Stafford has enlisted for the front, and he will be accompanied as far as Egypt by Mrs. Stafford.

Sergeant-Major Reg. Oram, of Petersham, who has left for the front on active service, was married on September 24 at St. Barnabas' Church, Sydney, to Miss Rene Horne, of Glebe Point. Mr. Oram is well known in cricket and baseball circles as a prominent member of the Petersham District Club, and is a member of the head office staff of the Australian Mutual Provident Society. Prior to his departure he was presented by the secretary, on behalf of his fellow-officers, with a silver tea and coffee service. Mrs. Reg. Oram was also the recipient of an afternoon tea set and table cutlery.

On September 14, at St. James', by the Rev. Wentworth Sheilds, Cecil Anton Messmer, of Brisbane, only son of the late Mr. A. Messmer, of Sydney, was married to Pearl Ray, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Finckh, of Raglan-street, Mosman. Mr. Finckh gave away the bride, who wore a bridal gown which consisted of a bodice and tunic of ivory brocaded crepe-de-Chine over a foundation skirt of duchesse satin trimmed with Malines lace, having a duchesse satin court train, lined with pale pink ninon, and trimmed with seed pearls and orange blossom. Her veil was her mother's bridal veil. The bridesmaids were Miss Olive Finckh (sister of the bride), Miss Mabel Pilcher, and Miss Clarice Messmer (sister of the bridegroom). Their dresses were of pink crepe-de-Chine and cream shadow lace, with saxe blue ninon; saxe blue satin shoes and stockings. Cream lace and saxe blue satin ribbon formed the caps. The bridegroom's present to the bride was a diamond cluster ring. The bridegroom gave to Miss O. Finckh a pearl and aquamarine circle brooch, Miss M. Pilcher a gold Nellie Stewart bracelet, and Miss C. Messmer a silver chain bag. The groomsmen were Messrs. A. B. Roper, H. Bartlett, and L. Barrow. The reception, breakfast, and dance were at Sargent's, Market-street. The bride's travelling dress was of powder-blue brocaded crepe-de-Chine, worn with a black Tagal picture hat with lancer ostrich plume, lined with blue aerophane. Mr. and Mrs. Messmer are spending the honeymoon on the South Coast.

A quiet wedding was solemnised in the presbytery at St. Mary's Cathedral, Sydney, on Monday afternoon, when Mr. L. P. Goldstein and Mrs. E. Rigney (relict of the late Austin E. Rigney), both of Katoomba, were married by the Rev. Father O'Gorman. The bride, who was given away by her brother, was attired in a tailor-made costume of champagne silk, with a hat to match. Her sister, Miss E. Proter, was bridesmaid. Mr. A. Morse acted as best man. After the ceremony the company adjourned to the Hotel Australia, where a reception was held.

The Bondi Junction Methodist Church was the scene of a wedding on Saturday, October 2, when Mr. Clarence E. Lee, of Liverpool camp, was married to Clara R., youngest daughter of Mrs. Wilson, of Waverley. The Rev. F. J. Branch officiated. The church was decorated. The bride wore a dress of Brussels lace over white silk; white silk shawl, lent by her sister; and white Tagal hat, trimmed with orange blossoms and lancer plume, and carried a shower bouquet of bouvardias and freezias, with satin streamers, and wore a gold wristlet watch, gifts of the bridegroom. The bridesmaid, Miss Phoebe Follington, of Darlinghurst, wore a white silk frock and large picture hat of white ninon and satin streamers. She carried a pink bouquet and wore a gold brooch, gifts of the bridegroom. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Robert Irvine (nephew of the bride) as best man, the bride being given away by Mr. W. H. Coulter, both of Liverpool camp. The wedding breakfast was held at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Walter Ormond Stevenson, of Ebley-street, Waverley. The bride's travelling dress was of wine-coloured crepe-de-Chine; white Tagal hat, with purple pansies.

PERFIDIOUS BUT CHARMING.

Herr Arnold Schroer, Professor of English Language and Literature at the Commercial Academy of Cologne, publishes in the "Kolnische Zeitung" a noteworthy article on the question: Why has England so much more success among the neutrals than Germany? Is it the power of money? Certainly, money, in the shape of bribes, also counts; but is this the sole factor? How is it, then, that even such countries whose economic interests are opposed to England are more inclined to go with her than Germany? How does one account for the remarkable attitude of Ireland, India, and South Africa? Surely, money and prospective gains have nothing to do with it. What is it, then?

Herr Schroer indicates the answer in the title of the article: "England's Charm." One must not, he says, underrate England's strength, which lies in the English character, which impresses so much other nations. Every nation which has had to deal with England has been deceived by her, and called her, with clenched fists, "Perfidious Albion." Yet every one of them has been again captivated by her so soon as she made friendly eyes to it. England's charm has a hold on them, whether they admit it or not, and this is a fact with which we must reckon. . . . It is not enough, in order to break this charm, to defeat the English army and navy, nor it is enough to show the world by academic arguments that the German idealistic philosophy and so on is more valuable than the utilitarian philosophy of the English. The charm must be understood, and then, if possible, defeated by a still stronger charm.

What is the nature of this charm? By what qualities is it exercised? Herr Schroer, who is by no means an Anglophil, but much the reverse, says:—"Whatever one may think of English Puritanism, it is an unquestionable historical fact that the English nation owes to it its economic strength, its health, and, therefore, its morality. . . . The English people possess such a high degree of healthy vitality and moral assurance as to be really a model to other nations and enable it to act upon the minds of those nations in an attractive sense. . . .

"To this is added another trait of the English character, which, though excluded, like all morality, from English politics, nevertheless is fully valid in English private life, and is best characterised by the word fairplay. . . . It is this English character which exercises such an attraction upon other nations, and we Germans, too, need not be ashamed to admit that every one of us who has come into close contact with it in England itself has felt this charm as something which enriches and strengthens our inner selves."

SHEEPSKIN FUND.

FETE AT BELLEVUE HILL.

An enjoyable fete was held yesterday afternoon at Leura and Rona, Bellevue Hill, in aid of the Sheepskin Waistcoat Fund. The two beautiful gardens surrounding the residences of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Knox, and Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Knox, were thrown open to the public for the occasion, and the scene was gay in the extreme. Brightly-striped marquees and umbrellas were placed here and there on the lawns, and busy saleswomen displayed their wares to a large crowd of people, who had assembled for the good cause. The wind was a little fresh, otherwise the afternoon was a perfect one, and the helpers in their summer-like frocks added to the picturesqueness of the ensemble. The roses climbed in profusion over the high arches, and the view across the harbour was the subject of much admiring comment.

At half-past 2 her Excellency Lady Helen Munro Ferguson arrived to declare the fete open. She was met at the steps of Leura by Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Knox, with them also being Lady Cullen, Mrs. Geoffrey Fairfax, Mrs. Neville Dangar, and Miss Eadith Walker. Lady Doris Blackwood accompanied her Excellency. Pathetic interest was attached to some 20 returned soldiers, one of whom was blind, who were lined up on the upper pathway. Lady Helen talked to each in turn as she passed between the double row. In declaring the fete open, and wishing it every success, she spoke of the value of the sheepskins and said that by the last mail she had received a letter from her brother, thanking her for the gift of one, which he said he would wear night and day.

Her Excellency amusingly added that before long she hoped to hear of many British lions disguised in sheep's clothing. Lady Helen afterwards made a tour of the various stalls. She was gowned in a coat and skirt of pale grey cloth, with a folded belt of black showing at the front; her black hat being wreathed with white feathers. Lady Doris Blackwood was in dark red poplin, with a collar of cream lace, and a small white hat of silk, banded with moire ribbon.

There was a host of attractions. Besides many things to buy, there were many things to see. In the open-air theatre Malini the Magician was one of the events of the afternoon, while "The Rustics" in song and dance, and Master Roy Workman, kept the audiences well pleased. Then there were amusements for the children, including pony riding, archery, lucky dip, Aunt Sally, and a hoop-la. Afternoon tea was to be found in the Rona gardens, and a band added to the general enjoyment. In every way the entertainment was a great success, and those who worked so hard to organise it have every reason to be proud of their efforts.

"SMITH'S."

[W. H. Smith and Son, the famous bookstall proprietors, have sent over 1000 men to the colours, including the following heads of the firm: Lieut.-Colonel Viscount Hambleden, Lieut.-Colonel A. D. Acland, British Expeditionary Force; Major C. S. Awdry, and Lieutenant W. H. D. Acland.]

The boy who brought your papers in the morning,
The boy who had the basket on the strap,
The boy behind the scenes of the monthly magazines,
Who could suit the taste of any kind of chap,
The lad behind the counter and the man behind the till,
Who knew the books and pushed the sales from Torre to Ludgate Hill;
"I recommend this novel, if you really want a thrill."

Smith's boy—good boy,
He thought he'd like to go and take a hand;
He saw the game—and played it,
Sold the news—and went and made it,
Smith's boy—from the Strand.

The boy who sold you Stars and Evening Newses,
The clerks who earned the author half his fees,
The "chief" who over all was the monarch of the stall—
They raised a thousand men from such as these,
The packers and the carmen who a year ago, perchance,
Were sending penny papers from the Strand to Old Penzance,
Are hauling eighteen-pounders through the muddy fields of France.

Smith's boy—good boy,
"Returns from Smith's" are greatly in demand;
What a lesson to the writers—
Forty quires of splendid fighters;
Smith's boy—from the Strand.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Although still on the quiet side, the real estate market showed signs of improvement this week in several directions, and in the aggregate a fair amount of business was recorded. In fact, it is astonishing how the total sales are telling up for the year, which after all will not be such a bad one from a business point of view.

The indoor sales this week were fairly well attended, and one or two of the auctioneers disposed of several properties on their list. Messrs. Hardie and Gorman, at their indoor auction on Wednesday, sold Fairhaven, in Carabella-street, Kirribilli Point, for £3700. They also sold the cottage residence Argyll, in Manning-road, Double Bay, for £1000. For both these properties there was considerable competition, and at last bids as low as £5 were taken. The firm also sold an allotment at Bankstown at 30s per foot.

Messrs. Raine and Horne followed up next day with another well-attended and fairly successful sale. Mr. Rabett was in the rostrum, and he disposed of a grazing, agricultural, and dairy farm, known as Rosewood, with about 1848 acres, situated at Tumbarumba, 60 miles from Wagga, for £9750. He also sold, subject to approval, the cottage Brunswick, in Smidmore-street, Marrickville, for £425. There was bidding almost to the reserves for several other properties. For a market garden at North Manly £1550 was offered. A shop property at Alexandria was passed in at £450, and for a cottage residence at North Sydney £1550 was declined. During the week the firm sold privately a water-frontage residence, Darling Point, for £3500. This represents £20 per foot along the water-line. The frontage to the road is a small one. They also sold a cottage at Enfield for £200, and three blocks at Northbridge at 30s per foot.

Messrs. Stanton and Son this week disposed of brick residential flats of three stories at North Sydney for £3300; a cottage in Marion-street, Haberfield, for £1020; and a cottage in Tinarra-street, Haberfield, for £1100.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. included in their sales for the week two cottage residences at Chatswood; one in Dowell-street, at £940, and the other in Havilah-street, for £950.

At the weekly sale of Messrs. Richardson and Wrench yesterday there was a good attendance, and Mr. Little, who was in the rostrum, had a fairly lengthy list of properties to offer, but he also had a difficulty in disposing of any. The bidding was inclined to be very flat, and all Mr. Little's attempts to rouse his audience failed. It was, however, no fault of his that contracts were not signed. The bidding in several instances almost reached the reserves, yet every property was passed in for private treaty. During the week the firm had many inquiries for residences and building blocks, and they managed to dispose of a cottage in Pearce-street, Double Bay, for £775; a block in the Austenlee estate, Enfield, at £3 5s per foot; also two blocks in the Pearce estate, Baulkham Hills, one at £30 per acre, and the other at £50 per acre, and a block at Lane Cove for £300.

Messrs. Raine and Horne will, at their rooms, on 21st inst., offer a sterling city investment in Carrington-street, facing Wynyard-square, and one minute from the G.P.O. The property is right opposite the proposed underground railway station, and the Imperial Hotel is included in the catalogue of properties to be sold.

Already there are inquiries for particulars respecting the extensive and valuable city property at the corner of King and George streets, which Messrs. Hardie and Gorman, in conjunction with other auctioneers, will offer some time next month.

Illustrated booklets have been issued in connection with the sale of Maclean's Point Estate, at Jervis Bay, which Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will submit at their rooms on October 25.

SUBDIVISION WORK.

THE HOLIDAY SALES.

The subdivision sales held last Saturday and on Monday were few in number, but they were fairly successful. On Saturday Messrs. Hardie and Gorman disposed of land in Ashburner-street, Manly, which was in the estate of the late Mrs. Eliza Smith. This land was near the ocean beach. The sale attracted a good attendance of buyers, and practically the whole of the subdivision was disposed of at prices from £15 to £20 per foot. The sales totalled £1751.

On Saturday Messrs. Halloran and Co. had a very successful sale at Faulconbridge, on the mountains, where the Pines Estate was placed under offer. The land is close to the station, and it sold well at good prices. Main road frontages yielded from £1 to £2 12s 6d per foot, and other blocks from 20s to 38s per foot. In all 35 lots were disposed of.

On Monday Mr. Monro had a successful sale in the Cronulla district, where quite a number of allotments found new owners. The prices obtained were quite up to expectations. They ran from 23s to £2 10s per foot. In all 29 lots were disposed of, and the sales totalled £3200. A wine cafe was passed in at £1300. The attendance was a large one.

TO-DAY'S SALES.

There are only a few sales listed for this afternoon, and one of these is an Illawarra dairy farm, of 592 acres, situated at Marshall Mount and Calderwood. It is mostly cleared land, under grass, with the main creek running right through the property. Messrs. Stewart and Morton, of Nowra, in conjunction with Messrs. O'Donnell and Stumbles, will offer this property at Wollongong at 3.30.

This afternoon Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will offer the King's Hill Estate, at Eastwood, on the Strathfield-Hornsby railway line. There are 60 choice building sites to be submitted to competition. This is good building land, and ought to sell well.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will this afternoon submit the Olive Estate, on the heights of Pennant Hills. There are 20 choice building blocks, with frontages ranging from 68 to 120 feet. The position is a good one, and the district is all that could be desired for residential purposes.

Another sale this afternoon will take place at Auburn-Berala, where 112 fine, open allotments will be offered by Messrs. H. W. Horning and Co. The estate is 11 miles from Sydney, close to Berala station (on the Lidcombe-Regent's Park line), or 20 minutes from Auburn or Lidcombe stations, handy to all the big works at Granville, Clyde, Auburn, and Lidcombe. The lots have a big prospective value, for the railway must go on.

APPROACHING SALES.

On October 30 Messrs. Stanton and Son will offer the Tremere Estate at Concord. The land fronts the Wharf-road. It has excellent water views, is within a few minutes' walk from the tram, and is close to the Parramatta River. The subdivision comprises level, grassy allotments, cleared and ready for immediate building.

On October 16 Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co. will submit one of the beauty spots of the harbour to competition. It is at Dobroyd Point, facing the Long or Iron Cove, with Leichhardt Park, Rodd Island, and Drummoyne immediately in front. This is a clearance sale of unsold blocks in the Dobroyd Point Estate, Haberfield. The land is 10 minutes from the tram. There is a magnificent drive 132ft to 200ft wide all round the estate.

On October 23 Messrs. Watkin and Watkin will offer the first subdivision of the Eaton Park Estate at Beecroft. There are 22 building sites fronting the Pennant Hills-road, and commanding a lovely view of the whole of the district, having about 600ft elevation, and being nearly opposite the wireless station. The land is within easy distance of three railway stations, and about half an hour's run to Sydney.

On October 23 Messrs. Raine and Horne will offer the first subdivision of the Bunnerong Estate, fronting Bunnerong-road and the tram line from Botany to La Perouse. This is a choice residential estate in a good district. The land has been sought after for many years, but was held. However, it is now unlocked, and ought to sell well. It is right against the terminus of the proposed Botany railway, and is near to Yarra Beach.

On October 16 Messrs. Raine and Horne will offer the Ellesmere Estate at Hunter's Hill, five minutes from the ferry and 25 minutes from the city. The land has an elevated and picturesque position, with charming views of the Parramatta River. The subdivision comprises nine choice residential sites. Four of the lots have extensive water frontages to Luke's Bay. On lot 9 is the residence, Ellesmere, for many years the home of the late Mr. Justice Owen. It stands in two acres of the grounds.

On October 16 Messrs. Devine, Elliott, and Martin will offer, at the Royal Hotel, Boggabri, a property called Riverview, situated about eight miles from the Boggabri Railway Station, and containing an area of 895 acres C.P.

On November 27 Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will submit to auction By-the-Sea Estate at Little Coogee. There are 19 fine building allotments in this subdivision.

On October 16 Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will offer, at auction, the Rockleigh Estate at Epping. The land is quite convenient to the local railway station. It is on the right-hand side of the line and close to the Public school. The subdivision comprises 15 choice home sites.

On November 6 Messrs. Slade and Brown will submit the Pymble Grove Estate. These are elevated sites on the Stony Creek-road, Pymble.

On October 16 Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will offer large building sites in elevated positions at Lakemba, which is the next station to Belmore, on the Bankstown line. Lakemba, like the remainder of the suburbs on this progressive railway centre, which must, in the near future, be linked up with the Great Southern railroad, is making wonderful strides. Land values are steadily rising, and there is nothing to prevent them from continuing to do so.

On November 20, Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will sell the Yanco Estate, near Bronte Beach, at Waverley. This is a commanding position on the ocean front. The subdivision contains about 10¼ acres. On one of the blocks is the delightfully situated and substantially erected residence known as Yanco. There is a building covenant at this sale of £500.

On October 30 Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will offer a subdivision in the new suburb of Normanhurst, on the highlands, near Hornsby and Wahroonga. The estate is known as the Normanhurst Golf Links Subdivision. The Intercolonial Investment Land and Building Company has acquired this large property with the view of creating a new suburb, which will, it is claimed, compare favourably with any other suburb on that line. Normanhurst district was once described as a gem in a beautiful rural setting.

On October 23 Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will offer Beattie's Estate at Balmain. This land has a frontage to Campbell and Waterview streets. There is very little Balmain land to be bought up now. Everything has already been sold.

On October 23 Messrs. Batt, Rodd, and Purves will submit the balance of the Panorama Estate at Belmore, which is good, elevated parklike land, and is to be offered on very easy terms.

On October 16 Mr. H. F. Cotterell, of Bulli, will submit the Mountain View Estate at Epping. This is stated to be the highest point of this health-giving district. From the estate the views are excellent, and take in the sombre outlines of the Blue Mountains, with that regal landmark, Mount Victoria, together with the ornate residential centres of the North Shore line.

On October 16 Messrs. H. M. Hawkin and W. F. Jago will offer the Bona Vista Estate at Fairfield, which is five minutes from the local railway station. There are 39 good building allotments, and also a cottage homestead of 6 rooms. Purchasers of home sites will find this an opportunity.

On October 23 Messrs. Bruntnell and Bannerman will offer the Post Office Estate at Carlingford. The post-office and store is on one of the corner allotments. Most of these are business sites, 18 miles from the city.

Messrs. James G. Edwards and Co. are offering on 30th inst. McIntosh's Paddock, opposite Gordon railway station. The subdivision is named Gordon Station Estate, and it comprises business and residential sites.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. report having sold during the past week a cottage in Dowell-street, Chatswood, for £940; and a cottage in Havilah-street, Chatswood, for £950.

Mr. C. Monro reports having sold the following properties in Cronulla during the past week:—Cottage, with 50 feet frontage to Parramatta-street, £850; four lots of the Kiora Estate, £171.

GERMAN TERRORISM.

BELGIAN REPORT.

The Belgian Commission of Inquiry of the Violation of the Rules of the Rights of the Nations, Laws, and Customs of War, in the 17th report, dated May 20, 1915, states that on the threshold of the border witnesses had informed the Commission that the German officers harangued their soldiers, telling them that the outposts had been attacked by the population, and recommending them to chastise without pity the villages at the first shot.

German men and officers had an obsession of an attack from the Belgian civilian population, and they prepared themselves for bloodthirsty reprisals. It was hardly necessary to repeat that there had never been any free civilian shooters in Belgium. In the provinces of Liege and Limburg, as well as in other parts of the country, only the army went out to meet the invader. The population, following the instructions of the civil authorities and the exhortations of the clergy, abstained very strictly from whatever inclinations they had. All witnesses are unanimous there never was a precise fact stated, never a regular sentence pronounced.

The following letter found upon a German soldier shows the sentiment:—Schleswig, 25/8/14. Dear Brother,—You shall soon go to Brussels with your regiment as you know. Be very much on your guard against the civilians, especially in the village. Do not let any of them come near you. Shoot without pity on anyone that acts too near you. They are very sharp and very keen fellows, these Belgians; the women and the children are also armed, and they also shoot. Never enter a house, especially alone. If you drink, make them drink before you, and always go away from them. In the papers there are reports of numerous cases of shooting on the soldiers when they were drinking. You soldiers must create such a terror around you that no civilian should dare accost you.

HEROIC CONDUCT OF FRENCH OFFICERS.

A wonderful story of French devotion is given in the "United Service Magazine." It comes from a French source. General X., commanding a division in Champagne, is preparing for an assault:—

"He sent for Engineer-Captain Z., and ordered him to have the whole of the barbed wire in front of the trench cut during the night, as this would hamper the attack. When darkness was beginning to give way to dawn General X. saw at the right end of the line that seven or eight posts still stood, with their full complement of wire. He called the Engineer-Captain and pointed them out. 'Do not trouble yourself, sir,' interrupted the captain. 'In half-an-hour those wires will be gone.' The usual morning fusillade was already beginning, and the first shells were tearing through the air. General X. was waiting impatiently for the last reports, tugging at his moustache. He suddenly saw Captain Z. appear, coming along slowly, very slowly, supporting himself along the side of the trench. He went to meet him. 'Well?' In a weak, weak voice the reply came: 'Ordre . . . inexecute.' 'How?' said the General. The captain did not speak, but pulled open his coat, and his shirt was soaked in blood. At the moment a rush of crimson from his mouth, and he fell dead at the feet of his superior. 'Who replaces Captain Z.?' 'It is Lieutenant T.' 'Send him to me.' The sergeant who goes with the message returns alone. 'Sir, Lieutenant T. is no longer there. The moment he saw the captain struck, he crawled out to the wire.' 'C'est bien, c'est tres bien,' said the General. After a few moments that seemed like hours, the general, in impatience, sent for news, and soon had it. 'Lieutenant T., sir, has not returned,' said the sergeant! 'He was hit as he reached the first posts. Nevertheless, we saw him cutting the wire. He is lying in a furrow. Sub-lieutenant V. has taken charge; he is now near the wire.' The moment fixed for the assault was now very near. Would the ground be cleared, as was necessary? The chief was on the point of telephoning to the batteries to postpone fire for a moment when he saw Sub-Lieutenant V. approaching, supporting himself by the shoulders of two of his men, between whom his body hung most lamentably. Both knees were smashed. The general rushed forward to meet him. 'Where were you wounded?' The sub-lieutenant made an effort to assume a military attitude, and give the salute, and replied with a sure voice and shining eyes: 'Mon general, l'ordre est execute.'"

MODERN AND IMPORTANT HOTEL MOVE.

WIN FOWLES' HOTEL DANIELL BRISBANE.

Apartments and Restaurant Separate.

Now on European Plan.

Now that the modernising of this fine hotel is complete, by the installation of the elaborate new Eastern Lounge, the latest Automatic Electric Elevator, the Septic Tank Water Flush Sanitary System, the Telephones in 40 best bedrooms and on all floors, the Electric Light throughout and the new Saloon Bars,

WE HAVE DECIDED ON

FALLING INTO LINE

with the big hotels of Sydney, Melbourne, London, Paris, New York, etc., etc., by, as well as accepting guests as usual at the inclusive rate (from 12/6 per day), now catering in the most modern European hotel manner for guests requiring APARTMENTS ONLY (and meals as required). NOTE.—Mr. Fowles has just returned from the South, where he studied the systems of Australia's best hotels, and decided upon proprieting the Daniell on practically similar lines to the Hotel Metropole, Sydney, which system is most popular.

THE NEW SCALE OF CHARGES IS NOW AS FOLLOWS:—

Charges.
Inclusive rate from .... 12/6 per day
Apartments only (Single) from .. 3/6 " "
" " (Double) from .. 6/ " "
" and Breakfast inclusive . 6/ " "
Meals, as required on "a la carte" plan, with a minimum of 1/6 for any one meal.
Charges.

NOW! YOU ARE A BUSINESS MAN, and, although this is not a mean man's country, you will admit that it certainly is A KEEN MAN'S COUNTRY, and this provision (the only one in Brisbane running on these lines) will do away with the HITHERTO ABSURD IDEA of paying for something you do not receive. No business man minds paying for the best; but we all object paying something for nothing. Why, the inclusive hotels in the South are practically a back number. BRIEFLY IT MEANS THIS:—To the guest who wishes to live at the best hotel possible, and who intends being absent (on business or otherwise) from any meals, he or she may take a single room—say for 3/6 per day, instead of being forced to pay the inclusive rate of 12/6—when, if he or she finds it convenient to have meals at the hotel, they are ready, and supplied, as stated above on the "a la carte" system (of a high-class restaurant) of paying for what you have ONLY, with the minimum charge of eighteenpence for any one meal. THE STANDING AND APPOINTMENTS of the Hotel Daniell, Brisbane (since recent improvements), are undoubtedly equal to, if not surpassing, anything in high-class hotels in Queensland, and, with this latest and popular system added, will equal anything offered in the Southern States of Australia. SPECIAL.—The Management Reserve the right to refuse any guest without explanation. THE HOTEL DANIELL, BRISBANE, is situated on a corner block, consequently cool and airy, about 100 yards from the beautiful Brisbane River, and, being at the corner of George and Adelaide streets, is right in the heart of the city. Any further information will promptly be supplied on receipt of wires or letters from intending guests. "HOTEL DANIELL, BRISBANE," is sufficient address, and our 'phone No. is 4820. HOTEL PORTERS meet all important trains and boats.

WARWICK TAINTON and KEDDING, of Pietermaritzburg, has given me written notice that he desires to proceed with his application, I have decided that this application and all objections thereto will be dealt with at my office on the third day of January, 1916, at ten o'clock in the forenoon. I therefore call upon all persons who are interested in opposing the issuing of Letters Patent for the abovementioned invention, to file at my office, before the day of hearing the same, a document explaining their objections, as they will otherwise be excluded from bringing them forward. Given under my hand, at Bloemfontein, this third day of September, 1915. (Sgd.) S. J. DE JAGER, Attorney-General and Deputy of the Minister of Justice. W. J. SPRUSON, Australian Attorney, 91 Elizabeth-street, Sydney, N.S.W.

ENGLISH AGENCY.—The Undersigned, established upwards of 60 years; confine themselves exclusively to a General Commission Business, are well acquainted with Australian requirements, and possess special facilities for purchasing goods to the best advantage in the English and Continental markets.

Indents should be accompanied by cash remittances or bank letters of credit to ensure full trade discounts. Account sales of produce under consignment rendered promptly, and net proceeds remitted or invested to order.

The Shipping Department has been largely developed of late years, and where indents are sent direct to manufacturers the shipment and insurance of the goods are effected upon the most favourable terms.

B. S. LLOYD and CO., 40 King-street, Cheapside, LONDON, E.C.

IN THE MATTER OF THE IRONBARK TIMBER COMPANY, LIMITED (in liquidation).

BLUE MOUNTAIN RESIDENCE.
MOORE COURT.
SPRINGWOOD.—FOR SALE, MOORE COURT, the fine residence of the late Hon. Charles Moore, beautifully situated in this delightful mountain district, now almost suburban on account of its easy access to the metropolis, the fast trains enabling the public to travel to and fro in the short space of 2 hours. The house is solidly constructed of stone and brick, and is in excellent order. There is a noble hall, splendid dining-room, and large reception-room, besides 18 other rooms and all the usual conveniences. Also large cellar and verandah 10ft wide, comprised in an area of 1 1-3rd acre. Additional land may be obtained if required. This valuable property would form an ideal home either for a retired merchant, a well-appointed rest house for high-class visitors, or for the reception of our convalescents of the army and navy, where pure mountain air is a necessity.

MAKE YOUR RENT MONEY
BUY YOU A HOME
AT HABERFIELD.

What have you to look forward to at the end of a hard day's work? Is it to go home to a Rented Cottage in some undesirable locality—one you HAVE to take because of the scarcity of "livable" Homes at a reasonable rental?

Don't put up with it! Our Easy Terms make it possible for anyone who has £50 to invest to enjoy the many advantages offers. Haberfield is without question the Choicest Residence Section in or around Sydney. It possesses every desirable feature that goes to make home life a pleasure. HABERFIELD BUNGALOWS are trim, distinctive, and attractive, fitted with every modern convenience—Gas or Electric Light, Water and Sewerage, Pantries, Cupboards, and Shelves right where they should be. The Rooms are large, tastefully decorated, and well ventilated. At

HABERFIELD
Every City Improvement is right at your hand—Churches, Schools, Shops, Amusements, etc.—in a section by themselves—but convenient always. Everything has been planned at HABERFIELD to harmonise—to do full justice to our efforts to make HABERFIELD Sydney's "Model Garden Suburb."

PAY £50 DEPOSIT AND TAKE POSSESSION of any one of the HABERFIELD HOMES. Prices run from £800 to £1450—and we can honestly say you could not buy Homes of equal desirability anywhere else at the Prices. The Balance can be paid at the rate of 25/ to 30/ weekly, which amount includes interest at the rate of 5 per cent.
Come out to HABERFIELD to-day—Our Office there will be open until 6 P.M. If you do not understand house values—bring out a friend who does. We ask the most critical inspection—because we prefer to do business on fair-and-square principles. We'll take pleasure in showing you round.

IN ALL AUSTRALIA

NO PLACE PRESENTS SUCH WONDERFUL POSSIBILITIES OF RAPID ADVANCEMENT AS JERVIS BAY!

THE PORT OF THE FEDERAL CAPITAL!

TO BUY THERE IN THE RIGHT POSITION TO-DAY IS BETTER THAN TO HAVE BOUGHT IN THE HEART OF SYDNEY OR MELBOURNE IN THEIR EARLY UNDEVELOPED DAYS.

PACIFIC CITY IS IN THE RIGHT POSITION!

AS SHOWN BY THE FOLLOWING SOLID AND UNCHALLENGEABLE FACTS:—

1. It actually adjoins the State Crown lands specially reserved for development purposes.
2. It is by far the nearest land (exclusively of unobtainable Crown Lands) to the Royal Australian Naval College.
3. Part of it is within 300 yards (5 minutes' walk) by road from the great Federal Territory acquired by the Commonwealth expressly to establish a Port in connection with the Federal Capital, Canberra. NO OTHER ESTATE is less than 2 miles by road from such Federal Territory.
4. Part of it has absolute frontages to the waters of Jervis Bay itself, nearest to where it is proposed to construct the new dockyards, wharfs, and other shipping facilities.
5. It has absolute frontages to the waters of St. George's Basin, at the most beautiful part, and they are far nearer to Federal Territory than any other available water frontages.
6. A mile and a half of the main Naval College Road, lately constructed by the Commonwealth at great expense to give access to the Territory, passes through Pacific City, which has thus 3 miles of frontage thereto.
7. No other freehold or private land fronting this road is within 3 miles of Federal Territory, and none can be purchased fronting this road, or even near it, any closer than 7 miles from the Territory.
8. BOTH State and Federal Railways are surveyed to run, not near, but actually through part of Pacific City. NO OTHER ESTATE offers this great prospect.
9. Pacific City is right in the centre of things, and no other Estate within many miles of Federal Territory has a first-class road made TO IT, much less THROUGH IT, as Pacific City has.
10. All first-class building land, level, or with easy slopes, dry and healthy, from which the views, both of Ocean, Bay, and Basin are incomparable.
11. No expense has been spared in laying out Pacific City on the very latest Town-planning methods, with numerous Parks, Reserves, open spaces, and splendid wide avenues up to 200ft wide.

No such opportunity to secure Lots at original prices in a City-to-be has been offered to the present generation. Sydney grew up anyhow, and in those early days whole blocks were bought for a cask of rum, which are now worth hundreds of pounds per foot. Later, in Melbourne, better laid out, the early buyers who held for a time, reaped fortunes. The third great chance is Pacific City, beautifully designed, and containing the finest building land in an absolutely unrivalled position, with prospects so great they cannot at present be estimated.

So that everyone can be in this great enterprise, terms have been made so easy that many of the lots may be secured for the small payment of £1 per month.

Finally, with all these definite facts, it is obvious that Pacific City must make the greatest progress, and show by far the greatest advancement in the shortest time, and consequently the biggest profits to those who are far seeing enough TO BUY NOW.

The Vendors of Pacific City being Business men, satisfied with a fair profit, have fixed prices actually below what are being asked in other Estates in the district, which do not possess any single one of the above advantages.

ECONOMY!
THE ORDER OF THE DAY.
There are many ways by which an up-to-date Engineer can reduce the running expenses of his steam plant, but undoubtedly the one which lends itself to economy more than all others is the matter of lagging.
Unfortunately, all too many engineers fail to realise the importance of this part of their plant. They may be fully alive to the advantage of modern engines, boilers, economisers, etc., yet, strange to say, they pay but scant attention to their insulation, beyond having it covered with ordinary asbestos.
NEWALL'S MAGNESIA COVERINGS
(Sectional for Steam Pipe, Bends, etc., Plastic for Boilers).
Besides being 100 per cent. more efficient than common asbestos, possesses in addition innumerable advantages, one of which is that it can be taken down even after a lengthy service and re-erected elsewhere without loss of efficiency.
That the exceptional efficiency of
is recognised is proved by their adoption exclusively by the British Admiralty.
The Sydney, Melbourne, Perth, and Canberra Power Stations are insulated throughout with these coverings.
May we send you samples?

A PIECE OF TIMBER.

(BY J. F. CAMPBELL.)

If we cut across a young shoot of one of our common timber trees with a sharp knife or razor, and carefully examine the cut surface by aid of a magnifying-glass, we shall more or less clearly see, embedded in the mass of spongy cells, a ring of little bundles of denser cells, called by botanists "fibro vascular bundles," a clearer view of which may be obtained if we shave off a very thin slice of the cross section, and examine by aid of a microscope. These little bundles are found in various forms, and variously disposed, in all plants possessing stem, root, and leaf, from the ferns upwards, but in the true timber trees and in all outgrowing, woody plants this circular arrangement of the bundles is constant. If we treat a year-old portion of the twig or branch in a similar manner, we shall find that a considerable development of the bundles had taken place during that interval. These bundles will now be seen adjoining each other, and occupying the greater part of the section, while the remainder of the undifferentiated tissue of the infant shoot is confined to the centre or pith, from which radiate thin, glistening strips or threads called the "silver grain" or medullary rays, as seen on the "quarter cut" of the silky oak and other ornamental timbers. A section through an older branch will show a further consolidation of the bundles, together with a variable annular or ringed density of the fibrous tissue that usually indicates the character of the annual growth as well as the age of the plant itself.

This annual increase of alternate soft and hard tissue is, as is well known, the result of the varying activities of the spring and autumn growths, and is especially peculiar to timber-growing in the Temperate Zones, where the seasons are well defined. Tropical timbers do not usually show such definite annual ring-markings, owing to the more equable conditions of climate that prevail in and about the equatorial regions, and in a few species these markings appear to be absent altogether, or at least very indistinct. A more minute examination of these fibrous bundles will show an inner and outer arrangement of functional cells and vessels, separated by a band of pith-like tissue, that forms a complete ring, more or less parallel with the bark. This ring of cells, called the "cambium" layer, may be termed the workshop from which issue wood cells on the inner side and bark cells on the outer. It is in constant operation in the production of new cells during the active periods of the tree, and the tender nature of these infant cells, especially during the spring growth, renders their rupture an easy matter in the well-known process of ringbarking, as the bark splits from the wood along this cambium layer. Prominent among the inner or wood cells may be seen the pores or channels through which water is conveyed from the roots to the leaves. These comparatively large vessel or "vascular" cells, in adjusting themselves to the economy of the tree, assume various structural forms and dimensions, and are distinguished by their peculiar wall supports and thickenings, as spiral, annular, pitted, or reticulate. They are further supported by long spindle-shaped woody fibres, some of which function as storage cells for the reception of surplus products of various kinds, including starch.

The silver-grain or medullary ray cells may also be seen threading their way horizontally among the woody cells into the bark. These are of great importance to the tree, as they form the avenues, so to speak, through which the food materials that flow down the bark or bast cell-channels from the leaves are distributed. They also convey water, and allow of the passage of air. Other kinds of cells may be noticed in the older twig sections, many of which are peculiar to timber generally, while some are developed to meet the special requirements of each of the many families of trees, but all have sprung from the simple pith-like tissue of the shoots. In the great bulk of commercial timbers the living elements of the sapwood tissue remain active only for a certain time, after which they die, and the dead vessel-cells become partly or wholly filled with the various bye-products of the tree, which are said to be chiefly gums. The heartwood is in this way formed, and its distinctive colouring is derived chiefly from the tannins of the cell walls. In some trees, the tissue elements remain active throughout the wood, and no true heartwood is therefore formed, while in other trees, although the heartwood is formed, it remains uncoloured and scarcely distinguishable from the sapwood. In the latter class, which includes the willow, the timber is liable to rapid decay.

The woody fibres of the tree do not usually run parallel with the direction of growth, but are prone to twist spirally around the trunk. This trend is specially noticeable in timber grown in the temperate zones, and evidently becoming more pronounced polewards, or towards the limits of vegetative growth. In the northern hemisphere the grain usually turns to the left, and, as far as I have observed, the reverse direction is peculiar to the trees of the southern hemisphere, hence the practice in the hand-dressing of wood materials for, say, house finishing, of directing the plane along the right of the pith in the northern, and in the opposite direction in the southern grown timbers. There are of course many exceptions to the rule, especially among tropical and subtropical trees, and it is by no means uncommon to see both right and left twistings of the "grain" in the same tree. Chief among the agencies at work in effecting this spiral twisting of the fibres is the very general one of "sun-turning," called by botanists heliotropism, to which may also be attributed some of the vagaries of growth, as much depends upon the position of the tree with respect to light.

The beautiful markings seen on the polished surfaces of cabinet woods, some are naturally produced, such as the "silver grain" of oak, while others are brought about by insects. The bird's eye figure of maple is one of the latter. Knots are the result of pressure exerted by branches as they increase in thickness within the trunk or larger branches, from which they spring. They are also produced by wounding and in other ways.

THE WOOL TRADE.

BOOM IN SUPER LINES.

With offerings on a moderate scale, and selections of wool suited to buyers' requirements, successful sales have been held this week. Auctions were held on Wednesday and Thursday, and will be continued on the first three days of next week. Six catalogues were submitted this week, totalling 12,966 bales, the proportion of 30,000 bales for the five days' series. The bulk of the wools were of merino growth; there, however, was a very fair proportion of crossbreds. Through the slackness in the demand for scoured at the opening series for the season, practically all the wools were in the grease; and through the great difficulty of selling short, faulty, and very burry wools these descriptions were far less in evidence than previously. This left the field open for the better-grown wools that buyers really need; and, as the offerings were well within the demand, an active market was experienced, and some record prices for the season were paid. Last week greasy crossbred sold to 18d, equal to the record of last season; and this week greasy merino sold to 18¾d, equal to the record of the 1912-13 season, and within 1d of the highest price ever paid in the Sydney market. It may thus be seen that if faulty and very burry wools are out of court, the well-grown, sound wools, free, or nearly free, are in the very best demand, and command highly satisfactory prices to growers. The market has been splendidly conserved in that respect; a fair trial was given at the commencement of the season of all descriptions, and in good-sized quantities; results gave the hints as to what was wanted, and what was unsuitable for the time being. When good wools in the grease were catalogued there was an excited demand, and when faulty sorts appeared in the catalogue the saleroom lost all its animation; buyers simply sat back, and patiently waited till something more attractive was offered. It is probably galling for the flockmasters, who have had to contend against an adverse season, and shear a thin, wasty clip, to find it neglected; while the growers in more favoured districts are meeting a keen demand. That, however, is the position as shown by the sales. With moderate offerings and improved selections, 10,387 bales were sold at auction this week, as compared with only 19,053 bales out of 31,224 bales on the four days ended September 16.

The lifting of the embargo on the export of crossbred to the United States has materially helped the position; so that really all the factors have combined of late to make the market an exceedingly strong one. That is for good wools that can be treated with despatch. Faulty wools may have a better reception later on, when the better wools are absorbed, and a decrease in the season's production is evident. The shortage in the current season's clip will show itself earlier than last year, and with a continuance of the war possibly on a more gigantic scale than heretofore, a wider demand may set in that will absorb a proportion of the wools that at present are neglected. Jacomb and Co., in their circular dated London, August 23, after pointing out the strength of crossbreds for military needs, and how more merinos had gone into consumption for military purposes than was expected—taking, of course, the best and most free sorts first, because less time and labour were involved in the process of manufacture—said with regard to other descriptions, that "faulty wools have been too abundant at times for immediate treatment, but have been steadily coaxed into consumption, and plant capable of dealing with them has been fully occupied, while with additional machinery gradually coming into working order this country will be a larger competitor for these in the future than in the past."

It is only reasonable to expect that carbonising sorts will be treated on a larger scale in the United Kingdom in the future; and that some steps may be taken to deal with such wools in the Commonwealth. If the war is prolonged, and the Balkan States become involved, even the short and faulty wools may come in useful to augment the good wools that may prove insufficient for the demand. If a wider demand sets in, and larger supplies are needed, doubtless the offerings will be increased; meanwhile, they are being kept within moderate dimensions. America, Japan, and Italy have been active operators during the week, and Bradford has shown more disposition to secure a fairer proportion of the offerings than previously. Best merinos have been very firm this week; while super lines have simply boomed; extreme rates for crossbred fleece have been maintained, while crossbred skirtings have improved 1d to 2d per lb. Faulty sorts have shown no improvement, and there has been no testing of the market for scoured.

Rates current for the principal descriptions of the staple in the Sydney market may be given as follows:—

OFFERINGS AND SALES.

On Wednesday three catalogues were offered, totalling 6583 bales, of which 5632 were sold at auction. It was a good selection, and included some super merinos; the wool being drawn mainly from the north-western and western slopes and plains. The feature of the day was the sale of SW over Mayvale brand, from Barraba, which made the record price, previously referred to, 18¾d being paid for 5 bales 1st com e, and 17¾d for 18 bales, 16¾d being forthcoming for 22 bales 2nd com. The wool was of super quality, good staple, soft, bright, light, and attractive.

On Thursday three catalogues totalled 6389 bales, and the realisations at auction 5134. The selection was not so attractive as on the previous day. The wools, while including lines from Riverina, came mainly from the west and north-west. The market continued strong for practically all descriptions of merino except short, wasty, and very burry lines. Crossbreds were in keen demand at extreme rates. Crossbred sold to 16¾d, and 16d for merino. The offerings and sales were as follow:—

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

According to Melbourne reports, there has been a fairly good inquiry for crossbreds and some sales effected at satisfactory prices; also for good merinos, but owing to the scarcity of lines available not much business has been done. The regular weekly series opens in Melbourne on Monday, October 18. In the meantime Adelaide is to hold sales on Wednesday, with an offering of about 15,000 bales. It would appear that Saturday, October 16, was previously fixed, for the "Argus" on Wednesday last said:—"Adelaide brokers are early afield in their arrangements, for it has been announced their next sale will take place on Saturday, the 16th instant, when some 14,000 bales will be catalogued, this being followed by another large catalogue on November 6 next. It is understood the foregoing arrangements do not altogether meet with the approval of Melbourne buyers, upon whose presence the Adelaide market largely depends. A strong recommendation has been made to the Adelaide sellers, with a view to some alteration in the dates, and it is not unlikely some rearrangement of these dates will follow."

BRADFORD VERY SLOW.

According to our cable of yesterday's date, the Bradford market is very slow, and merino tops are quoted ½d lower. Crossbred qualities remain unchanged. The course of prices since August 6 has been as follows:—

Qualities.	Aug 6 d	Sep 3 d	Sep 10 d	Sep 17 d	Sep 24 d	Oct 1 d	Oct 8 d

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

Wool has been coming forward freely during the week by both rail and boat, adding to the already large increase in the receipts compared to the corresponding period last year. This comparative increase, it must be remembered, is due not to any larger quantity shorn or prospects of a bigger clip this season than last, but entirely to holding the wool back through the war in the early part of last season, and the uninterrupted flow of consignments to the seaboard since shearing started on the 1915-16 clip. The receipts for the week and for the season to date compare with the corresponding period last year as follows:—

BY RAIL.

Season.	Oct. 2-8. Bales.	July 1-Oct. 8. Bales.
1915-16	34,431	222,765
1914-15	17,913	126,778
Increase	16,518	95,987

BY BOAT.

	Bales.	Bales.
1915-16	3,568	31,563
1914-15	848	13,545
Increase	2,720	18,018

Total seaboard increase for season to date, 114,005.

NEXT WEEK'S SYDNEY ROSTER.

Seven firms of selling brokers will submit catalogues next week, aggregating about 16,900 bales. The roster for large lots is as follows:—

Monday, October 11 (1), Goldsbrough, Mort, and Co., Ltd. (2), Pastoral Finance Association, Ltd.
Tuesday, October 12 (1), Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Ltd. (2), Dalgety and Co., Ltd.
Wednesday, October 13 (1), Hill, Clark, and Co., Ltd. (2), Winchcombe, Carson, Ltd. (3), Schute, Bell, and Co., Ltd.

SOME PRINCIPAL BRANDS.

Included in the brands to be offered are the following:—

Greasy:—Boonaldoon, Wilgar Downs, RSF over Melville over Forest, Namma, MG over Keewong; WWW over Belltrees, Cooyal over Mudgee, K over Dolgelly, JMS over Burindi, JKF over Kelvinside, Bugilbone; Collymongle, Combadello, Bairnkine, Merradool; GRLY, Moongulla, Hillstead, WW over Colly Creek, H and Co. over Wellsondonah, Murinbin, FSP (Wild Dog), GBB over Stirling, Currawinya over FCM; giewat, GBB over Alston, JE over Mnt. Harris; KHW/Nombi, G. N. M. and Co./Weelmoringle, K over Duckenfield, McK. Bros. over Namoi, Jakins over Woodstock, Barraba over WG; WW over Oakleigh (Walgett), GMG over Guigo (Condobolin), JPH over Mumbledool (Narrandera), Mulla (Trangie), SW over S, White over Charleville (Gular).

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

Fair shipments have been made during the week, four vessels clearing the Sydney Customs for the United Kingdom and Allies' ports, aggregating 12,021 bales. According to amended manifests and Customs returns, the total wool exported from Sydney to the United Kingdom and foreign ports from July 1 to November 30 aggregated 173,755 bales, and the total from Newcastle 820 bales. The vessels, with quantities and destinations for the week, and total for the season to date, compare with the corresponding period last year as follows:—

	Bales.
Moldavia, October 2, for London	1,002
Mashobra, October 5, for London	510
Port Phillip, October 6, for Genoa and Marseilles	8,709
Candia, October 7, for London	1,800
Total from Sydney since last review	12,021
Total from Sydney and Newcastle from July 1 last to date	186,506
Corresponding period last season	55,456

STOCKOWNERS' ASSOCIATION.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Stockowners' Association, Mr. J. M. Atkinson occupied the chair. There were also present Messrs. C. Binnie, J. B. Cramsie (Moree), W. F. Jaques (Bugilbone), E. Killen (Nimagee), W. W. Killen (Merribee), J. Mackay (Gunyerwarildi), and W. H. Wheatley (Goulburn). Apologies were received from Dr. N. W. Kater, Messrs. G. H. Gordon, Louis Leake, and A. E. Scott. Mr. J. M. Atkinson was re-elected president and Mr. C. Binnie, vice-president, for the ensuing year. Dr. N. W. Kater asked for nine months' leave of absence, owing to his departure to Egypt to work for the Red Cross Society. It was decided to grant the leave applied for, and, at the same time, forward the wishes of the association for Dr. Kater's safe return. The matter of the stoppage of the export of mutton by the Federal Government was discussed, and it was resolved that a deputation from the Stockowners' Association, in conjunction with the Pastoralists' Union and Farmers and Settlers' Association, wait upon the Hon. George Black, Colonial Secretary of New South Wales, to urge the immediate removal of the embargo. It was pointed out that Sydney frozen storage is limited in ordinary seasons, and in New South Wales mutton of good quality is coming into market in great quantities. Sheep vans have been ordered for more than twice the local requirements. This will mean the immediate lowering of prices if the frozen stores become congested, and it will be impossible to hold fat lambs longer than a limited period. It was resolved to call a special meeting of the council when the proposed Super Tax Bill is placed before the Legislative Assembly. The papers in connection with the resumption of the Breadalbane reserve are to be procured and submitted to the council at its next meeting.

EGG-LAYING COMPETITION.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION.

The Department of Agriculture advises that Mr. C. W. Burrows (assistant inspector of agriculture) will conduct a demonstration in clearing with explosives at the Government Forest Nursery, Gosford, on Friday, October 15, commencing at 2 p.m.

FORESTRY.

NARRABRI.—A conference of forest officers of the north-western districts was held here during the week, when a number of papers were read by different officers.

PARRAMATTA ORCHARD NOTES.

After the splendid prospects in the early part of the season of a bumper summer fruit crop, many of the growers have now to admit that their hopes will not be fully realised. Three or four reasons are assigned for the partial failure. In the first place, there was a very cold snap, and a few frosts in the period between the blooming and the setting of the fruit of some varieties. Then there has been the exceptionally dry spell, which has been in favour of thrips. Another reason is that boisterous winds have prevailed for about two or three weeks, almost continuously. Some of the fruit trees have suffered considerably, especially the plum trees. Some of the varieties of plums will be very scarce in the Cumberland district this season. Peaches, however, seem to have set particularly well, and, given seasonable showers during the next couple of months, the crop should turn out an excellent one, both as regards quality and quantity. The season seems to have been favourable for the apricots, most of the trees carrying very good crops. It is yet too early to form an estimate as regards the apples, but if rain does not soon come it is feared that the thrips will destroy the blossom.

Mr. C. C. Tucker, president of the Fruitgrowers' Association of New South Wales, is a firm believer that a system of cool storage will yet be evolved whereby it will be practicable to preserve all kinds of fruit for a sufficient length of time to enable growers to obtain the full benefit of their crops, enabling them to put away their surplus in order that the markets may be properly regulated. He has just lately been experimenting with some Fanny and Jonathan apples, and is particularly pleased with the result. The apples, which were grown in his orchard at Beecroft, were cased and placed in cool storage in February last, and at Easter time some of them were taken out and exhibited at the Royal Show. Then they were put back into cool storage, and a fortnight ago were again taken out and sold. They realised 12s per case, and when first placed in cool storage they were only worth about 6s or 7s per case. Compared with the recently imported American apples, they were superior, both in appearance and flavour. Mr. Tucker is convinced that the growers cannot only supply their own markets throughout the year, but, with proper packing and an even temperature in the cool chambers of the steamers, the fruit should be landed in England in perfect condition.

PERTH ROYAL SHOW.

PERTH, Friday.

The Royal Agricultural Show practically concluded to-day, when the proceeds were devoted to charities. The Governor's Cup, for the exhibitor securing the greatest number of prizes for stock, was awarded to Mr. W. Padbury, for the fourth year in succession.

EXPERIMENT GRASS PLOTS.

COOMA.—Mr. E. Breakwell, of the Department of Agriculture, paid a visit to Cooma for the purpose of establishing grass and clover plots. He is confident of obtaining good results from grasses suited to the climate, and is engaged in the problem of replacing barley grass by a better species.

CULLEN.—In loving memory of my dear husband and our father, Nisbet Cullen, who departed this life October 9, 1914, aged 54 years.
Far and oft our thoughts do wander,
To a grave not far away;
Where they laid our dearest father,
Just one year ago to-day.
Friends may think we have forgotten you,
When at times they see us smile,
But they little know what aching hearts,
Those smiles hide all the while.
Inserted by his sorrowing wife and children.

CULLEN.—In loving memory of my dear brother and our uncle, Nesbit, who departed this life on October 9, 1914. Inserted by his loving brother, A. Cullen and family.

EDWARDS.—In memory of my dear mother, who departed this life October 10, 1914.
I think of her in silence,
No eye may see me weep,
But many silent tears I shed
While others are asleep.
Inserted by her loving son, Herbert.

GEORGE.—In loving memory of my dear mother, Mary George, who passed away October 9, 1912. Her memory dwells within the hearts of those who knew her worth.
Inserted by her only son and daughter-in-law, James and Annie Arrowsmith.

HAMLYN.—In sad but loving memory of my dear husband, Dudley Hamlyn, who departed this life October 10, 1913, aged 27 years; also our baby, Gwen, who departed this life October 4, 1912, aged 13 months. At rest.
No pen can write, no tongue can say
How much we miss you day by day.

KRANZ.—In loving memory of our dear mother, who died October 7, 1914.
One day we'll meet our mother dear,
But in another sphere;
We know her soul is hovering near,
To us she is always here.
Inserted by her loving daughters, Nellie, Grace, and Louie.

McDONALD.—In loving memory of my dear daughter and our sister, Clara, who departed this life October 10, 1914.
Gone from this world of sorrow,
Gone from this world of pain;
Gone to meet those loved ones
Whom we all hope to meet again.
Inserted by her loving mother, sister, and brother, Mary Dark, Alice Johnston, and George Dark.

McDOWELL.—In sad and loving memory of Mary Louisa, who departed this life October 9, 1914. Inserted by her loving and lonely husband and only daughter, Thomas and Lillian.

McKENNA.—In loving memory of my dear wife and mother, who departed this life October 9, 1909.
Till death do us part,
Till death us unite.
Inserted by her loving husband and sons, Patrick and Peter.

McKENNA.—In loving memory of our dear mother, who departed this life October 9, 1909.

PARNELL.—In sad but loving memory of my dear mother, Ellen Parnell, who died October 9, aged 58 years.
Dearest mother, how we miss you,
None but our poor hearts can tell.
God has called you, we have lost you,
Only for a while, farewell.
Inserted by her loving daughter, Annie, and little grandson, Willie Pennington.

PARNELL.—In sad but loving memory of our dear mother, Ellen Parnell, who died October 9, 1910, aged 58 years.
Far and oft our thoughts do wander
To a grave not far away,
Where they laid our darling mother
Just five years ago to-day.
Inserted by her loving son, Alick, and daughter-in-law, Hannah and Alick Parnell.

PARNELL.—In affectionate and loving remembrance of my dear mother, Ellen Parnell, who departed this life at Redfern, October 9, 1910.
Dear is the grave where mother is laid,
Sweet is the memory that never will fade.
Will ever I forget her cheerful, smiling face,
Roses will wither, eyes cease to see,
If others forget you, never will we.
So calmly she is sleeping, with her son Alfred,
So peacefully in God's holy acre,
She is released from all sorrow, from toil, and from pain,
I miss you and mourn you in silence unseen,
And dwell on the memory of days that have been,
And God in His mercy will answer the rest.
Inserted by her eldest son, W. G. Parnell.

PARNELL.—In sad but loving memory of my dear mother, Ellen Parnell, who died October 9, aged 58 years.
The face I loved is now laid low,
The fond, true heart is still,
The hands that always helped me so,
Lie now in death's cold chill.
Inserted by her loving son, Fred. Parnell.

PARNELL.—In sad but loving memory of my dear mother, Ellen Parnell, who died October 9, aged 58 years.
My sorrow was great, my loss hard to bear,
God knows, I have lost a fond mother's care,
I mourn for you and miss you in silence unseen,
And dwell on the memory of days that have been.
Friends may think I have forgotten you,
When at times they see me smile,
But they little know what a broken heart
Those smiles hide all the while.
Fond, I have lost my soul's guardian,
A life linked with my own,
One in hope and love and feeling,
Death has parted us, now I am alone.
Inserted by her loving son, Jack Parnell.

IN MEMORIAM.

DR. PARKER'S
GREAT INDIAN
RHEUMATIC REMEDY.
SCIATICA AND STIFF JOINTS CURED.
Dear Sir,—I wish to acknowledge the benefits I have received from your Rheumatic Cure, and trust that this, my testimonial, may be the means of inducing other sufferers to try this out and out honest remedy for Rheumatism, instead of suffering untold pain, and wasting time and money on experimental treatment, the same as I did.
With me the pain was most severe in the Sciatic Nerve, and extended from the hip to the knee, and at times to the foot—sharp, stabbing pains. The knee joints were stiff, and I thought eventually I would be crippled. I tried Medicine, I tried Blisters, all of no use.
My nerves were run down, and I felt out of spirits, and depressed.
Dr. PARKER'S GREAT INDIAN RHEUMATIC REMEDY did me good from the first. I soon got relief. I persevered with the medicine, and after taking a few bottles I am thankful to say that I was freed from pain, and my health and strength were entirely restored.
I have recommended the medicine to other sufferers, and they, too, have derived great benefit from it. You are at liberty to use this in any way you may think fit.
(Signed) JOHN THOMAS JONES, Orchardist,
Sackville North.
Write for free Pamphlet (postage 5d) to F. PARKER, 9 Payten-chambers, 2 Bridge-street, Sydney (near Circular Quay); or send 5/6 to-day, and Medicine will be forwarded to any address.

FOLLOW GILGANDRA!

Great Britain has asked Australia to send more men to the front, and our Minister for Defence now makes a special appeal. In view of this, the new recruiting campaign which begins on Monday becomes specially important. An initial move, is, however, worthy of emphasis. There is a little town out west which is setting an example worth following. To our mind, the long route march from the western township of Gilgandra to Sydney, which begins to-morrow, is likely to be exceedingly useful as a stimulus to recruiting. The sight of these fifty or sixty men on their 320-miles tramp should fire the imagination of the young men in the numerous townships they will be passing through; and not the least important feature of the march—at a time when we hear so much about the evil effects of drink upon our young soldiers—is the watchword of "Follow the King." We cannot do better than follow Gilgandra. The idea that came to a man of imagination in our western country will, we doubt not, spread to other towns. It is like the Kyabram movement—it is destined to grow because it is a people's movement, because it comes at the psychological moment, and because it makes articulate the feelings of the whole community. It should be the aim of the Government to organise similar route marches from other country towns to Sydney. The total number of enlistments in Australia since the outbreak of the war is now nearing 150,000, but it is not enough. If it were 300,000 we could not say it was too much. Mr. J. C. Watson told but the simple truth when he said in England not long since: "The dominions are not simply assisting the mother country in the European war. They feel, each one of them, that they are also fighting their own battles for their own ideals—ideals of right and of personal and political liberty—against forces which, if victorious, would inflict a fatal and a world-wide blow at those ideals."

On Monday night the first meeting in connection with this campaign is to be held in the Sydney Town Hall, and the speakers will include the Governor-General, Sir Ronald Munro Ferguson, the State Premier, the Federal Attorney-General, and the Federal and State Opposition leaders. It is an unusual thing to find the King's representative, supported by representatives of the Government and of the Opposition, taking the public platform in this way, but the whole circumstances are unusual, and no man, from the King himself down to the humblest person in the land, can afford to remain idle when the fate of the Empire hangs in the balance. Sir Ronald Munro Ferguson has already proved himself a very effective "recruiting sergeant." We recall, for instance, the speech he made at the Highland Gathering in Sydney on New Year's Day. "We must bring into the line such masses of troops," said his Excellency, "as will be equal to those of our Allies, in order to render victory complete. God help us if we don't do that, or the year 1915 will be worse than 1914. Whatever a man can give he should give to the sacred cause of the Grand Alliance." Nine months have gone by, and victory is not yet in sight. In these nine months we have been able to realise something of the tremendous struggle that is going on, but we have not realised it fully. We have been able to realise what a gigantic machine the German army is, but we have not yet succeeded in raising men and munitions enough to smash it. In this distant part of the Empire we have sent our men to the war, and have seen many an Australian family plunged into mourning, but we have not done enough. In the first article of the "Round Table" just received, the following is written of the mother country: "We are now fighting the war with only half our national strength. One half of the nation, and that the smaller half, are submitting themselves to discipline and to separation from relatives and friends, are suffering untold hardship, pain, and, in great numbers are giving up their lives for their friends, while the other half are making no equivalent contribution to the common cause. That is broadly true, and, inasmuch as it is true, it must be changed. We owe it to ourselves, to our brothers at the front, and to our Allies, to put our whole national strength into this war." Great Britain has already created an army of three million men, but such are the needs of the moment, such is the strength of the enemy, that other millions are asked for, and the question of resorting to conscription has become a burning one. We should be sorry if the necessity for it arose, but we have got to win this war, and if other methods fail, then we may expect to see Lord Kitchener taking his courage in both hands, as Lincoln did, and call for compulsion. In the meantime, at his request, the Earl of Derby, whom we know as an advocate of national service, has undertaken the direction of army recruiting under the voluntary system—and we shall soon know whether that system is, or is not, adequate. Voluntaryism is on its trial. It is on its trial here as well as in the United Kingdom. And here, as there, we look to the trades unions, who are opposed to conscription, to prove that the voluntary system is adequate to meet the case.

We care not by what system they are raised, but we must raise more men. We prefer the voluntary system, but if that fails we shall have no choice. The nation has not lost the optimism with which it entered upon the struggle, but it has learnt that optimism of itself does not win wars. In the early days of the war we indulged in the pleasant theory that the Austro-German forces would smash up before the advance of the Russian "steam roller;" and we have indulged in other pleasant fancies that have come to nought. Russia has a grand army, and its recent victories in the east give us ground for hoping that her set-back is but temporary, but we cannot escape the fact that we must rely, not on Russia, and not on France, but on ourselves. We must gird on our armour and prepare for all emergencies. It is a question, as the British Prime Minister has said, not of personal prowess or of brilliant surprises, but of the steady and unsleeping organisation of the whole of the material resources of our community. That is what we would bring home to our people here—and especially to those who have the government of the country in their hands. We printed in yesterday's issue of the "Herald" the warning issued by Viscount Esher. There must be a spontaneous move on the part of the whole nation, or we shall be too late. The self-abnegation of every man and woman, the equality of sacrifice essential to victory, must spring at once into full and active life. "To waste precious hours and days when those who have influence and authority and divine gifts of speech should be walking barefoot through the streets preaching the gospel of self-sacrifice and of righteous resentment is sacrilege and unworthy of our fathers." Let us see to it that when our children have grown to be men they will not, looking back on these days, have cause to say that the steps we took to meet the great emergency were unworthy of their fathers.

GERMAN APOLOGISTS.

The eagerness of certain German newspapers to discover in the landing at Salonica a justification for the invasion of Belgium by their troops is typical of the mood displayed recently throughout Germany by the Government, by prominent men, and by the press. Since the capture of Warsaw there have been signs of a desire to abandon that attitude of moral self-sufficiency which ran throughout all the manifestoes and speeches addressed to the neutral world at the beginning of the war. There are certainly such notes of discord as the demand of junkers and manufacturers that peace shall not be concluded without the annexation of all the territory now occupied by the German armies, and a great deal which they are never likely to see. But, on the whole, the manifestoes of public bodies, the speeches of members of Parliament, and even the proclamations of the Emperor, show a desire to stand well with the people of other countries, and to dissipate the prevailing belief that the Germans are an inveterately aggressive people. The change may be ascribed to a variety of motives. Germans may very well be anxious to relieve such countries as Holland and Greece of the fear that the triumph of the Central Powers would mean either their absorption or their reduction to the status of vassals. It may indicate a realisation of the failure of Germany in all her attempts to govern alien races, or a genuine reaction against the ideals of that party which has for many years past promulgated the idea of an inevitable war, and in the crisis of last year did most to bring it about. More probably it is the outcome of a belief that the end of a successful campaign against Russia is the moment at which Germany should bring the war to an end, and that she is more likely to be able to do so if her conduct is shown to have been blameless and her ambitions not inconsistent with the safety and tranquility of her neighbours. In one of the now famous telegrams addressed by the Emperor to the Queen of Greece, in words that might have been taken from a Wagnerian libretto, he informed his sister of the triumphs of his conquering sword, of still greater triumphs to come, and of the permanent defeat of the Russian army, and he added, "The drama of the war draws near its end." We cannot tell whether the belief persists in spite of the successes of the Allies in the west, of the stand in the east, and of the defiant unity of the Russian people. But, no doubt, the words of the Emperor express the hopes of the more far-sighted among his subjects. In the words of a nation of shopkeepers, they desire to sell out at the top of the market. They are so deeply committed by their expenditure and their losses that they must fight to the last against unfavourable terms. But, immediate peace is what they need. That they may have the good opinion of the rest of the world they desire to prove that their conduct before and during the war has been that of a nation unjustly attacked, and that in the ensuing years their victory will tend to the independence and security of the neutrals, and of all but Great Britain among their enemies.

The German idea is expressed most summarily in the Emperor's declaration before Heaven that his conscience is clear, and that he did not will the war. The proofs of this state of mind are given in detail in the latest speech of the Chancellor, and in the official answer to the report of Lord Bryce's Commission. This answer is one of the most instructive documents yet issued. It proves that although German ambitions may change, their assumptions are unalterable. It will be remembered that in his speech on the Italian declaration, the Chancellor denounced Lord Bryce and his colleagues for accepting declarations from soldiers and refugees. In compiling this report, the German officials have followed exactly the same course. The difference between the two methods is that the Germans, with all their thoroughness, have not tested the evidence, nor have they been willing to consider the declaratoin of twenty Belgian witnesses when opposed by a single German officer. But no matter how they had weighed the evidence they would have reached the same conclusion. The doctrine of necessity explains every outrage as it justified the invasion. If twenty civilians are executed, it is enough for some corporal to say that a shot has been fired in the town, and that it may have been fired from a Belgian house. If a Belgian avenges an insult offered by some drunken brute to his sister, he must be murdered, lest the reputation of the army should suffer. These documents, and others like them, will always be instructive, because they disclose the defence on which the German Government has chosen to rely. But, even if the defence were legitimate, the documents would be answered by their historical context. Lord Bryce's report is corroborated by the French Commission, which relies on documents found on German soldiers, and are now collected in the Paris archives for all men to see. The desire of the Germans to do right by conquered peoples is attested by the order of Prince Rupprecht commanding the inhabitants of Warsaw to send him hostages who would be shot if the Russian Poles did not betray their country and help the German armies. The same, or a similar, context will always be read into the Chancellor's speech in which he attempted to defend the conduct of himself and the Emperor during the negotiations of last July. The most significant feature in the speech is its date. It is in substance an answer to the British White Book, and yet was not delivered until August of this year. It is an indispensable footnote to history, because it gives the contents of certain telegrams which were alluded to in the German White Book, but never disclosed. The Chancellor protests that he was telling the truth when he declared that the Court at Berlin urged counsels of moderation on Vienna. He gives the words of a telegram as to which there has been a great deal of discussion, because a copy was published in England on the Saturday before war was declared, and the original has never since been heard of. But the resurrection of the telegram does not help the Chancellor's case. The Chancellor now says that the telegram was sent to Vienna under a misapprehension, and proves thereby that on the day of the ultimatum to Russia he and his colleagues knew that Russia and Austria were on the point of coming to terms. The whole of the Chancellor's speech is an attempt to put Sir Edward Grey in the wrong, and to prove not only his own love of peace, but his power to direct the Government of the country. But the speaker was in the unhappy position of an advocate surrounded by facts which disprove his words. British Ministers, Liberal and Unionist, will have enough sins to answer for to their people when the war is over. They will have to defend themselves against the charge that though they knew Germany to be determined to secure her ends by war, they allowed their country to remain unprepared. That question will be debated when the facts are known, and the quarrel with this enemy of civilisation has been finally settled. The verdict of every neutral country on the conduct of the Germans has been already given. The latter may have spread terror by their threats and their example, and so have coerced neutrals into a timid peace. They will never persuade the world that their country is a fit neighbour for independent nations, or that she has any other desire than to impose her dominion on the rest of Europe.

PERSONAL.

VICE-REGAL.

His Excellency the Governor-General yesterday morning paid a visit to the Soldiers' Club, George-street, Sydney.

Her Excellency Lady Helen Munro Ferguson, accompanied by Lady Doris Blackwood, and attended by Captain Haskett-Smith, A.D.C., yesterday afternoon formally opened the fete held in the grounds of Leura, Bellevue Hill, the residence of Mr. and Mrs T. Knox, in aid of the Tanned Sheepskin Waistcoat Fund.

At a meeting of the Glebe Rowing Club on Wednesday last, Mr. Kelly (captain) presented the president, Mr J. A. Hogue, with a handsome memento to mark his 21 years' connection with the club as president. The memento was in the form of a silver shield, neatly ornamented, and supported by a pair of sculls.

Mr. E. P. Fox, the noted Australian artist, died in a private hospital yesterday in Melbourne, after an operation. His last work was a portrait of Sir John Forrest, which is to be hung in the Federal Parliament House.

"MEN ARE NEEDED."

WOUNDED CORPORAL'S APPEAL.

Writing to his wife from the hospital at Ghezireh, where he had just had a bullet extracted from his side, Corporal Eric Lorentzen, of Kensington, says: "The men are needed. We want all we can get, so if any young chap in Sydney can go and won't he ought to be horsewhipped. It is not such an easy job as they think it is. I think I am doing my duty here, and if every young man did the same it would soon be over; but I am not complaining—I would not have missed this for worlds. It is a life's experience."

OUR SOLDIERS GO.

Orion's jewels burn the sky,
The hot wind sears the night,
And lo, beyond, the shining cross
Those four fair stars of light!
Dear cross swing low,
Our soldiers go
Where seas roll dark to-night.
Swing low.

Swing low, for some would touch your stars,
Though some unheeding see
The beauty of that radiant cross,
High placed in mystery.
That mystic sign
By Will Divine,
Australia's flag to be!
Swing low.

Swing low and near to one that's dear,
And make the darkness bright.
Beneath your beams my soldier dreams
Of Honour, Love, and Right.
Dear cross swing low,
I love him so,
Oh, touch him with your light.
Swing low.

E. BEAUFILS LAMB.

HONOUR THE DEAD.

(FROM "LE TEMPS.")

The Chamber of Deputies (in Paris) has just carried the first reading of a bill which deserves more than simple mention. It is worth while to pause for a moment not only to honour the thought which has inspired the authors of the bill, but also to praise the dignity of the short speeches which were exchanged in the debate. The subject was a sad one, but where do we not find sadness throughout the past year? The proposal was to give to the soldiers fallen in battle a place of burial that will be peacable and secure in the neighbourhood of one of the battlefields—to all the British, Belgian, and French soldiers who have fallen on our soil. It was proposed to give it to them all without distinction—to those of them who are dear to us by the ties of blood or of race, and to those others who henceforward are united to us by the indissoluble bonds of the brotherhood of arms and of gratitude for the services they have rendered.

After the tumult of an engagement, sometimes while they are still threatened by the fire of the enemy, the survivors are accustomed to build some modest tomb for the soldiers who have just fallen, and to mark it by some token of their regard, which is soon lost, sometimes by branches which are scattered by the wind, sometimes by wild flowers, which soon fade. And then the countryside, the countryside transfigured by war (never has that piercing symbol of the great Belgian poet Verhaeren been more justly applied) will little by little resume its peaceful aspect. The careless upland, as M. Bonnevay said when he brought in the bill, will be turned by the humble ploughshare, lost in the melancholy plains of the Artois, planted on the shining crests of the Vosges, or blotted out in the stubborn thickets of the Argonne. In this war, where all names are lost, anonymity will follow the soldier even after his death. We shall not recognise the place where our own brothers have fallen; we shall not have the consolation of bringing them back to our own homes. "It will be a hard trial for many families," said M. Bonnevay, "not to be able to bring back the bodies of their soldiers who have fallen in battle to the field of rest where their own ancestors are sleeping." M. Bonnevay expresses in those words a thought which is common to all of us—Frenchmen, Belgians, and Britons are all possessed by a sense of individuality, by a dislike for communal living, which is always a little primitive and a little gross, and is so dear to the German heart. In his lifetime each man loves his own field, his own corner of the earth where he was born, which is his home, the home sweet home of the English song. Each man when he is no more wishes to sleep in the tomb of his fathers, beside those who have preceded him on the earth, near those who have loved him, and those who will come after him. He wishes in the mystery of the other world to feel them near him. That is the last and the supreme consolation of the men who have fought for us, and who have died for France. How many of them as they set out, and in setting out sacrificed their habit of life for the great family of Frenchmen, have told us that if they were to die they would like to come back and sleep their last sleep beside the little home which was theirs, in which they have shared in privacy all their joys and sadnesses, all their regrets, and also, alas, their hopes. For the sake of their memory and of their wish, because we love the liberty which bids us respect and obey their last desires, more than that false and cruel equality which would confound all the life-given distinctions of body and soul in one common vault, we would bring them back so as to have near us the dead who have protected us. There is no need for any ceremonies or any formalities to delay any longer their return, which will soften all our griefs.

With this reservation, the Government and the Chamber have obeyed a noble sentiment; the former in presenting, the latter in adopting, the bill which will increase the cemeteries held in common in the neighbourhood of the field of battle, and will create new sites if it be necessary, and by which at the same time the formalities of resumption will be shortened and simplified. "By this means," said one of the speakers, "the French Republic shows that she assures to all the soldiers of the French and allied armies whom the war has sent to rest on our soil an honourable burial in conformity with our liberal laws and with our ceremonial traditions." These simple words were spoken before a House which listened in attentive silence. The members of the Assembly, who came from all corners of France, and belonged to all professions, gave an exact representation of the life of the French people. They remembered that the sons of France, without distinction, have died to preserve her safety and the integrity of her soil, the charm of her race, and the living tradition which links one generation to another. In this circle, in this moment of time, there was truly a sacred union among Frenchmen. May it last, passionate and invulnerable, until the moment of victory. And when victory is achieved may it show us of what great things France is capable when she forgets her quarrels and neglects all sources of discord.

HOTEL HOURS.

TO BE DECIDED BY THE CAUCUS.

NINE OR TEN O'CLOCK.

The State Cabinet has decided to refer to a caucus meeting of the party the question whether the hours for the sale of liquor should be reduced by three. After prolonged and anxious deliberation, Ministers came to a decision amongst themselves that hotels should close at 10 o'clock instead of 9, as indicated by a resolution of the Legislative Assembly. The division among Ministers on the question of 9 or 10 o'clock was very close.

The Cabinet, however, did not wish to bind the party on a matt[illegible] is outside the party platform, and e[illegible] as it had been made an open question on the floor of the House. Once the caucus comes to a decision, the question will then be made a party one, and a Government bill will be introduced to amend the Liquor Act for the currency of the war. The question the caucus will be asked to decide is whether the closing hour should be 9 or 10 p.m. The Government proposal will be to open the hotels two hours later than at present, and close them an hour earlier, which would make the trading hours from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m.—14 hours in all.

It is not known whether the matter will be submitted at the next caucus meeting, which is fixed for Wednesday next. The Premier will on that day be away in connection with the recruiting campaign, and it may be that the party will be averse to coming to any decision in his absence, as he has been giving the matter close consideration. The State Cabinet will deal with this point on Tuesday. At present the Premier is in communication with the Minister for Defence to test the accuracy of certain representations made to him on behalf of the Temperance Alliance as to the prevalence of drunkenness amongst soldiers in camp, training for their military duties at the front. The Premier has been informed that about 1000 soldiers have been dealt with by the military authorities for insobriety, but, from the special police reports, Mr. Holman has found that the number of intoxicated men in khaki discovered at particular times when the constables on duty in the city were instructed to make a tally, negative the suggestion that drunkenness is rampant. The Premier will doubtless have precise information on the point from the Federal authorities to lay before members of the party to guide them to a decision on the question whether the hotels should close at 9 or 10 o'clock.

The Government proposal is to amend the Liquor Act in the direction indicated only during the currency of the war, the legislation to automatically cease on the declaration of peace.

44 HOURS.

THE BARRIER TROUBLE.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

A mass meeting of the underground men was held at the Trades Hall this morning in connection with the Saturday afternoon shift question. Last Sunday night's resolution—to continue the fight for a 44 hours' week—was confirmed, and committees and pickets are to be appointed at the mines working to-morrow afternoon. Central and South mines are not producing until Monday, but the resolution means that no men will be allowed to go underground on the other mines for to-morrow afternoon's shift.

BRITAIN'S REQUEST.

MORE MEN FROM AUSTRALIA.

DEFENCE MINISTER'S APPEAL.

INCREASING NEEDS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Acting upon a communication from the Imperial authorities, the Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) to-day stated that additional men were required for the Australian Imperial Forces. Instead of the 6500 monthly reinforcements which Australia has hitherto been sending forward, 9100 are required, beginning with December.

Senator Pearce's statement was as follows:—"The Army Council has asked us to increase our percentage of reinforcements for the Expeditionary Forces. We have been sending them forward in a proportion of from 10 to 15 per cent.—a total of about 6500 per month. It has now been asked that we shall increase this to 20 per cent., which will mean over 9000 a month.

"This intimation should stimulate recruiting throughout the Commonwealth, as it shows that the need for men is increasing rather than decreasing.

"It is of the utmost importance that our units at the front should be kept at their full strength. It is considered by military officers to be most unsound, and even dangerous, to have to group units that have fallen below their strength.

"I feel sure that the manhood of the Commonwealth will be capable of keeping up the requisite supply for the front."

APPEAL IN NEW SOUTH WALES.

When asked what steps would be taken to back the appeal in the Commonwealth, Senator Pearce said that the War Committee had planned a special effort before this communication was received from the War Council. This special effort, with his own appeal, would, he thought, meet the case. The question of organising recruiting had been referred by the Australian War Council to the State committees, which would do what was necessary in the way of organising recruiting campaigns. A campaign was beginning in New South Wales on Monday, and the other States would follow. The Assistant Minister for Defence (Senator Gardiner) was leaving to-day for Sydney to take part in the campaign, and he understood that the Federal Attorney-General (Mr. Hughes), and probably the other Assistant Minister (Senator Russell) would also take part.

Up to the end of September, continued the Minister, Australia had enrolled for active service 146,000 men. Of these, 83,357 had been sent to the front, and there were in training 63,257. The promise of the Commonwealth to send double reinforcements in October and November meant that of the men in training nearly 30,000 would leave within the next six weeks. The 20 per cent. asked for by the Imperial authorities is not on the whole of the 83,000 who have gone to the front. Large numbers of these men were sent away as reinforcements, and the increased reinforcements now required are for the original units of infantry, light horse, and artillery. Reinforcements for the Divisional Units are to be maintained as at present, although it is understood that the Imperial aphthorities suggested that they could be reduced. The total of 9000 monthly will be raised amongst the different States as follows:—Queensland 1150, New South Wales 3000, Victoria 3000, South Australia 1000, Western Australia 700, Tasmania 300.

EQUIPMENT.

This increase in the number of men going forward each month will mean considerable activity in all the branches of the Defence Department. Instructions have already been issued that will mean the making of arrangements to cover the growing demands. The quarter-master general's branch, whose duty it is to foresee requirements and to see that they are fully provided for, is, it was officially stated to-day, quite ready for developments. The manufacture of the leather portion of the infantryman's equipment has recently been undertaken at the Commonwealth harness factory, and a splendid article is being turned out. The leather is soft, and carries a good finish, and is held to be a great improvement on the imported equipment. The great advantage in the change is, of course, that the factory has unlimited raw material to work upon. The only difficulty that may arise in connection with the provision of this equipment is that the canvas for the haversack has to be imported. A shipment is already on the water, but its delivery is uncertain. The department, fortunately, has in stock a large supply of a material which can be used as a substitute. The factory is turning out 1200 sets of the equipment a week. Each set contains 25 buckles, and it is interesting to note that these buckles are also being made in Australia.

Increased activity in recruiting will also mean additional work for the contractors' branch, and the Director-General of the medical services will have to enrol more doctors and staffs for the enlarged medical units. The ordnance departments will also accelerate the deliveries of supplies.

METAL EXCHANGE.

PROVISIONAL COMMITTEE.

Following on the deputation which waited on him a couple of days ago, a meeting of those interested in the establishment of a Metal Exchange in Sydney was held in the room of the Federal Attorney-General, Mr. Hughes, yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Hughes pointed out that, on the occasion of the recent deputation the suggestion was made that a metal exchange should be established in Sydney as well as in Melbourne. The argument was that Sydney, as the capital of this State, which was a large producer of metals, should have that position to which it was entitled. The result was the present meeting, the business of which was to form a committee, which would be the nucleus of the metal exchange, and to consider the draft rules already drawn up by the Melbourne committee. He suggested that the committee should be representative of the various sections of the industry. There were the producers, the sellers, and the consumers to be considered.

After a good deal of general discussion, it was decided to appoint a provisional committee as follows:—Messrs. T. H. Kelly, Armstrong, and Baker, to represent the sellers; Messrs. Cawsey, Davidson, and Crane, to represent the consumers; Messrs. Garland, Saddington, and Palmer, to represent the producers. Mr. Georgeson was appointed secretary pro tem.

It was arranged that the committee should go through the draft rules prepared by the Melbourne committee, and put any suggestions they had to make before the Attorney-General at noon on Tuesday next.

Mr. Hughes briefly stated the objects of the Metal Exchange, and expressed the belief that the basic rules would be approved by every citizen of the Commonwealth. It was necessary that there should be a uniform set of rules for all Australia.

One of the rules is that no person shall be eligible for membership of the exchange unless he is a naturalised British-born subject, and domiciled in the Commonwealth.

Mr. J. N. Bartlett stated yesterday that in his opinion inadequate notice had been given to mine-owners regarding the meeting over which Mr. Hughes presided. As a result, he complained, the meeting was not representative so far as mine-owners were concerned.

GENERAL RYRIE.

Mrs. Ryrie has received a cable from her husband, Brigadier-General Ryrie, who was recently wounded, stating that the bullet has been extracted, and that "everything is all right."

ATTACK
SERVIA

BY AUSTRO-GERMANS.

ITALIAN ADVANCE.

THE FRENCH OFFENSIVE.

The Austro-Germans, who are attacking Servia, claim to have crossed the Drina, Save, and Danube rivers at many points.

A Servian communique says that an attempt by the enemy to cross the Save was repulsed.

The Franco-British troops landed at Salonica at 8 o'clock on Tuesday morning.

A French newspaper declares that the landing was effected just in time to prevent the Greco-Servian railways being held up.

A Berlin report says that Russian cruisers bombarded Varna (a fortified Bulgarian town on the Black Sea).

A Paris message, referring to the French offensive in the Champagne, states that there is now only the lower hill and some wooded country between Butte de Tahure (half way between Souain and Cernay) and the coveted German supply railway running parallel to the Champagne front.

It is unofficially reported that General Joffre does not intend to make a general assault, but, instead, is attacking at selected points. This, it is hoped, will disorganise the enemy's line, and finally result in its strategic piercing.

A battle is raging north-west of Dvinsk, where the Germans seized part of the Russian trenches.

An unofficial Rome message reports an important Italian advance towards Rovereto (13 miles south-west of Trent).

EASTERN FRONT.

VIOLENT FIGHTING

IN DVINSK REGION.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE VILLAGES.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 8.

A communique states: There is violent fighting north-west of Dvinsk, in the region of the great Greenvald, where the enemy seized part of our trenches. The battle continues. The heavy fighting south of Lake Bogoinskoje is imposing a heavy strain on both combatants. We seized the village of Koziany (north-east of Vilna) in a night attack on Wednesday, in which we captured three rows of trenches. The Germans concentrated a cross-fire, and subsequently compelled us to evacuate part of the position.

The communique records the capture of other villages, and closes by paying a tribute to the supreme courage of the troops in surmounting the obstacles with which the enemy barred the passages between the lakes. These feats were accomplished regardless of the trying conditions of autumn warfare.

GERMAN REPORT.

A German communique says:—Before Dvinsk we penetrated the enemy's positions over a front of five kilometres. South of Lake Drysviaty our fire destroyed a Russian brigade. The Russians attempted to break through between Lake Bogoinskoje and Smorgon (south-west of Vileika). It was a costly failure, and 1300 prisoners were taken.

Our land batteries in the Bay of Riga seriously damaged a Russian torpedo boat.

RECRUITING.

LABOUR LEADERS' EFFORTS.

The Trade Union Congress, the General Federation of Trade Unions, and the Labour party are elaborating an extensive plan of campaign to secure recruits. This last effort to prove the possibility of retaining the voluntary principle includes conferences with local trade unionists in various parts of the country, at which the responsibility of labour in the present emergency will be forcibly presented, also a comprehensive series of mass meetings in great industrial centres. Labour leaders express the opinion that the Government should furnish more information to enable the country to grasp the seriousness of the situation.

WESTERN FRONT.

FRENCH ATTACK

IN THE CHAMPAGNE.

GERMAN SUPPLY RAILWAY THREATENED.

PARIS, Oct. 8.

A communique states: Four counter-attacks against the positions we recently captured in the woods westward of the Souchez-Angres Road were completely repulsed.

The Germans in the evening resumed a furious offensive against the positions they lost northward of Tahure (half way between Souain and Cernay, and five miles south-east of Somme-Py). The attacks failed everywhere, with very heavy losses to the enemy.

AN IMPORTANT RESULT.

The "Daily Chronicle's" Paris correspondent says the capture of Tahure and a hill immediately north, called Butte de Tahure, is one of the important results of the resumption of the French offensive in the Champagne. The Plateau of Massiges is said to have been completely captured, and Souain and Perthes have been cleared of the enemy. On the west the Germans still hold Auberive, but have lost Matiques Farm, on the east. Presumably, they hold the hills south of Dormoise Valley. The capture of Tahure threatens them on both sides. It is a village of 200 inhabitants on a lonely crossroad. The capture of Butte de Tahure is most important. The French took the village with comparative ease, and before nightfall had crossed the Dormoise.

The men clambered up a sharp chalk slope despite a brisk fire from machine-guns, rifles, and concealed wire entanglements. Finally they established themselves on the summit, 300 feet high. Butte de Tahure commands the valley and lower hills for some distance on either side. Whether artillery commands the Bazancourt-Challerange railway is not clear, as there is a wooded hillside between, but it is certain the railway is threatened, and three tunnels at the nearest point, which the French will endeavour to destroy. The next German line northwards means a retreat of ten miles.

"THE NAUGHTY BOYS."

A famous African battalion known as "The Naughty Boys," which is composed of ex-prisoners, led the assault at Tahure. As usual, when a desperate enterprise is afoot, they sprang forward a few seconds after the artillery fire ceased. They found the barbed-wire entanglements broken down, but met with cruel rifle and machine-gun fire. Despite their losses, the line never faltered. When once at grips with the foe they speedily finished off the Germans. "The Naughty Boys'" battalion will be mentioned in Orders of the Day. Thousands of the enemy were buried in the ruins of the village and trenches on the height. The French artillery had not left a square yard untouched.

ABJECT TERROR.

The majority of the prisoners were in a state of abject terror. Many wept with relief when captured. Some were found chained to broken machine-guns. Tahure village is in ruins, but there was a vast labyrinth of underground defences created in cellars and joined up with armoured cement communication trenches, with honeycombed galleries upon Butte de Tahure. Here the Germans massed their artillery in redoubts. The French pushed their infantry attacks on both sides of the German position until they commanded the village and the hill on three sides. The artillery were able to prepare the way for the final assaults. There is now only the lower hill and some wooded country between Butte de Tahure, and the coveted supply railway.

FURIOUS ONSLAUGHTS.

General von Heeringen immediately realised the seriousness of the disaster, and initiated a series of furious onslaughts, which were carried out in massed formation. These broke before a withering French artillery and machine-gun fire, as did furious counter-attacks at Navarin Farm, to the west of Tahure. The desperate struggle for the German second line proves that the Germans cannot be driven out of France at a single stroke. Nevertheless, though it is a slow business extracting the Germans from their bomb-proof shelters, which are sometimes 30 feet deep, the very perfection of the trenches often turns to the disadvantage of the defenders. Many were caught like rats in a trap during the recent attacks. The dash of the French infantry was so impetuous that the Germans had no time to get out of their dug-outs.

JOFFRE'S INTENTION.

The public are now realising that General Joffre does not intend to make a general assault, but instead is attacking at selected points, which disorganise the enemy's line, and finally result in its strategic piercing. General Joffre has brought up many batteries of new heavy artillery, and has accumulated many millions of shells. All transport has been speeded up in order to ensure sufficient ammunition. Finally the armies destined to attack have been cured of trench staleness by leave and steady drilling.

EVERY MAN A HERO.

The Rev. Perry, chaplain of the Free Church of Scotland, writes: "Every man was a hero in the battle on September 25. One officer had a football on which the names of the men in his platoon were written. Getting on the top of the parapet he kicked off, crying, "Follow up, lads." The officer was immediately shot down, but the men won the position.

TERRIFIC EXPLOSION.

RECENT ITALIAN DISASTER.

MILAN, Oct. 7.

The explosion which recently occurred on the Italian battleship Benedetto Brin (13,214 tons) shook the buildings in Brindisi, and the fumes covered the town like a mist, causing a feeling of terror.

Admiral E. Rubin de Cervin had left a few minutes before the fire broke out, but promptly returned, and was holding a consultation with his officers in the saloon when the explosion occurred. The whole of the forward part was blown into the air, and a hail of splintered steel fell on the houses and streets. The greater part of the ship disappeared under water, which was not deep enough to submerge the whole vessel.

The Admiral and most of the officers perished. The larger magazines aft did not explode.

THE BALKANS.

ATTACK ON SERVIA

BY THE GERMANS.

KING CONSTANTINE'S ATTITUDE.

LONDON, Oct. 8.

The Balkan situation remains obscure. There is no indication of King Constantine's intention, though it is believed that he still adopts an attitude of benevolent neutrality towards Servia, and does not desire to obstruct the Franco-British force. British and French officers arrived at Salonica on October 1, and discussed the allied landing with the commander of the Third Greek Army Corps. When the matter was referred to M. Venizelos (ex-Premier), he conferred with the Ministers of the Entente, with the result that M. Venizelos registered his protest, which was not intended to impede the passage of the Allies, but to defend Greek sovereignty.

The news of the Austro-German offensive has aroused anxiety in Britain, France, and Italy, but it is recognised that the Servians are in a strong position on the lines where they inflicted a signal defeat on the Austrians a year ago.

Moreover, the valley of the Morava is flooded, and most of the roads are only fit for the passage of light Balkan ox-carts, of which the Austrians require 20,000 to revictual their armies.

SERVIAN CLAIM.

It is reported in Berlin that two Russian cruisers are bombarding Varna, a fortified town on the Black Sea in Bulgaria.

The Germans claim to have crossed the Drina, Save, and Danube rivers at many points.

A Servian communique says: An attempt by the enemy to cross the Save was repulsed Our artillery drove back an enemy battery from the Save. Twenty aeroplanes flew over the Lower Morava and Mlava, and dropped 30 bombs on Pojarevats (45 miles south-east of Belgrade), also three on Grotzka (15 miles south-east of Belgrade), but there were no casualties. We repulsed an attempt to cross the Save opposite Banovo Brodo.

LANDING AT SALONICA.

The allied troops are landing and departing rapidly towards Servia. The whole operation is merely an orderly transit through Greece.

An Athens message states that the Allies' detachments landing near Salonica are encamped on the territory ceded to Servia after the 1913 treaty as a site for stores. They will proceed as quickly as possible to Ghevgheli on the railway line which runs north-west through Servia to Mitrovitsa).

"Eye-Witness" at Salonica describes the arrival of the great trans-Atlantic liners at 8 o'clock on Tuesday morning. They were followed by smaller transports with war material. Destroyers escorted them into the harbour and warships guarded the entrance. The landing began on the western side of the harbour at 9 o'clock. On the opposite quay were Greek transports with troops from Piraeus (the seaport of Athens). The landing proceeded swiftly. The first gun was landed at 9.30. The soldiers, headed by drummers and trumpeters marched to their prepared camp, through lines of curious, silent spectators.

The Paris "Journal" states that the Allies landed at Salonica just in time to prevent the Greco-Servian railways being held up. Orders were sent from Berlin directing that all the rolling stock and engines of two Austrian-owned lines must be sent to Bulgaria. The track was already torn up at several points by Austrian emissaries. The Greek Government sent M. Diamantides, Minister for Communication, to Salonica, fully empowered to deal with the situation. He immediately ousted the foreign directors and installed Greeks in their place.

It is reported from Budapest that wholesale arrests of the leaders of the Agarian party in Bulgaria have commenced. The Government has announced that it is prepared to take the sternest measures to crush attempts to impair Bulgarian unity.

NEW GREEK CABINET.

The new Greek Cabinet comprises:—M. Zaimis (Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs), M. Gounaris, ex-Premier (Interior), M. Yanakitsas (War), M. Theotokis (Instruction), and M. Rallis (Justice).

BULGARIAN PREPARATIONS.

The Bulgarians have had all the houses on the shore at Dede Agach evacuated. They are arming the forts with powerful guns, and are laying a double row of mines off the port.

Dede Agach is full of troops, which have been stiffened by the inclusion of German officers and non-coms. It is stated that there are 5000 of them in the Bulgarian Army. Bulgarian mobilisation is actively proceeding.

Germany gave a formal assurance that Bulgaria would not attack Greece, and would not attack Servia until Servia had been crushed by Germany.

Bulgaria, in replying to the ultimatum and the Notes by the Entente, again explains the essence of her neutrality, emphasises the possible dangers from the fresh encouragement given the Servians, and categorically rejects the accusation concerning the presence of German and Austrian officers in the Bulgarian Army, declaring that she cannot send away non-existents.

A Rome message states that the Bulgarian Minister has been handed his passports.

It is reported from Sofia that the Servian Minister has asked for his passports.

The "Politiken" (Copenhagen) says the Greek crisis has created a pleasant surprise throughout Germany, where it is thought the Kaiser has interfered at the last moment. One section of the newspapers proclaim the failure of the Allies' Balkan policy, but others regard the resignation as a manoeuvre, and hint that King Constantine may be playing a dangerous part.

TROUBLE IN ALBANIA.

Advices from Durazzo state that Said Pasha shot thirty inhabitants, acting as Austro-German agents, who were endeavouring to stir up trouble. The execution has impressed pro-German Albanians.

SUBMARINE WAR.

TWO STEAMERS SUNK.

LONDON, Oct. 7.

The British steamer Arabia has been sunk. Twenty of those on board were saved.

The Dutch steamer Tekelstroom has been sunk. Twenty of the crew are known to have been saved.

THE ITALIANS.

IMPORTANT ADVANCE.

TOWARDS ROVERETO.

ROME, Oct. 8.

News has been received of an important advance towards Rovereto (13 miles south-west of Trent). The Italians have been investing the fortifications at Dossdisomme and Sommoalto for six weeks, and a methodical bombardment of the forts has continued uninterruptedly. Every fortification is now smashed to pieces, and the Italians can view Rovereto from the summit of their new position. They have commenced the bombardment of the fortifications at Mount Finocchio (four miles east of Rovereto), which is the last of the Austrian defences near Rovereto. The Austrians are compelled to pour in a stream of reinforcements to oppose the steady pressure of the Italians.

THE KING'S SPUR.

King Victor Emmanuel, while visiting the Isonzo front, left his motor car to witness the fight at close quarters on horseback, though warned of danger from the Austrian artillery. Suddenly a shell exploded and wounded the King's horse. King Victor Emmanuel calmed the emotion of his suite, and directed that the horse should be sent to the Blue Cross. When recommended to retire the King quickly asked for another horse, and rode forward to the troops. The latter, shouting "Savoia!" charged and took the enemy's position. The spot is now called "The King's Spur."

THE DARDANELLES.

SIR IAN HAMILTON'S REPORT.

LONDON, Oct. 7.

Sir Ian Hamilton reports:—During the past month fighting at Suvla Bay has not been on a scale calling for special report. Every night there have been patrol actions and bomb attacks, resulting in our gaining an average of a little over 300 yards along the whole centre of four miles of the Suvla Bay front.

GERMAN LOSSES.

AN ITALIAN ESTIMATE.

ROME, Oct. 7.

Military experts estimate the German losses during September at 300,000 in Russia and 100,000 in France.

The Austrian losses are estimated at 250,000, including 80,000 prisoners.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

The Wesleyan Conference has granted the Commonwealth free use of the Westminster Training College for the military and medical departments of the Commonwealth Service. The personnel of these branches now numbers 250.

Enormous dealings have taken place in Wall-street, New York, exceeding 11,500,000 dollars (about £2,300,000) daily. Banks and financial houses are alarmed at the wild speculation, and are exerting pressure to diminish gambling. Bethlehem steel, which was 30dol. a year ago, is now 400dol.

A Copenhagen message states that German shipping in the Baltic is practically suspended owing to the fear of British and Russian submarines.

It is reported from Paris that M. Thomas (Under-Secretary for War), as the result of conferences with Mr. Lloyd George, has arranged for joint purchases of raw materials, and the exchange of machinery and material which can be used to better purposes in the respective countries; also for the export of partly-manufactured articles, which could be better completed in one country owing to specialisation in the workshops.

WAR NOTES.

SCANT NEWS FROM THE FRONT.

No definite news of outstanding importance had come to hand from any of the various theatres of war up till midnight. Severe fighting is still in progress in the Champagne district, but it begins to look as though the French, having captured Tahure and the hill to the north, will for a while be fully occupied in dealing with the German counter-attacks. These latter will naturally be more and more determined the closer the French draw to the coveted lateral railway behind the German lines. There is still not a word from the British section of the line. Upon the greater part of the Russian front, also, a curious silence seems to have fallen. The only fighting dealt with in the cables is that in the neighbourhood of Dwinsk, where a kind of see-saw combat is being waged, with the Germans and the Russians each taking the offensive at different points. It is significant that the over-worked phrase about "pursuit" of the Russians has at last been definitely dropped from the German communiques. The general immobility of the line has been so patent for so long that even the effrontery of German official despatch-writers has given away before it. From the Italian campaign there comes news of a distinct step towards Rovereto, in the Trentino. The Italians, it appears, are now bombarding the Austrian positions on Mount Finocchio, which lies about four miles east of the city. Gratifying as this advance it, it has not any immediately vital bearing on the general Italian campaign. No dramatic developments can be looked for from the Italian offensive in the Trentino—it is a signal Italian success in the eastern theatre, on the Isonzo, that the the whole world is awaiting.

THE BALKANS.

Turning to the Balkans we have a German claim that Austro-German forces have crossed the rivers Drina, Save, and Danube, three waterways which make up part of the western and northern frontiers of Servia. On the other hand, there is an official message from Servia which declares that some attempts on the part of the enemy to cross the Save have been definitely repulsed. Belgrade doesn't even mention any fighting on the Drina or the Danube. In view of the importance attaching to the Austro-German offensive we would almost certainly have received confirmation of the Berlin report from other sources if confirmation had been possible. On the face of it, there appears to be some reason to believe that the big Austro-German move has not yet been launched, and that any clashes that have taken place have been the outcome of reconnaissances and feints. Another Berlin report states that two Russian cruisers have bombarded Varna, the Bulgarian port on the Black Sea. This also lacks confirmation, and, until we receive something about it from other than German sources, it would be as well to accept it with considerable reserve. As far as we can judge, matters in relation to Bulgaria are now on a very delicate balance, and Berlin would certainly not be above a little judicious manipulation of the news agencies in order to force on a crisis favourable to herself.

THE VEIL OF SECRECY.

Now that Bulgaria is apparently about to step into the field of battle, it is of interest to recall that in the first Balkan war she set the nations a striking example in the way of keeping a veil of secrecy over her military operations until each successive phase was complete. Lieut.-Colonel Reginald Rankin, one of the "Times" special correspondents, tells how, when he and other correspondents reached Mustapha Pasha early in that war, they interviewed General Ivanoff, and found that none of them were to be permitted to go more than two kilometres on the road to Adrianople. "This was the first intimation," he says, "from a reliable authority, that the old business of war correspondence was at an end. It was something of a shock. Here were we, having travelled thousands of miles and spent hundreds of pounds on our papers' account, within 10 miles of an epoch-making siege, yet forbidden to travel those last essential kilometres. This plaint is now so stale that I shall say no more, except that the unqualified success of the Bulgarian demarche in preventing the leakage of information valuable to their enemy has undoubtedly established a precedent which will be followed in all future wars. The war correspondent as we have known him is no more." We have only to look back over the past twelve months, with all the blind gropings for facts which they have entailed, to realise how perfectly true were Lieut.-Colonel Rankin's words.

ATTACHES KEPT IN THE DARK.

We can detect a distinct echo in France today of some further remarks by Lieutenant-Colonel Rankin regarding the Bulgarian methods: "Of the Bulgarian losses in the series of engagements which led to the capture of Kirk Kilisse," he wrote on another occasion, "I am unable to give any idea. Captain Jostoff certainly gave us no idea. It was part of the deliberate policy of the Bulgars, part of that reasoned and consistent theory of warfare which raised them at one blow to the position of a first-rate military power, to maintain absolute secrecy on all matters the publication of which might prejudice their fighting efficiency. No lists of dead and wounded were ever issued; mothers and wives only knew that their sons and husbands would never come back to them again if they received a scrawl from a comrade who saw his comrade fall. . . . But the foreign military attaches were treated a great deal worse than the correspondents. They followed the operations at a distance that was hardly respectful. When all the interest had completely evaporated from any particular place the attaches were sent thither. They were herded about like sheep. Distinguished professors from the Staff College gave them elaborate lectures, which contained few grains of truth. One day, during the progress of an admirable disquisition on the site of a very old battlefield, one attache was observed to quit the group of attentive listeners, and walk rapidly away. Scraps of his soliloquy floated back to the entranced audience sitting at the feet of Gamaliel: 'Lies, lies, lies,' it sounded like, 'lies from beginning to end.' When the Roumanian attache expressed his feelings with no uncertain voice he was promptly told that the Bulgars had not the slightest intention of letting him see how they made war. Shortly afterwards he went back to his native land." It will doubtless be somewhat profitable if the reader will bear these things in mind in the coming days.

SALONICA.

Salonica, the port where the Allied Expeditionary Force has landed, is the ancient Thessalonica, to whose inhabitants, Biblical students will remember, St. Paul addressed the two "Epistles to the Thessalonians." Until it surrendered to the Greeks on November 8, 1912, the city had been in the hands of the Turks since 1430. Although attacked often by Bulgaria and Servia, it had never belonged to either. The city lies on a crescent of low hills facing the Gulf of the Aegean, to which it gives its name, and a little to the eastward of the mouth of the Vardar, the ancient Axios, the chief river of Macedonia, down whose valley runs the railway which connects the Danube with the Aegean. It is a portion of this line, just north of the Greek border, that some of the Allied troops are now said to be guarding. Salonica boasts the best harbour in the Balkan Peninsula. The population, according to the latest available statistics, is 121,600, including 60,600 Jews, who regard themselves as of Spanish origin dating from 1571, and speak a corrupt Spanish among themselves. There are also about 20,000 Moslems included in the population. Salonica is one of the two heads of the great railway which runs through Central Europe from Paris, by Vienna, Budapest, and Belgrade, the other terminus being Constantinople. It is the nearest good European haven to the ports of Asia, of Africa and of Australasia. If the Greeks utilise its natural advantages to the full, Salonica, by reason of its close connection with Paris and Hamburg, is looked upon as being destined to become perhaps the very first port of the Mediterranean. For the moment, however, we are more concerned with its military than its commercial importance—and from its bearing upon the Servian campaign the advantages accruing from the use of it by the Allies cannot possibly be over-estimated.

FEDERAL FINANCES.

INTERESTING ITEMS OF EXPENDITURE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Details of the Commonwealth finances for the year ended June 30 last reveal some interesting facts. The Parliamentary trip to Norfolk Island at Eastertime cost the country £249; £3087 has had to be paid to repatriate the coloured crews of German vessels detained in Australian ports; the cost of sending Messrs. Elliot Johnson and Bamford to the New Hebrides, to report on the postal communication of that country, was £506; and £11,139 was spent on the Papuan oilfields, in addition to £18,567 the previous year. Customs and excise receipts show that had it not been for the largely increased revenue from stimulants and narcotics the falling-off in the aggregate income of the department, which was £104,000, would have been much greater. Customs receipts on stimulants amounted to £2,899,539, as against £2,810,222 for the previous year; and on narcotics, £1,257,181, as against £1,175,404. The increase in excise payments is even more pronounced. Receipts on beer were £1,205,000, as against £792,242; and on spirits they were £514,794, as compared with £421,507. The figures for tobacco were £1,042,884, as against £937,292. The tariff on stimulants and narcotics, it is calculated, will bring in about £105,000 a month more than formerly.

SOLDIERS AND DRINK.

In connection with recent comments which have been made in the daily press regarding the demoralising effect of the presence of inebriated soldiers in our city streets, it is pointed out by the Chief Secretary that the evil lies primarily not in any laxity of administration of the liquor laws by the police, but in the misguided hospitality of our citizens towards the soldiery.

Ever since recruiting for the Australian Imperial Expeditionary Forces began special action has been taken by the police to enforce the provisions of the Liquor Act, and at the present time plain clothes police regularly visit licensed premises, and exercise all possible supervision over the conduct of their frequenters. But it is still to be regretted that citizens will persist in prevailing upon soldiers to partake of liquor after, in many instances, the men are beginning to show signs of its influence, but not sufficiently so as to justify arrest.

Special arrangements have been made for supervising the sale of liquor to soldiers both at Liverpool and in the city.

GOVERNMENT'S CRITICS.

PREMIER'S REPLY.

Referring last night to the criticism directed against the Government during a discussion on Thursday evening at the Trades Hall on industrial legislation, the Premier said he would leave his colleague, the Minister for Labour and Industry, to reply to the remark that the Industrial Arbitration Amending Bill must have been framed in a lunatic asylum.

"Had I the tongue of angels," said Mr. Holman, "I should not find it using the language which, I feel sure, rises spontaneously to the lips of my colleague when he hears of this criticism upon his handiwork. But, speaking seriously, I can only say that Mr. Estell is one of the most stalwart unionists in Australia, and that he has had practically a free hand and the cordial support of all his colleagues in any measures he has seen fit to introduce. If the Arbitration Amendment Bill has been delayed it is only because, in the judgment of Mr. Estell, who is a unionist of many more years standing than most of his critics, certain other measures were more urgent."

FOR MUNITIONS.

MOLYBDENITE AND WOLFRAM

SUPPLIES REQUISITIONED.

Mr. Hughes, the Federal Attorney-General, stated yesterday that, acting under instructions from the British authorities, the Commonwealth Government recently requisitioned all supplies of molybdenite and wolfram for munitions purposes. The prices fixed by the British Government were 105s per unit 90 per cent. molybdenite and 55s per unit 65 per cent. wolfram. These conditions were found by experience to be unsuitable for some of the Australian ores, and, as a result of representations made, the Imperial authorities have now agreed to modify them. Lower grade ores will now be accepted and paid for pro rata on the above basis.

Wolfram ores containing more than ½ per cent. bismuth will also be taken, and payment will be made for the value of the bismuth, less cost of treatment.

With regard to mixed ores containing less than 50 per cent. molybdenite or wolfram, arrangements have been made for the sale of these, and producers or agents may forward same to Messrs. Dalgety and Co., or make what other arrangements for their disposal they think proper, subject to the rules of the Metal Exchange.

THE COLLIERIES.

CONFERENCE IN SYDNEY.

AGREEMENT IN SIGHT.

There is every indication that the threatened trouble in the coal trade of New South Wales will be averted. Following the compulsory conference which was held in Melbourne before Mr. Justice Higgins, a friendly conference was held at the Sydney offices of Pitt, Son, and Badgery, Ltd., yesterday afternoon. Representatives were present from the Northern Colliery Proprietors' Association, the Australasian Coal and Shale Employers' Federation, and the Colliery Employers' Federation of the northern district.

Mr. John Brown represented the association and the firm of Messrs. J. and A. Brown, and Mr. N. J. Clarke was present as the secretary of the association. Mr. M'Donald, of Melbourne, was present in an official capacity. Others proprietors were represented by Mr. Jeffries (Abermain), Mr. R. A. Harle (Hebburn, Ltd.), Mr. Duncan M'Geachie (Caledonian Coal Company's collieries), and Mr. H. M. Williams (Stanford Merthyr). The miners were represented by Mr. J. Badley, president of the C.E.F. and the new federation; Mr. A. C. Willis, secretary of the Illawarra Miners' Association and secretary of the federation; Mr. Amram Lewis, treasurer of the C.E.F.; and Mr. W. Brennan, the secretary.

The miners made application for a 20 per cent. increase in the wages paid to underground employees and 26 per cent. for top hands. These increases were not wholly agreed to, but a strong effort was made by the representatives of the men to level up the north top hands to equal those of the south. The way was paved for an amicable settlement.

It is understood that the Southern Coal-owners' Association is agreeable to confer with the South Coast mining officials next week, probably on Wednesday.

Some proprietors not in the Newcastle or South Coast districts were reported to have concluded agreements with their miners.

When the conference terminated last night there was hope that other agreements were in sight of being reached, but no official statement could be made until the meeting of the adjourned compulsory conference.

P. AND O. OFFICER HONOURED.

Among recent recipients of the Distinguished Service Cross is Lieutenant Arthur Cyril Brooke-Webb, R.N.R., who as an officer of the P. and O. service is well known to many Sydney families. Lieutenant Brooke-Webb left the service of the company for a responsible appointment under the Whangpoo River Conservancy at Shanghai, China, and on the outbreak of war was appointed to H.M.S. Triumph. He was on that ship when she was sunk by a submarine, and has now been appointed commander.

For several years past Lieutenant Brooke-Webb has acted as a correspondent of the British Immigration League, in whose operations he has taken an exceptional interest.

UNIVERSAL SERVICE.

The suburban campaign of the Universal Service League opens at Randwick on Monday evening, when a public meeting, convened by the Mayor, Alderman F. H. Clark, will be held in the local Town Hall. The main object of the meeting is to form a branch of the league. The Mayor has consented to take the chair, and among the speakers will be Mr. F. E. Winchcombe, M.L.C., Mr. David Storey, M.L.A., Mr. George Lewis, J.P., and Mr. J. R. Wallace, captain of the Randwick Rifle Club.

OIL MONOPOLY.

BRISBANE, Friday.

The Government has announced its intention of creating an oil monopoly in Queensland. A bill is in preparation, for introduction at an early date, to carry out the proposal.

ENEMY CONTRACTS.

RUNNING INTO MILLIONS.

STATEMENT BY MR. HUGHES.

HOW THE CITY COUNCIL WAS BLUFFED.

The Federal Attorney-General, Mr. Hughes, who has been closely investigating the ramifications of German firms, made an interesting statement to a "Herald" representative yesterday relating to enemy contracts in Australia.

"When the war broke out," said Mr. Hughes, "German control of trade and industry in the Commonwealth was very widespread, and gaining rapidly. Not the least significant evidence of this fact is furnished by the number of contracts entered into by Government, municipal, and other public bodies with German firms for the supply of large quantities of material. It would really appear as though the public activities of Australia were unable to be satisfactorily supplied excepting through German sources.

"In the aggregate, contracts amounting to some millions had been entered into when war was declared. Many of these were with the Australian Metal Company, which is the Australian agency of the Metal Gesellschaft and the great Merton group of Frankfort-on-Main. It may be, of course, that the name "Australian" misled some of our public bodies. Whether that is so or not, the fact remains that the Commonwealth, State, and municipal authorities alike had entered into very large contracts.

"Another firm wholly German, although registered in Great Britain, is that of Siemens Bros. The Victorian Government has a contract with this firm for the electrification of its suburban railway system. The amount involved is over £500,000. The City Council of Sydney also has large contracts with this firm, and the question now is whether to allow these part-performed contracts to be completed, or, by prohibiting the importation of further supplies, to cut them off in their unfinished state.

"The position is most difficult. It is, however, not without its humorous side. The City Council of Sydney called for tenders for the supply of an electric storage battery, and two tenders were sent in, one from the Australian Metal Company, and the other from the Tudor Accumulator Company. The council decided to award the contract to the Australian Metal Company, on the ground—to quote its own letter—that the Australian Metal Company was an Australian concern.

"When the war was declared the Australian Metal Company, which saw the stormy weather ahead, and knew that sooner or later its disguise would be penetrated, became aware that it could not carry out its contract, and arranged that the erection should be carried out by the Tudor Accumulator Company, which is also wholly German. Thus the council of the loyal city of Sydney awarded, after much cogitation, the contract in the first instance to the Australian Metal Company, a purely German concern, with nothing Australian about it but the name, and when war breaks out virtuously proposes to transfer the contract to the Tudor Accumulator Company, which is also German. Great is Diana of the Ephesians!"

THE TERRITORY.

SYDNEY TO DARWIN.

RAILWAY LINE ADVOCATED.

"If that line had been already built I have no hesitation in saying that a million head of cattle and the same number of sheep would have been saved this year," said Mr. Sidney Kidman yesterday, referring to the scheme submitted some three years ago by Mr. Waddell, M.L.A., for a through railway from Sydney to Darwin, via Bourke and Camooweal, as an alternative to the transcontinental railway from Oodnadatta, the present South Australian terminus, to Darwin. Putting the cattle at £5 a head—a low estimate now—the loss of a million head meant the loss of £5,000,000, and the sheep would mean another £1,000,000.

Mr. Kidman said that in many parts the drought was still raging, and stock were still dying in large numbers because they could not be got away owing to the lack of railway communication. He himself had lost between 50,000 and 60,000 head of cattle. The drought had within the past fortnight broken over a great area in the central positions. As a South Australian the continuation of the line from Oodnadatta would suit him best, as far as his personal interests were concerned, but Mr. Waddell's route was the best in the interests of the people at large. The route outlined was from Bourke to Hungerford, thence to Tobermary, Windorah, Boulia, Urandangie, Camooweal, and on to Pine Creek railway station, in the Northern Territory. The line would be almost a direct track from Sydney to Darwin, and would place the settlers of the Northern Territory in the position of having a railway direct to the greatest market in Australia—Sydney. Instead of taking many months to get their stock to market, they could be sent in a few days. That would be the greatest way to encourage the settlement of the Territory.

"It is no use" said Mr. Kidman, "the Government thinking of making the Territory an agricultural country. Nature has not designed it for agriculture, but it is designed to be the great cattle land of Australia, and if settlement is given a chance by having a railway to the market the Territory could supply Sydney and Melbourne and other big cities with all the beef they wanted, and with millions of fat sheep also every year. The railway would pay for itself, and be a permanent asset, while any other attempts to settle the Territory will only mean great waste of money. The Federal Government should also let the land in large areas, because it requires much capital, on long, secure tenure at reasonable rents, but with a provision in each lease that the lessee must fence the land and conserve water, and stock it within a reasonable period. There is no use in letting men hold it who will not improve it. I have a number of boring plants hard at work boring for water on my stations. With plenty of water and the railway mentioned, losses in stock would be enormously reduced. If losses of stock could be minimised 30s a cwt for beef would pay better than £3, when owners have to get out through drought, and often lose half or more of their stock. It is in the interests of the consumer as much almost as the grower that these great losses of stock periodically should be minimised.

"Often when Sydney and other places in Eastern Australia have been short of sheep and cattle through the western stock routes being closed by drought great numbers of fat cattle were locked up in the far north-west, and could not be got to southern markets. If a railway now existed from Bourke up through Western Queensland, it would enable stockowners to save hundreds of thousands of sheep and cattle, because many parts of New South Wales have grass going to waste. In the same way 12 months ago, when stock were starving in New South Wales, there was plenty of grass in Central and Western Queensland, but there being no direct railway communication with Central and Western New South Wales stockowners had to get out, and many of their stock died, and now as a consequence people have to pay higher prices for mutton and beef. This railway, too, if made, would be a direct route to Darwin for mails and fast passenger traffic from Sydney and other populous centres in South-eastern Australia, and would save about a week in the journey to Java, where there is probably now nearly forty millions of people. The New South Wales railway gauge of 4ft 8½in should be the gauge right through from Bourke to Darwin. The country being so level, and there being so few rivers, the line would be the easiest and cheapest per mile to construct. Of course, till the war is over and money gets more plentiful, this work cannot now be considered; but the pity was it had not been started three or four years ago. In future years it would, too, serve as the direct military route from the big centres of population in South-eastern Australia to Darwin."

LONE PINE.

THE FIRST BRIGADE BATTLE.

A WONDERFUL SCENE.

(FROM CAPTAIN C. E. W. BEAN, OFFICIAL PRESS REPRESENTATIVE WITH THE AUSTRALIAN FORCES.)

GABA TEPE, Aug. 16.

It used to stand on the edge of the 400 plateau—a solitary little pine tree, on the edge of the heath. I remember seeing line after line of men sweeping across part of that heath-covered tabletop. During the second afternoon, in the face of fierce shrapnel and machine gun fire of the Turks, the fight ebbed backwards and forwards for hours, until finally the lines crystallised across it. We could see daily growing heavy parapets of sand—at some places almost high enough for a railway cutting. We often wondered what was behind them, and then some unseen worker came burrowing out from them towards us, at two or three points, as a mole might burrow, each burrower throwing out sideshoots, which linked it up with the other burrows, until, instead of one trench in front of the lonesome pine tree, there were at least three that we could see, and goodness knows how many tunnels and dugouts and communication trenches that we could only guess at. And as we were burrowing out, too, the stretch of heath between our first lines became daily narrower, until it averaged about a hundred yards in width. The lonesome pine still stood out of the background, behind the white line of the Turkish dump—tattered relic of the greenery that once flourished there. It had long since lost its bark, and all except one broken remnant of a branch. About the beginning of August it disappeared. Possibly one of our howitzer shells struck it down. A few days later, when it was decided that some heavy blow must be dealt at the Turkish army opposite Anzac—something that would really hurt the Turk, and make him rush his reserves down to the southern end of his line, while column after column of our own troops was stealing out into the foothills to the north—it was determined to send the First Australian Infantry Brigade against Lonesome Pine.

LIKE A GAME OF DRAUGHTS.

The attack was timed for 5.30 in the afternoon, and from half-past 2 onwards the battalions were marching into place. The trenches at Anzac resemble the rambling corridors of some great old-fashioned home more than anything else that I know of, with little dugouts in them instead of rooms—shells and niches, blinded with a waterproof sheet, from which in normal times there often protrudes the foot or the arm of some worn-out private, snatching a couple of hours' sleep between the fatigues. There are little by-passages, leading past a dim cellar, which is the company headquarters, or past a dug-out crammed to the mouth with files of pink and white message forms—battle headquarters—there are blind alleys leading to communication trenches. The moving of a brigade into place, ready to rush from the front of the lines, is like taking the move in a game of draughts. For the whole afternoon one met strings of men filing in and out of these deep, narrow passages in the red soil—strings filing east, strings filing west, strings filing across them. There was a certain open meeting of the ways, where for an hour I sat and watched them winding their different ways—being passed through, and held up, and passed through again, exactly like the traffic in front of the Bank of England.

Far on the sea below there was a certain cruiser—an old friend. She cruised slowly up the gulf, and then another swam round in a wide, slow circle, and poked her nose straight into the little bay north of Gaba Tepe Promontory, just below us.

WHEN THE GUNS SPOKE.

Strings of the First Brigade were still moving by, when the rumble of the heavy guns came over the intervening plains, from Achi Baba, eight miles to the south. Evidently our big battle was going to begin with some sort of attack at the extreme south, and spread gradually northwards from there, in order to keep the attention riveted all that day on the southern portion of their position. The cruiser fired her shots, our first howitzer shells flung squeaking like a badly-oiled axle high overhead, and the Australian field guns blazed out from their extraordinary positions, tearing the trenches where the enemy can actually see them. How he hates those guns! He shows his hate by shelling their parapet's level again and again. By 5 o'clock the First Infantrymen, except for a few belated messengers, were at their place behind the parapets of our trenches, opposite the Lonesome Pine. There wasn't a sign of all this in the deserted heathland between the lines. In the enemy's trenches, the garrison was probably taking shelter from the howitzer shells that crunched into the space around and occasionally into the trenches. The Turks had seen us landing troops, and the bombardment on both sides had been a matter of real earnest the last few days.

There had been a lot of casual speculation in camp for a month past as to whether it would be possible to take those Lone Pine trenches. It was a question what sort of a hell men would go out into if it became necessary to take Lonesome Pine. For three months no man had poked his nose between these two lines of trenches by day—and very few by night. It meant a too certain death. Now, when they were to go into it in the brilliant light of a summer's afternoon, not one of these wonderful infantrymen showed the least trace of excitement. In one recess, as I passed, a young officer was giving his men the last few hints. "You will probably get into the enemy's wire as you get the other side," I heard him say. "Going to get a snapshot of us as we go?" an infantryman asked. "It's the turn of the First Brigade to show what it can do," he added.

THE TURN OF THE FIRST BRIGADE.

That was the one thing they were thinking about more than any other. That was the turn of the First Brigade. The Third Brigade had immortalised itself on the day of the landing. The Miners Brigade, from Broken Hill and the goldfields and Queensland and Tasmania—the Second Brigade—the Victorians—had made their wonderful charge at Helles, when for a quarter of an hour they went straight as a die for a thousand yards, across country as bare as the palm of your hand, in the face of shrapnel and withering rifle fire, until they were 400 yards ahead of the line to the right and left of them, and outflanked at both sides, and there they hung on like grim death until, instead of going back to the rest of the line, the rest of the line had come up to them. I saw these things myself, and so I know that they are true. Now, at last, it was the chance of the First Brigade—the men from New South Wales. "Show them what the old Third Brigade can do this time," said one of them, smiling down from his perch beneath the parapet. "Goodbye, Jim. See you over there," said a belated messenger, hurrying along the trench to find his platoon. "Yes, so long; see you in half an hour," was the reply. As an officer crouched under the parapet, looking down at his wristlet watch. "Get ready to go over the encroach," he said. Then he unbuckled the whistle, which was strapped to his wrist, and put it to his teeth. The men on the top with him crouched up a little closer to the parapet, in order to get a quicker spring. Those in the trenches below rested a hand upon the step, or got their foothold on it. The shuffling of feet subsided and there was comparative silence, except for the whirl of our shells at regular intervals overhead. Then, except for one or two belated missiles, the shells seemed to stop. I looked at my watch a second. I noticed the officer look at his. 5.30!

In the front trench of all a carefully-checked watch and a whistle. Suddenly, there sounded a whistle, taken up from a score of different points. The officer in our recess had sounded his, and was clambering out over the dusty sandbags. The whole population of that recess was scrambling up, on to the step, and over the top, knocking down showers of earth. The last man was just on his knees on the parapet, his big, new-issue boots, with their hobnails, on a line with my head. From the enemy's trench, rifles had begun to peck—peck, peck—first an isolated shot or two—then a sputter of a dozen or so—then a rattle which grew and grew like the crackle of blazing scrub. The khaki figures were racing towards that long, low, mole-hill; the shrub, with the ugly, dark hill, concealed the loopholes low down on the earth's surface. Every Australian wore white bands on his sleeves, and a square white patch on his back, and the whole heathland seemed full of white patches hurrying towards the sand-mounds opposite. As the flanks of the line passed forward, one could see just to the north of them the ugly, bare, semi-circular lines of the enemy's position on the northern lobe of this heart-shaped hill—Lone Pine, on the southern lobe, with a little valley between, whilst our trenches ran across the unbroken surface, or nearer to the point. There was not a trace of any movement to be seen on that northern lobe—only the lines of the enemy's trenches running, furrow after furrow, across it, until they went out of sight down the further slope, like the wrinkles on a man's forehead. Except that our bullets knocked frequent small clouds out of the naked dry earth off the parapets, and the dust of our shell-explosions drifted slowly away from them, like long streamers of waving hair, there was not a trace of any human life on that hill. And yet one knew that from it a deadly cross-fire was sweeping the space. Before the First Brigade charge, those two sets had been specially designed, so that each should enfilade the space in front of the other. One guessed that our men in the trenches opposite that smaller northern lobe were pouring every ounce of lead they could into the opposite loopholes, in order to keep the Turks there busy on their own account, and give the only help within their power to the First Brigade in this hour of its supreme test.

WHAT THEY CALL "A CHECK."

Only a few single figures were now racing across the scrub—men who had fallen, or who had something special to carry—a bag of ammunition or of bombs—or who had been stopped by the congestion from getting out as soon as the others. They had been left behind by the first rush, but they had not the least intention of waiting for the second. Just as soon as each could wriggle free from the hole or the parapet, which was his starting point, he made for the opposite trench, quite alone, 30 or 40 yards after the others—sometimes with two or three mates following him—always with bullets knocking dust about his feet. One's heart was in one's mouth until one saw him join the crowd on the other side—but it was wonderful how often he got there. You saw men fall, but often enough it was in dodging our bomb-pits, much as a footballer may fall as he dodges the other side's full-back. And they picked themselves up and ran on again. Often they seemed to fall near the enemy's trenches, but whether it was a tumble over the enemy's wire, or a fall through a bullet wound, it was impossible—indeed, it is always impossible at these times—to say. It was not until afterwards that one noticed the little bundles of khaki lying all too frequent along the enemy's parapet, and half hidden in the earth.

One had expected that when the troops arrived on the other side they would fire into the trench for a moment, and then jump into the space they had cleared. But there are instances when you suddenly find yourself looking down into a ditch packed with men. You cannot leap into it unless there is enough space for using a bayonet. Sometimes the men shrink aside, and push for the nearest communication trench, or sometimes spaces have been made by artillery fire; but if they have not, a few moments are generally occupied in clearing a space, into which the first man can jump, the others leaping in as soon as they can beside him.

A REAL PUZZLE.

But the white patches did not jump in as they came to the enemy's trench. They gradually strung up along it, standing up, as men might string up along a kerb when they run to see a street procession. Those who came up from behind poked along among their comrades until they found a place, and then stood there, too, obviously puzzled.

As a matter of fact, they had found themselves looking down, not into the trench, but upon a very solid roof, made of logs, with withered boughs and earth spread over them. Some of those timbers were nine by six, and there was no more chance of pushing them down than of pushing in the roof of a church. We possessed powerful and effective bombs, which used to explode in the enemy's trench with a peculiarly formidable crunch, and the Turks were driven to cover in their trenches as protection against it. They had made no mistake about that protection, and our bombardment, though it probably put out of action a good number of Turks, made no perceptible difference to this head-cover. The Turks were shooting through loopholes between their cover.

This is what, in military parlance, may be called a check. The first two lines were stopped there, puzzled what to do. Shrapnel had begun to rain by this time; machine-guns were spitting from the trenches to the left; the Turks were firing from the loopholes. But the one thing that no man seemed even to dream of doing was to come back. Some leaped down into the loopholes—some who happened to find small gaps in the line of headcover in front of them jumped down there, and began to work into the dark shelters under the headcover, where the Turks were. Others went on over the first trench, and even over the second trench, and into communication trenches which had no headcover over them, but through which the Turks were fleeing—for prisoners say, and there is no doubt of it, that the Turks are afraid of the Australians. Others noticed that in the solid roof in front of them, near the edge where the loopholes are, there were manholes left at intervals, apparently to allow the listening patrols to creep out at night. They were just large enough for the First Brigade. They wriggled down into them, feet foremost, as a burglar might wriggle into a skylight.

It was a deed for which, if it were a solitary instance, any man might get a Victoria Cross. What could the Turks do with a Brigade like that? Once they got into the trenches the thing was a foregone conclusion. I suppose I shall not be credited when I say that these men were almost worn out with fatigue before the attack started. Not with the preparation for this particular attack—that was the one thing that buoyed them up—but with the sixteen weeks' incessant work in the trenches. Always under shell fire; always digging, tunnelling, water carrying, until their own medical officers began to wonder if they weren't too much in need of a rest to be able to stand even ordinary exertion. The one thing that had braced them up for weeks had been the rumours of a British attack. I am told that on the carefully-kept graphs of the health of the Australian division the times when a Turkish attack was expected can be easily traced by a heavy corresponding diminution in the line of sickness.

FOR TWO CROWDED HOURS.

So it was that, while the glare of a summer afternoon slowly changed into the rosy flush of a glorious evening, I watched line after line, or, rather, crowd after crowd, of troops go across that fire-swept heath, until the last of the supports had been absorbed into the trenches opposite. Within a few seconds of the first rush the Turkish artillery had marked down the section of trench from which they were issuing, and was pouring shell after shell into it. Then on it was deafening. Showers of stone and earth fell over everyone, like the spray of the sea when the billow tumbles home. Clouds of dust and smoke thrown up by the bursting shells rolled across the haze, kicked up by the bullets and hundreds of travelling feet.

That was the sort of storm through which each line had to cross. It would abate imperceptibly, and then suddenly descend in full force, like the howling recurrence of some tempest whenever a fresh wave of men started to cross. The machine-guns were much heavier on the later lines than on the earlier, and the shrapnel—now that the Turkish gunners knew that their own trench was captured—was whipping the space in front of the captured trench. And the trenches themselves, as a matter of fact, though the Turks did not know it, those trenches were not by any means clear of Turks, and they were showering shrapnel on their own men as well as on ours.

MATES.

But I never saw the least sign of hesitation or a single unwounded man, except a messenger, turn back. They were even anxious for a place so as to get an early start. "Is there any room up there," I heard a man in the trench ask of those who were crouching under the parapet. One of the men looked down. "I daresay we could make room for one," he said. "Shift along, you blokes; we can squeeze in a little one." The man in the trench was clearly relieved. "I want to get up there along with Jim," he said. "Jim and me are mates." I have often hoped that the two mates arrived at the end of that perilous trip together.

It was a quarter of an hour before the last of the men who had lined the parapet of the enemy's trench disappeared into it. Many of them had lain low there, firing over it into the communication trenches beyond. Lots of them over on the right lay there still, lining that parapet for an hour after the first charge. And we wondered what was keeping them there, until we realised that they were not moving, and that they would never move again. We could see our bayonets in the Lone Pine trenches, and in the bare, naked trenches on the other lobe of the hill we could see bayonets that were not ours. It was reported to the artillery, and the counter-attack which the enemy were preparing came to nought for the time being. Then, above the trench opposite, appeared a bit of calico waving in Morse code. It had just managed to ask "Urgent" for something which no one could read, when three shrapnel bursts smothered it, and stopped its message for just about ten seconds. Later that signaller arrived himself, having come across the top and told us that the urgency was for reinforcements—by that time the telephone was through, and the following conversation was taking place:—

"Is that the Brigade office?"

"Yes."

"Is that the Brigade Major? Third Battalion speaking."

"Yes; where are you speaking from?"

"From Lonesome Pine."

Both the third and the fourth have telephones through, and the second was in the trenches as well, with the First—the reserve battalion—not far behind them.

THE 3rd BATTALION'S RUM.

It was only the beginning really. There was six days of wild fighting to follow, before the Turks gave up the fight, and Lone Pine was really ours. That counter attack deserved to be told which I saw myself, and that is the story of the 3rd Battalion's rum.

The officers of the 3rd Battalion were addressed by their Colonel the evening before the fight, and one of the matters that came up to be decided was that of rum. Two issues of rum were due on the day of the fight, and the question was when should they be given. The Colonel was an old Australian soldier, of the instructional staff. One of the finest fighters in Gallipoli. He was wounded three times in the next 24 hours, and was carried from the trenches he had won. At this conference the night before the fight, he laid down his views: "I believe the issue will be a good tonic to the men in their present condition," he said, "but I do not like the idea of giving it to men just before they go into action. We will have one issue in the morning and the other after the fight is over."

It was about two hours after the charge that I was standing by the tunnel leading part of the way to the captured trenches, watching the hopeless congestion of it, when a man with a demijohn on his shoulder came along. The brigadier himself was at the mouth of that sap, receiving messages and incidentally trying to clear the sap to let through some of the more urgent traffic. All that traffic had to pass through 30 yards of narrow, pitch-dark tunnel, and out over the heath, taking the gauntlet up to the parapet of the Turkish trench. Endless lines of men with ammunition, men with bombs, men with water, men with picks, shovels, sandbags; signallers' messengers, engineers, stretcher-bearers were filing at funeral pace into it, and the whole tunnel was constantly blocked while they carried one or two poor, bloody, wounded fellows back. I remember the pitiful procession that emerged from it after at least ten minutes struggle through the dark interior—first seriously wounded man in a folding cane stretcher, next on an Army Medical man, and after him, crawling on hands and knees out of the tunnel and down the trench towards the rear, another wounded man. Only those men whose presence was urgent were allowed to go through afterwards.

"What are you carrying?"

"Bombs."

"Well, put them down here a moment, and stand by until that tunnel is clearer. And what are you carrying, my man?"

"Third Battalion rum, sir."

"What?"

"Third Battalion rum, sir. Colonel put me in charge of it, and told me to see the——"

"Well, put it down here for the present."

"The Colonel told me——"

"Look here, never mind what you were told; put it down there at once."

The rum-carrier put his heavy burden down on a fire step, and retired, obviously unsatisfied for the moment.

The Colonel had told him the men would want their rum, and it was his duty to see it through. For a couple of minutes he watched the brigade staff dealing with infinitely important messages, and then, for the first time, the Brigadier looked up. He stepped forward.

"Oh, well, get along with you," said the Brigadier amusedly.

And so he shouldered it, and trudged out contentedly towards the heath, and towards the bullets, and I suppose the 3rd Battalion got its rum.

I turned away to go miles away to the north, where the next scene was to be played. Our engineers and the infantry in Lonesome Pine were busy with picks and sandbags, placing the loopholes on the other side of the trenches, or burrowing out the last few yards of the communication trench. The rifle shots had become fewer and fewer. But many a brave Australian lay face downwards beneath the stars.

LATE WARRANT-OFFICER LAMONT.

One of the most pathetic cases of bereavement in connection with the war is that of Mrs. Lamont, whose husband, Warrant-officer Lamont, was killed while fighting for his country at the Dardanelles. She is left with eight little children, the eldest of whom is but 10 years of age.

Prior to leaving for the front, Mr. Lamont was sergeant-major of the Edgecliff Rifle Club, and he was exceedingly popular with its members. The committee of the club held a meeting to consider what steps should be taken to assist the widow and children, financially and otherwise. The following sub-committee was appointed to further the movement:—Mr. David Davis (chairman), Captain Ruskin Rowe (captain of the club), Captain W. G. Conley, Rev. Canon Lea, Messrs. W. Ogilvie (hon. secretary of the club), W. Carter Smith, Claude Healey, T. H. Joyner, Percy L. Williamson, and Ernest R. Cohen.

It has been decided to open a fund for the benefit of the late Warrant-officer Lamont's family. The manner in which the amount raised should be expended was not definitely decided. If, however, the response in the way of donations is sufficient, it is proposed to purchase a home for the widow and children.

The committee feels that this is an exceptional case, which is deserving of every consideration, seeing that Mr. Lamont laid down his life for his country, and that he was personally asked by his superior officers to join the Expeditionary Forces. Subscriptions will be received by any of the gentlemen whose names are given above. They will be acknowledged by the hon. treasurers of the fund—Mr. Percy L. Williamson, 165 King-street, and Mr. Ernest R. Cohen, 62 Hunter-street, city.

CARRIAGE OF MAILS.

MR. SPENCE'S ACTION.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Postmaster-General (Mr. Spence) has decided to give the necessary 12 months' notice of termination of agreement with the Railway Departments of the six States for the carriage of mails. He said the arrangement was grossly unfair to the Postal Department. The present arrangement has been in force for about eight years. Under it the Postal Department pays on an average weight of mail matter conveyed by rail. This average is fixed for each 12 months on a careful check of the articles carried in one particular month.

The total amount paid to the railways of Australia by the Postal Department is about £400,000 a year. Where the unfairness chiefly comes in, explained the Minister, is in the month selected for a basis of the amount to be paid for the year. This month is November, which is one of the busiest months of the year for the Postal Department, when the bulk of the overseas Christmas mail is dealt with.

SAFEGUARDING SOLDIERS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It was recently brought under the notice of the military authorities in Egypt by the Commonwealth Defence authorities that reports had been received in Australia regarding the control of liquor and on the question of morals in Egypt which had caused some apprehension, and which might have a bad effect on recruiting. The Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) has now received a reply, in which the General Officer Commanding in Egypt states that the reports were much exaggerated. Steps had, however, been taken to control the sale of liquor.

EMBARGO ON SHEEPSKINS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—We wish to refute the statements made by Mr. F. E. Winchcombe and others on Tuesday, September 29, at a deputation to Mr. Tudor against the embargo on sheepskins.

Firstly: There is no congestion in the sheepskin market.

Secondly: The fall in sheepskins could hardly be caused by the embargo, seeing that the wool of the same class on which there is no embargo suffered to the same extent.

Thirdly: The exporters expend twopence per skin in this country by packing for export, whereas the fellmongers expend 11d per skin in scouring and tanning. Which is the best for Australia?

Fourthly: Mr. Pemberton is informed that all unemployed in his union can get work at Botany right now.

Fifthly: Mr. Wolk is informed that the woolscourers and fellmongers did not put their heads together, nor are they getting fat at the expense of the producers, as stated by Mr. Winchcombe. They increased their charges owing to a large increase in the scale of wages. See award, July 7, 1915.

It is manifestly best, in the interests of Australia, that America, or any other country, should buy our scoured skin-wool, pickled pelts, and basils. These articles can be produced in Australia from sheepskins, as well as anywhere else, but as higher wages are wanted, protection is needed against cheaper labour elsewhere.

We are, etc.,

THE WOUNDED.

ANOTHER TRANSPORT ARRIVES.

CHEERFUL SOLDIERS' TALES.

There was much public interest, judging by the crowds that lined the streets leading to the No. 1 Wharf, Woolloomooloo, in the arrival of the transport which tied up there yesterday, with 211 wounded or convalescent soldiers for New South Wales and Queensland. The arrangements were equal to the occasion, and everything passed off without a hitch. The Queenslanders were taken to the Soldiers' Club in George-street, and entertained there until the time came for their departure by train for Brisbane. The New South Wales men (173) were taken to the No. 4 General Hospital, Randwick.

The National Reserve Band played selections on the wharf as the big vessel, standing high out of the water, was being moored, and it continued its inspiriting music while the disembarkation was in progress—a work that took over an hour. The vessel got alongside at 9.45, and the last motor car was got away at about 11 o'clock. With one exception, that of a man whose limbs were injured by shrapnel, the men were able to walk ashore down the huge gangway. Some, of course, had to be assisted, but in this one particular case the unfortunate man had to be carried on the back of a stalwart companion. The wharf was kept clear of the general public, and there was no excitement or confusion anywhere. The Red Cross arrangements worked out admirably, much to the satisfaction of Mrs. Mackinnon and Miss Owen, members of the central executive, Miss Bailey (headquarters staff), and the score of other ladies associated with them, representing the detachments of the Junior Red Cross and of Cronulla. Seventy-five motor cars had been requisitioned, but fully 90 were made available—all, too, being volunteer vehicles. The cars were taken in turn right on to the wharf, and as they filled up they sped along through a warmth of welcome on the part of the assembled crowds. The Red Cross ladies, who saw to the comfort of the men at Randwick, were drawn from the Bondi and Waverley detachments. Headquarters supplied the detachment for the Soldiers' Club, Miss Hyman being in charge. The arrangements at the railway station were in charge of Miss Garvan.

Mr. W. M. Hughes, Commonwealth Attorney-General, went on board the transport early, and formally welcomed the soldiers on behalf of the Federal Government. He was accompanied by Mr. Justice Ferguson, Colonel Wallack (State Commandant), Colonel Lee (Military Embarkation Officer), Colonel Perkins, P.M.O., Lieutenant-Colonel J. Crawford Robertson, A.M.C. (Staff Officer for Invalids), Lieut.-Colonel J. J. Paine, Major Edwards (General Staff Officer), Commander Dunn, R.N., Lieut.-Commander Ross, R.N.R., and Lieut. Roach (representing the Quarter-master-General). Mr. Mitchell, the Inspector-General of Police, was on the wharf, and associated with him were Superintendents Spence and Edwards, and Inspectors Brooks, Bannan, and Wallace, the last-mentioned representing the Water Police. Inspector Mills had charge of the Mounted Police. These officers had a duty of a military kind to do before the troopship came alongside. They sent 700 New South Wales men to join a vessel in the harbour that already contained 700 Queenslanders. As these embarkation forces came into the big shed, they were mustered and marched off in splendid order on to a ferry steamer. The police said they never saw a more sober or well disciplined body of men.

Colonel D. M'Leish, C.M.G., was the officer commanding the incoming troops. He took over some troops a few months ago, and his services were again requisitioned for transport duty before he had had a chance of going to the front. Associated with him were Lieut.-Col. N. B. Gandevia, A.A.M.C., senior medical officer, and Captains Montgomery and Payne, medical officers. Captain Payne disembarked at Melbourne. Nurses (who were highly spoken of by the soldiers) doing transport duty were Senior Sister McKillop, and Sisters Lewis, Ridge, H. and L. H. Curtain, Kelly, Thompson, Timmins, and E. W. H. Scott. The nurses Curtain disembarked at Melbourne. Nurse Thompson is bound for Tasmania. There were about a dozen medical orderlies, who assisted the nurses, and the stewards of the transport also gave very valuable assistance in this direction—as well as supplying the meals to the bedsides.

ARRIVAL AT THE HOSPITAL.

When the motor cars arrived through cheering hundreds at No. 4 General Hospital (Randwick), between 11 and 12, the most perfect arrangements had been made—thanks to the untiring efforts of Lieut.-Colonel G. Lane Mullins, officer in command; Major Frank Wall, registrar; and Matron Veenmann, and her nursing staff. Thirty-seven members of the Waverley-Bondi Voluntary Aid Detachments of the Red Cross Society were present under Mrs. Turner and Miss Bothamley to attend to the comforts of the men.

Colonel Lane Mullins had with him in the big reception-room, where the returned heroes were to be examined, Lieut.-Colonel A. Jarvie Hood, Sir Herbert Maitland, and J. Crawford Robertson; Majors F. Wall, M. O'Gorman Hughes, R. B. Wade, E. Wilfrid Fairfax, and P. J. Collins; Captains Norrie, Frankl, Zion, and Curtis Elliott; and Lieutenants J. H. Ward and A. J. Newton.

As the cars swung in through the gates the band struck up "The Men of the Dardanelles," followed by "Home, Sweet Home," and the ladies of the Voluntary Aid Detachment lined up inside the hall and cheered the men on their way from the cars to the reception room. Mr. Norris, the Expeditionary Paymaster, was also on hand to provide any man with an advance of pay, and once the men had been passed by the doctors, and had enjoyed a hot meal, they were granted short leave prior to having to return for a more comprehensive overhauling.

It was a right royal welcome, and what some of the boys appreciate most of all was the way old comrades greeted them. There were a lieutenant and sergeant, who won the D.C.M., of the 13th Battalion—both having been invalided home on an earlier boat—on top of the steps, and as each survivor of the gallant 13th was helped or limped up the steps they sprang forward with hands outstretched. "Shake hands, lad!" they exclaimed. "There's not many of us left, but we're glad to see you home." The remnant of the 13th fully reciprocated the feeling and the welcome.

Mr. W. M. Hughes, accompanied by Colonel Wallack, entered the dining-room as the soldiers were sitting down to the midday meal. After some warm words of welcome, the Commonwealth Attorney-General assured the men that a grateful country had not forgotten them in their hour of trial. He wished them a return of health and strength, with all the honour and happiness which should be theirs as brave soldiers of the British Empire and as noble defenders of Australia's freedom.

A list of the New South Wales soldiers returned yesterday has already been given.

The Queensland contingent consisted of the following:—Sergeant W. S. Lennon, Corporal W. J. Byrne, Lance-corporals D. J. Fraser and S. Cripps, and Privates L. P. Rowley, W. J. Curnow, R. D. Jackson, H. L. Ross, E. Gardner, W. P. McKay, A. Chardon, C. W. Tolcher, R. S. Graham, D. F. Toms, W. Jones, H. McCallum, A. R. Medland (of the 9th Battalion); Corporal J. Alsop and Privates G. H. Swindells, H. McKenzie, S. A. Hind, R. C. Miller, R. A. Franklin, G. Poplauski, J. Charters, T. H. Bell (of the 15th Battalion); Corporal E. Smith and Troopers F. James, C. J. Picton, T. A. Ellison, M. Watkins, C. E. Edward (of the 2nd Light Horse); Troopers D. Wilson, J. E. Ryan, A. Osborne, C. S. Affleck (of the 5th Light Horse); Driver W. McLean (5th A.S.C.), and Driver J. H. O'Brien (17th A.S.C.).

Senior-sister McKillop, and Sisters Lewis, Ridge, Kelly, and Timmins, of the A.A.M.C., also disembarked at Sydney.

QUEENSLANDERS AT SOLDIERS' CLUB.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SURPRISE VISIT.

The Soldiers' Club, where the Queenslanders were entertained, had an unexpected visit from the Governor-General (Sir Ronald Munro Ferguson). He went about in quite an informal manner among the returned men, and chatted with them about their experiences.

When the men were at lunch, which was provided by the Red Cross Society, the Governor-General addressed them. "I have been following with interest and admiration your operations at Gallipoli," he said. "You know what your reception will be when you get home. I trust that those of you who are badly hurt will speedily recover, and I know you will do a great service to the Empire in Queensland by stimulating recruiting. I am sure that Queensland will never fail Australia or the Empire in sending men out. I congratulate you on your return. I can't speak too highly of what you have done, and I hope you will be the means of sending more men to go and do likewise, and bring this struggle to a victorious end."

The speech was greeted with enthusiasm, and one Queenslander cried, "We'll be back there again." The men sang "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and gave three cheers for the Governor-General, who, as he passed out of the room, responded with "Good luck to you, boys."

There were 37 of the Queenslanders, who were in charge of Sergt. Leonard. They received the usual hospitality of the club. Among those who looked to their welfare were Dr. Mary Booth and Miss Higman, the latter being in charge of the Red Cross detachment.

The men were driven in motor cars to the station, and left by special train for Brisbane at 1.40 p.m.

"A BIG MOVE ON."

When Private H. Johnson, 1st Field Company Engineers, left Gallipoli, there were many men, British and Australasian, at Lemnos, in the village of Mudros, in the Agean Sea, awaiting orders to go to the front. He said every man knew pretty well that there was a big move on, but they did not know when it would take place. The men were all cheerful and confident. "It is no use, however," he went on, "denying the fact that it will be terribly hard to get to Constantinople. The Turks are big men, good sports, and nearly as savage as ourselves in contesting every inch of ground. We have this knowledge, however, that the flower of the army has gone. Prisoners have told us that they are glad to be out of it. We are treating them well, and they tell us that they are treating our men equally well. Our engineers are working well. The boys have good shelter in the trenches, and fair average food. They face danger fearlessly. When they get the order to 'charge' they break off in a body regardless of consequences. My return is due to shrapnel in the foot, one piece being still there. The trip across, though unnecessarily long, was made as pleasant as possible by the kindness of the nurses and the humane consideration extended to all by Colonel McLeish, the officer commanding the transport."

COLONEL BRAUND'S GRAVE.

Lance-corporal J. Evans, 1st Brigade, 2nd Battalion, could not say too much in favour of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Braund. "We have," he said, "made his grave near the beach something approaching the honour that is due to his memory. Poor fellow, he did not see much of Gallipoli. I landed with him on April 25, and managed to escape injury until August 6, when I got badly wounded in the arm at Lonesome Pine." Lance-corporal Evans walked ashore with his arm in a sling.

"ONLY A MATTER OF TIME."

Corporal M. Keegan, 1st Brigade, 2nd Battalion, who walked ashore with his uncle (Mr. Keegan, M.L.A.), was there at the first landing on April 25, and kept going until hit in the head on August 7 at Lonesome Pine. "It's only a matter of time," he commented, "when the Turks will go. They can never hold out. They are good fighters, and of savage determination. The only difference between them and our fellows is that our fellows are more savage. The Turks will not, however, wait for the bayonet. They are experts at throwing the hand grenades at us. These grenades are about the size of a cricket ball, and when lighted have a five seconds' fuse. One good throw has been known to put ten of our men out of action. These things are the cause of so many lost eyes and head injuries. We had 15 men on this transport with an eye out in each case. The summer was very hot on the peninsula, and the flies bad, but there will be other disadvantages in the winter. I had 15 weeks in the trenches—never out."

BURIED BY A SHELL.

Owing to the order that the men were not to talk of their experiences, it was a hard job to get any information.

One man who was limping about, when asked how he received his injuries, stated that it was a case of "three of a kind." "Me, the trench, and an 8.2 shell got mixed up together, and me and the trench came off worst," he said. "That shell hit the parapet, and simply blew the trench in on top of me, and my mates had to dig me out. I'm feeling much better after the voyage, and ready to run out home and meet my wife and kiddies."

BLOWN UP IN A SAP.

"You look a bit of a wreck," was the remark addressed to one of the returned wounded. "So you'd be," came the quick retort, "if you'd been blown up in a sap and jammed up against a kicking mule that seemed to be made of nothing else but hoofs and teeth. It was not so much the explosion as the mule," the soldier went on, "but the two of them combined I wouldn't care to bump up against again. Mules and exploding saps are not luxuries, and I've no need for them again in this life. Still it was a fine experience out there. The Turks are all right, and real sporting chaps. They are jolly good marksmen, too, whether with the rifle or the bomb. They are red-hot bombers, and seem to have an inexhaustible supply of bombs."

TURKS PLAY THE GAME.

Corporal S. Cripps, of the 9th Battalion, took part in the original landing, and was in the second boat that touched the beach. He was stationed for most of the time on the right wing, opposite Gaba Tepe. "We got terribly cut up there on June 28," he said. "We were making a demonstration to assist the Tommies at Suvla Bay, and lost about 118 men out of 350. I was blown up two days later. A Turkish high explosive shell burst almost beneath me. It threw me about four feet in the air, and rolled me down a gully. That was all I remembered for quite a long time."

"I must say the Turks play the game," went on the corporal. "I have seen them give water to our fellows who were hit, and fix them up with bandages as well as they could. If it wasn't for the German officers the Turks would surrender to-morrow. During the armistice we were talking to a couple of the Turks, who spoke broken English. They said that if they came towards our trenches with arms they would be shot at by us, and if they came without arms the German officers would turn the machine guns on to them. They were between the devil and the deep sea."

PITCHFORKING TURKS.

A QUEENSLANDER'S FEAT.

The story of the "huge Queenslander" who pitchforked Turks over his shoulder on the day of the first landing caused a good deal of amazement and some disbelief at first, but there has been ample proof of the truth of the story.

The man who was responsible for the remarkable feat is Sergeant Burne, of the 9th Battalion, who was among the wounded Queenslanders who returned yesterday. Over six feet high and massively built, Sergeant Burne looks quite capable of the act he is credited with.

Sergeant Burne's modesty is in proportion to his size. It was a long while before he could be induced to talk about himself, and even then he tried to minimise what he had done. "It is not a case for me to take any credit at all," he said. "I was in the platoon that landed first on the right. Our lieutenant was the first man to get ashore and as game a man who ever stepped ashore. I followed him. I was ordered to take in hand a line of sharp-shooters who were causing a lot of trouble. There was also a machine-gun on the hill. Somebody had to stop it. Myself and two lads went up, and we stopped it. That's all."

Pressed for further details, Sergeant Burne went on: "There were ten Turks there. We got the Turks and we got the machine-guns, but I lost my two lads. They were only boys, but, let me tell you, the Australians are the best fighters in the world. One of the lads fixed the German officer who was working the machine gun. The Turks were higher up than we were, and I suppose that is how I threw them over my shoulder. It's an old trick that is taught in the Guards."

The same day Sergeant Burne was wounded. He was in charge of a section which was holding the top of the ridge when he received a bullet in the shoulder. "I had a very short experience," he said, "but I'll be back there again."

Sergeant Burne was at one time in the Irish Guards, and went through the South African campaign. He carries a scar on his forehead, the result of a blow from the butt of a rifle at Rhenosterkop. He had been in Australia for about six years when he joined the Expeditionary Force.

RANDWICK ASYLUM.

DEFENCE DEPARTMENT IN POSSESSION.

REMOVAL OF THE CHILDREN.

Wednesday next will see the last of the Randwick Asylum for Destitute Children, the whole of the buildings having been handed over to the Commonwealth Defence Department by the State Government. On Thursday the directors of the asylum agreed to the conditions of the transfer. There are in the asylum 181 children—52 of them girls. The Minister for Public Instruction directed the president of the State Children's Relief Department to remove the boys and girls today. The order was that the children were to be taken to cottage homes, or placed under the care of foster-parents, save in the cases in which their own parents took charge of them. Yesterday, with the consent of the military authorities, this order was modified by extending the time for the removal of the boys until Wednesday next.

This morning officers of the State Relief Department will "take delivery" of the 52 girls from Mr. Joseph Coulter, the superintendent of the asylum. It is the intention of the Government to keep the girls at Ormond House, Paddington, until provision is made for them elsewhere. After the removal of the boys on Wednesday next the whole of the buildings and grounds will be utilised for No. 4 Australian General Hospital. The additional accommodation will provide hospital room for about 1000 soldiers. At present 700 patients are housed at Randwick.

Yesterday Colonel Wallack discussed the extension of the hospital work with Colonel George L. Mullins, the Registrar, and Major Frank Wall. The State Commandant also inspected the new tramline in course of construction from the main Randwick line to the gates of the hospital. It is expected that the rails will be laid before the end of the month. When this short branch line is completed sick and wounded soldiers will be carried from the wharf at Woolloomooloo Bay to the hospital. An ambulance tram-car has been built for the purpose by the Tramways Department.

The Federal Attorney-General (Mr. Hughes) visited the hospital yesterday morning. While inspecting the buildings and grounds he was accompanied by Colonel Wallack, Colonel Mullins, Major Wall, and Sir Herbert Maitland. The representative of the Federal Government complimented Colonel Mullins, the medical officer in command, and said he was well pleased with all the arrangements which have been made for the comfort of Australia's best and bravest sons.

Having surrendered to the State the control of the children the directors of Randwick Asylum are now considering a proposal to apply their accumulated funds to the erection of cottage hospitals for mentally deficient children. About £56,000 will be available for the purpose. No intimation has been received as to the amount which the directors may receive from the Government. Under the proposed new board the subscribers to the asylum will elect a certain number of directors, and allow the Government to nominate the others. Nothing of a final character will be done until the Randwick Asylum-Military Home Bill has passed through Parliament.

STATE TO TAKE CHILDREN.

The directors of the Randwick Asylum for Destitute Children have carried the following motion:—"In view of the fact that the military authorities cannot see their way to extend the time for our giving up possession of the Randwick Asylum buildings, we accept the offer of the State Government to take immediate control of the children on condition that the board is indemnified against any action that may arise out of such transfer." Messrs. D. Storey and Templeman, vice-presidents, were empowered to negotiate with the State Government regarding the transfer of the children, and the obtaining of the indemnity.

DIRECTORS DISAGREE.

MR. HENLEY'S VERSION.

Mr. Henley, M.L.A., one of the trustees of the Randwick Children's Home, yesterday said that on Tuesday last a board meeting was held to consider the State Commandant's request for the whole of the buildings, which necessitated the removal of the children to other premises. At that meeting a committee of three was unanimously appointed "to take all the necessary steps, and to make all arrangements for obtaining accommodation immediately, and for transferring the children. Every member of the board was asked to act on that committee, and after much persuasion three undertook the work. These gentlemen were given power to engage help to do the work. Mr. Storey and Mr. Henley were afterwards appointed to reply to Colonel Wallack's letter, and to ask him for an extension of the time to complete removal. Colonel Wallack, while not giving a definite promise for an extension, promised to consider the matter, but said that, in any case, the sick children must be allowed to remain until they could be safely removed. Mr. Henley was afterwards asked by Mr. Storey to proceed to Randwick, and advise the superintendent, which he did. "It is only fair," added Mr. Henley, "to say the military authorities provided us with a beautiful mansion at Strathfield for the accommodation of the girls, and we were offered the option of one or two suitable homes for the boys. The work was, therefore, nearing completion, and everything going very well for an early removal."

On Thursday, Mr. Henley added, Mr. Storey got together some members of the committee who had not attended meetings for a long time, and who stated that they knew nothing of the position. Without considering the work the committee had done, a motion was moved to hand the children over to the State Government, and on being put five voted for and five against. Mr. Storey then declared that the voting had created a deadlock. Some members left the table, after which, on being told he should have used a casting vote as well as a deliberative vote, he reopened the question, and declared the resolution carried. The other members of the board, equal in number, and in view of the legal opinions given, and their willingness to continue to carry out their obligations, very emphatically protested.

THE REFERENDUM.

MR. HUGHES AND MR. COOK.

The Federal Attorney-General, Mr. Hughes, was asked yesterday if he had anything to say in reply to the statement by Mr. Joseph Cook, leader of the Opposition, on the subject of the referendum.

"I saw Mr. Cook's statement," said Mr. Hughes, "and I shall reply to him in due course. I only wish to say now that it is very evident that Mr. Cook's memory is going."

STATE PARLIAMENT.

DAIRY BILL.

The Dairy Bill was taken through the committee stages in the Legislative Assembly early yesterday morning, a number of amendments being carried. The chief amendment was the prohibition of the use of kerosene in condemned milk on the ground that it was calculated to injure pigs and taint the cans.

A court of appeal has been provided for by another amendment, there being a question whether the tribunal will be able to deal with grading only, or such matters also as the condemnation of cream or factories.

The third reading of the bill was made an order for Tuesday next, the House adjourning at 5 a.m.

STATE GOVERNOR'S TOUR.

NARRABRI, Friday.

The State Governor was accorded a cordial public reception last night in the Town Hall, which was packed. Alderman Hulbert presided. His Excellency and Mr. George Black addressed the audience. Light refreshments were served. The party left by special train for Wee Waa at 5 this morning. Lady Strickland returns from Walgett on Monday, and on Tuesday will entertain the recruits in training at afternoon tea on the racecourse.

NEW ZEALAND MEAT.

WELLINGTON, Friday.

Mr. Massey informed the House of Representatives that over £5,000,000 had been paid for New Zealand meat supplied to the order of the Imperial Government, for use of the Allied forces, since the arrangement was entered into in March last. The approximate quantity of meat in store was 750,000 freight carcases.

RECRUITING.

SECOND EFFORT.

PREMIER'S STATEMENT.

Already 156 recruiting meetings have been arranged to take part in the north and north-west of the State during the 10 days commencing on Monday next.

The Premier made a statement yesterday defining the position.

"In connection with the second recruiting effort, now a definitely settled movement," Mr. Holman said, "a great deal of organising work has been done within the past few days. This new effort has emanated from the newly-appointed War Council, which is the creation of the Federal Government. Two members of the Federal Parliamentary War Committee, Senator Millen and Mr. Webster, sit upon the New South Wales State War Council, and the platform work in the section of the campaign to be immediately opened will be largely done by Federal members. I have volunteered to take part, and will, during the coming week, after the Town Hall meeting, deliver speeches at four important country centres, going as far inland as Moree. Owing to the delay in the constitution of the State Council the first meeting has not yet been held. It will, however, get into working shape shortly, and in the meantime I am taking the responsibility of formally inviting the members of the State Parliament to take up specific work in connection with the campaign, which is intended to be widespread throughout the State as the first section of a continental movement. Mr. Webster's statement appearing in the press this morning may be taken as an official intimation from the Federal War Committee, which body Mr. Webster represents upon the State War Council.

"As I have already intimated, we are opening the campaign on Monday night in Sydney, and simultaneously in about 25 centres on the North and North-Western line. The Sydney meeting will be addressed by the Governor-General, the Federal Attorney-General, Mr. Joseph Cook (leader of the Federal Opposition), and Mr. C. G. Wade (leader of the New South Wales Opposition). The recruiting office in the basement of the Town Hall, under Major Timothy, will be kept open during the meeting, and for some time afterwards, for the purpose of enrolling men. On Monday night meetings will also be addressed at Aberdeen, Scone, Werris Creek, Woolomin, Manilla, Wariaida, Elsmore, Inverell, Bukkulla, Emmaville, Tenterfield, West Narrabri, Wee Waa, Armidale, and Uralla, and right through the week meetings will be held nightly at all the settlements in touch with those centres. One hundred and fifty-six meetings have altogether been arranged for in the space of 10 days, and in all cases we are indebted to the local recruiting associations for invaluable co-operation."

The Premier will leave Sydney on Wednesday morning, and will address a meeting at the following places on consecutive evenings up to the following Saturday:—Quirindi, Wednesday; Moree, Thursday; Boggabri, Friday; Gunnedah, Saturday.

ROUTE MARCHES.

TO TRAVERSE THE STATE.

The Premier said yesterday that he attached considerable importance to the route march from Gilgandra to Sydney, and in all probability others will be arranged to traverse the whole of New South Wales.

"I am," he said, "considering whether it is not possible to get other route marches. It is a new feature of recruiting campaign work, and it does not involve the attendance of speakers, either of the loathed political variety or of the more innocuous lay kind, and in certain measure is likely to be more effective than mere platform work. When the last campaign was in progress definite proposals were made by the Recruiting Committee to the military authorities for a similar form of demonstration, but it was found impossible to get the necessary authorisation for making the arrangement. Apparently better counsels now prevail, and I am convinced that the route marches, skilfully organised, will probably have a greater effect on the campaign than any quantity of oratory from the platform."

"I hope," added the Premier, "to be able to make an announcement shortly that other similar schemes are on foot for traversing the State from all four points of the compass."

THE ENLISTMENTS.

The week's recruiting figures at the three city depots are:—

Victoria Barracks	253
Town Hall	151
Board of Health	112
Total for three days	516

The following figures of country enlistments for the week up to Thursday have been supplied to the Premier by the military authorities:—Goulburn, 56; Armidale, 28; Narrabri, 36; Dubbo, 16; Cootamundra, 43; Lithgow, 12; total, 191.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The University has received a request from the War Office, through the Department of Defence, to nominate three engineer graduates for temporary commissions in the Royal Engineers. Graduates who wish to make application should communicate with the warden.

SWIMMERS AND THE WAR.

The annual report of the New South Wales Amateur Swimming Association states that up to September 16 some 269 affiliated swimmers had enlisted in the Expeditionary Forces, including championship performers, such as W. Longworth, T. Adrian, C. Healy, S. Riddington, and E. C. Fox. The following have lost their lives:—G. T. Hill (ex-hon. registrar), B. I. Swannell (Sydney Club), A. Anderson (N. Sydney), H. Reeve (Mosman), A. Rosenthal (Manly), F. A. Doodson (Pyrmont), C. Adelt (Manly), C. Kidman (Manly), and K. M'Phee (Manly).

The report adds:—"The council would impress upon all affiliated swimmers who are in a position to offer their services as members of the Australian Expeditionary Forces the urgent necessity of enlisting at once."

UNIVERSITY RECRUITS.

At the University last night a number of evening students who have enlisted were farewelled by their colleagues of the evening lectures. Altogether 34 of the University evening students have joined the colours. Professor Wood said the spirit which took a man to the University for study after a full day's work made him capable of facing anything, be it German, Turk, or devil. The proceedings were most enthusiastic.

BONUS FOR VOLUNTEERS.

LITHGOW, Friday.

Mr. Ken M'Kenzie, of Tambaroora, writes to correct the report that he had offered to pay a bonus of 2s per day, while the war lasted, to any three Hill End men who enlisted. The offer, he says, applied to Tambaroora, where there were about 13 eligible men, and it is still open.

RECRUITING POSTERS.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) has ordered 10,000 recruiting posters. The design selected shows a Union Jack with the words, "This is our flag. What are you doing to keep it flying?"

The military authorities request that we will publish the notification of the change of designation of the Siege Artillery Brigade, A.I.F., which has been renamed:—"O" Siege Brigade, Royal Garrison Artillery, Nos. 54 and 55 Batteries (Australian). The following is a sample address for mail matter in keeping with the above—No. 89, Gunner T. Atkins, Nos. 54 and 55 Batteries (Australian), "O" Siege Brigade, Royal Garrison Artillery, c/o High Commissioner for Australia, London, S.W., England.

Mr. Vane de Heriz (late of Messrs. George Robertson and Co. Pty., Ltd.) was a few days ago presented with a wristlet watch and silver cross by the employees of the firm on the eve of his going into camp at Liverpool. The presentation was made by the manager, Mr. A. E. Dowling.

EXPLORER'S DEATH.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

The last surviving member in Australia of Stuart's expedition, Stephen King, died in Adelaide on Thursday. Deceased, who was 74 years of age, was a native of South Australia, and was for several years connected with the Government Survey Department. The sole survivor of the expedition is now Mr. Billiet, who lives in England.

NATIONAL EFFICIENCY.

MEETING IN THE CITY.

"Patriots will not drink; others must not," said the Rev. R. B. S. Hammond at the open-air public addresses on the question of national economy and efficiency, held in Martin-place during the lunch hour yesterday. That the large gathering of citizens concurred with this statement was demonstrated a little later, when, on a showing of hands, a resolution was passed almost unanimously favouring earlier closing.

Rev. R. B. S. Hammond said that the loss of efficiency in drink could only be known by those who were specialists in the matter. There was again no greater factor contributing to the loss of economy than drink. He declared alcohol to be an enemy of the Commonwealth, and to be very seriously involved in the question now before them. According to statisticians, it took 500,000 bullets to kill one man at the Dardanelles, but in the aggregate the bullets did a lot of harm. In the case of beer, for every 100,000 glasses consumed there might be only a percentage of one man ruined, but in the aggregate the harm would be there. Alcohol then was an enemy as much as Germany and Austria. Within 200 yards of where he stood he had seen one night recently no less than 15 soldiers in one hotel, all intoxicated. Every open bar was a recruiting depot for Germany, and if out of every 100 soldiers going into bars the efficiency of 10 was impaired then alcohol must be declared an enemy. "Patriots will not drink; others must not," he concluded amidst enthusiasm.

Mr. James Marion, general secretary of the N.S.W. Alliance, spoke on the same question. He said Mr. Asquith had admitted that from 10 per cent. to 15 per cent. of our new soldiers were being rendered inefficient through drink. This average on an army of 3,000,000 practically meant that at least 300,000 men were defeated by alcohol before they ever heard a shot fired or got within coo-ee of a German trench.

Mr. Walter Bentley read Sir Owen Seaman's poem, "To a False Patriot," published in London "Punch;" and Dr. Arthur also spoke.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS.

HOSPITAL ACCOMMODATION.

The Premier was asked last night whether he was taking steps to prepare the various private houses placed at the disposal of the Government for the accommodation of wounded soldiers.

"There will," said Mr. Holman in reply, "be no lack of accommodation for the wounded soldiers. Circumstances have united to overcome the violent resistance on the part of Messrs. T. Henley and D. Storey to any fair treatment of the wounded soldiers, and the Randwick Asylum has been taken by the Federal Government under conditions which will permit us to carry out our general policy in connection with it. This will relieve the strain for two or three weeks. The new accommodation that is made available will be ample for immediate requirements, and before that is entirely used we shall have other premises at the disposal of the military authorities."

INVALID CHAIRS FOR SOLDIERS

BLOCKED BY THE CUSTOMS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A peculiar position has been created by the action of the Customs Department in holding up the entry into the Commonwealth of 100 chairs, contributed by Australians resident in China for use by invalided soldiers in Australia. It is expected, however, that the difficulty will be solved. The Minister for Customs (Mr. Tudor) explained to-day that duty had to be charged on chairs, unless they were the property of the Commonwealth. Probably the chairs would be handed over to the Defence Department in bond, and that would obviate the trouble. Being Commonwealth property, they could be taken out without payment.

SLEEPING ON DECK.

Several further letters have been received commenting indignantly on the statement that soldiers returning wounded from Egypt were compelled to camp on the deck of the transport, the empty cabins being kept locked up. "Are they not worthy of humane treatment as far as space and conditions will allow," asks "Mother of Four." "especially when helpless and perhaps blind. I for one, with husband now wounded, cannot look forward to any beneficial results regarding the home trip, which under proper conditions might do so much towards restoration of health. In another column we read of the great falling off in recruiting. Is it not to be expected?" "Soldier's Sister" and 12 women, who forward a joint letter, write in a similar strain. "Civilian Doctor," who has made the voyage from Suez to Australia several times, suggests that the complaint should not be taken seriously, as sleeping on deck in the tropics is preferable to being in a cabin, and passengers on ordinary steamers would as a rule willingly pay extra for such a privilege. The writer adds:—"It is just as well that enteric convalescents should not have mattresses to sleep on."

POSTMASTERS' CLAIMS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The hearing of the postmasters' claims, which have been before the Arbitration Court for some time, concluded to-day. Mr. Skewes, in closing the case for the Public Service Commissioner, said the Postmasters' Association had to come into Court against the expressed will of the majority of its members. Apart from the managerial function, there was no duty of a postmaster which could not reasonably be expected of a fifth-class clerk, whether in relation to correspondence or accounts work. The claims, if granted, would involve an additional expenditure for the first year of £67,000, which would be divided amongst 1073 postmasters, giving them an average increase of £63 per officer.

Mr. Wilson said men had to have special qualifications to be postmasters.

Judgment was reserved.

NEW ZEALAND TRAGEDY.

AUCKLAND (N.Z.), Friday.

A fatal fire occurred at Whangarei this morning, when a private hotel, used as a Maori hostelry, was destroyed. The building was occupied by about 37 natives, who were in town attending the Native Land Court, and three persons were burned to death, including the proprietor and his son, aged 12. Everything points to premeditated murder and suicide on the part of the proprietor. Before the fire the Maoris assert they heard two revolver shots. It is assumed that the proprietor first shot his son, then set fire to the hotel, and subsequently shot himself. He left a letter intimating his intention to commit suicide, as he was in monetary difficulties.

SMALL ARMS FACTORY.

THIRD SHIFT IMPRACTICABLE.

When members of the small arms factory employees recently advocated the introduction of the third shift at the factory the Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) said he was favourable to the proposal, and he promised to refer it to the acting manager, Mr. Ratcliffe. That officer has now reported that the proposal is "absolutely impracticable," and that the "increased confusion" of three shifts would reduce the production.

LATE MR. J. L. TREFLE, M.L.A.

Probate of the will of Mr. John Louis Trefle, late Minister for Lands, has been granted to testator's widow, Kathleen Trefle, of Waverley; his brother, Charles Bede Trefle, of Temora, and George Henry Varley, newspaper proprietor, of Sydney, the executors named in the will. The testator, who died in St. Vincent's Hospital, Darlinghurst, on January 11 last, bequeathed his estate to his widow, children, and certain members of his family. He stated that should certain interests, which he held with Mr. E. J. Brady, in Victoria, realise satisfactorily, he bequeathed a further sum of £100 to each of his sisters, and £50 each to St. Vincent's Hospital, Lewisham Hospital, Westmead Home for Boys, and the Waitara Foundling Hospital. He also stated that he had already provided for his wife by settling upon her certain properties in Temora.

The net value of the estate was estimated at £3619 7s 7d.

TONGA AND SAMOA.

GERMAN MONOPOLY OF TRADE

AUSTRALIAN FIRMS' POSITION.

The attitude of the Auckland Chamber of Commerce towards the Deutsche Handels und Plantagen Gesellschaft the German firm which is monopolising the trade in Tonga and Samoa has attracted wide attention in shipping circles in Sydney since the publication in the "Herald" of Mr. E. Anderson's remarks.

Representatives of the Sydney firms concerned prefer to say little or nothing on the subject of the supply of goods to this firm. They agree with the statement made in New Zealand that, if Australia and New Zealand refused to keep up these supplies, America would readily step into the breach.

One well-known business man pointed out that America was probably getting a share already of the import trade, and was certainly getting a greater share of the export trade of Samoa than all the other nations put together.

"For the last six months," he said, "there has been an average of one American schooner a month arriving at Samoa from San Francisco. They would carry from 400 to 600 tons. That is how the Samoan merchants get their copra away. It must be fairly certain that those vessels do not come down empty from San Francisco."

"It is quite correct to state that there are enough British firms in the Tongan Group to cope with the trade. The legal technicalities of the D.H. and P.G.'s position, however, are questions for lawyers to decide.

"The Deutsche Handels und Plantagen Gesellschaft, or the "long-handled shovel," as it is also called, is the biggest planting and trading company, for any one individual concern, in the South Seas. The original firm was Godeffroy and Co., a Hamburg firm of South Sea traders, who built up big ramifications in the South Seas and elsewhere. In the early eighties they were transformed into the D.H. and P.G. This company has got the largest copra plantations in the Samoan Group, and has done a lot of cotton-planting in Tonga. It has trading stations throughout the Tongan Group, and also throughout Samoa. It also had an establishment in the Bismark Archipelago and German New Guinea.

"The D.H. and P.G. is therefore exclusively and pronouncedly a German firm. It is German to the backbone. It imported all it possibly could from Germany, and sent out all it possibly could to Germany. The D.H. and P.G. copra has certainly, until the outbreak of war, always gone to Germany. They made a strong point of all their produce going to Hamburg. If they could not ship it by direct sailers it was brought to Sydney and transhipped to the N.D.L. or "black German" steamers.

"Now that Samoa is under British military occupation I believe a lot of trade is going to San Francisco, because of the high freight rates ruling from Sydney to Europe. Of course, any business they are doing now is under the direct surveillance of the military authorities in Samoa."

LAND SETTLEMENT SCHEME.

Mr. H. E. Easton, honorary secretary of the British Immigration League, has been informed, through the Governor-General, that up to the present a commission has not been appointed to visit the dominions for the purpose of drafting a scheme in connection with the settlement of soldiers on the land. A few weeks ago it was cabled that Mr. Bonar Law, Secretary of State for the Colonies, as a result of the promise made by the dominion Governments to co-operate in settling soldiers on the land, had appointed Sir Rider Haggard chairman of a small commission.

WOMAN'S BODY IN HARBOUR.

The body of a woman was found in the harbour near the Colonial Sugar Refining Company's Wharf, Pyrmont, about 9 o'clock yesterday morning. It was conveyed by the water police to the Morgue, where it awaits identification. Deceased was about 50 years of age, 5ft in height, had dark hair and complexion, and blue eyes. She was dressed in an old woollen skirt and dark blouse with white square checks, and wore a black straw hat and leather slippers with elastic tops. Written in pencil on her underclothing was "Miss Gillien."

BRITISH TRADE RETURNS.

LONDON, Oct. 7.

The returns of the Board of Trade for September show that imports increased by £25,000,000; exports by £5,634,331; and re-exports by £2,290,286.

ARCHBISHOP OF DUBLIN.

LONDON, Oct. 7.

The Right Rev. J. H. Bernard, Bishop of Ossory, has been elected Archbishop of Dublin, vice the Most Rev. J. F. Peacocke, Primate of Ireland, resigned.

INCREASING EFFICIENCY.

WHAT STUDY HAS DONE.

LESS WORK AND GREATER PRODUCTION.

A series of meetings was held this week to enforce upon the citizens the need for efficiency in both public and private life. Upon the general statement we are all agreed, but it may well be asked what is efficiency and how is it to be attained. To deal adequately with the subject would need many volumes, for it would be necessary to consider all departments of life; but some general observations may be of use, as well as some illustrations of how efficiency has been obtained in particular instances and callings. A short definition of efficiency may be given thus: The attainment of the best results in the shortest time, with the least exertion, either physical or by machinery, and at the least cost.

In business efficiency is obtained by organisation in the office and by organisation in the workshop. In the office there are the short-cuts, which the accountant explains to the manager or proprietor. Short-cuts mean a saving of time and labour, and a saving of money, if they are not too short—that is, if they are not so short that they do away with the safeguards for the quick detection of book manipulation. In the workshop efficiency is often attained by shortening the methods of working, by inducing workmen to make simpler and fewer motions in doing their work, thus leading to a saving of time with less muscular exertion on their part.

Much has been heard of what the application of intelligent manual methods has done in the United States. These methods have been recounted in a paper written by Mr. Frank Gilbreth, of Providence, Rhode Island, on "Motion Study as an Increase of National Wealth," and published by the "Financier," of London, as a series of articles.

We have military drill, which enables bodies of men to work in unison attaining certain results by so doing at the minimum of exertion, and with no confusion. Yet strange to say, not till recent years has the motion of work been thought out and classified as have been the motions of drill, though now that it has been done, it is so obvious. Mr. Gilbreth points out that there is no waste of any kind in the world that equals the waste from needless ill-directed and ineffective motions and their resulting unnecessary fatigue. Because this is true, there is no industrial opportunity which offers a richer return than the elimination of needless motions, and the transformation of ill-directed and ineffective motions into efficient activity. Formerly, the material was the element which received the chief consideration, but now the human element is the chief in the field. Vocational training, vocational guidance, better placement, and better working conditions have become subjects for serious consideration in all parts of the world. Savings in human energy are resulting from these investigations, but the greatest saving will result when the motions of every individual, no matter what his work may be, have been studied and standardised.

Such studies have already been made in many trades, and have resulted in actual savings, which prove that the results of the practice confirm the theory. The case of laying bricks has been cited often. Another case is the folding of cotton cloth. In this action 20 to 30 motions were reduced to 16 or 12, with the result that instead of 150 dozen pieces of cloth 400 dozen were folded, with no added fatigue. The motions of a girl putting paper on boxes of shoe polish were studied. Her methods were changed only slightly, and where she had been doing 24 boxes in 40 seconds, she did 24 in 20 seconds, with less effort. Similar studies have cut down the motions, not only of men and women in other trades, but also of surgeons, of nurses, of office workers; in fact, of workers in every type of work studied.

Motion study consists of dividing work into the most fundamental elements possible, studying those elements separately and in relation to one another, and from these studied elements when timed, building methods of least waste. Consider, for example, the assembling of a machine. What motion study does is to record the existing method in the minutest detail. Each element of the assembly is then tested, the method used in handling the element being compared with other possible methods. So the most efficient elements of assembling are determined, and those elements are combined into a new method, which becomes the standard. As a result of study by this method, in the case of assembling braiders, where 18 braiders had been assembled by one man in a day, it became possible to assemble 66 braiders per man per day, with no increase of fatigue.

The accurate measurement necessary to obtain such results has a threefold derivation. First, there must be determined the units to be measured; second, the methods to be used; and third, the devices to be used. The unit of measurement must be one which of itself will reduce cost, and should be as small as the time and the money that can be devoted to it will warrant. The smaller the unit, the more intensive the study required. The methods and devices to be used are also determined largely by the question of cost and the methods and devices which provide least possibility of errors of observation are preferable. These errors are of two kinds—errors due to instruments, and errors due to personal bias. But the latest methods of making motion studies and time studies by the use of the micromotion method and the chronocyclegraph method exclude such errors.

Here, for the present we must rest, though later we may continue the account of Mr. Gilbreth's interesting studies. It may, however, be well to set at rest the minds of employees upon whom the system may be tried. The system is not one of speeding up. There is no added work. The work is simplified, not added to, and that is why better results are obtained. To obtain the best results, the wages of the operator must be increased as an incentive to him to use the system to the full. Nor need he be afraid that the demand for his services will diminish. Cheaper production means increased consumption, and that will cause more work. So, it is improbable that there will be any decrease in the amount of labour wanted.

INVESTMENT MARKET.

The investment market this week has been weak, probably owing to the Balkan complications. Some business has been done in Colonial Sugar shares, the new issue being available for dealing. The Fiji issue is a preference issue as to interest, which is cumulative. The Australian issue is selling a little higher. Dealings also took place in old Sugar stock, which, of course, carries all rights in the division. Variations on rates prevailing a week ago are:—

COMMONWEALTH WAR LOAN.

The Commonwealth Bank notifies that subscribers to the war loan who have not paid their second instalments, representing 20 per cent. of the amount applied for, should do so without delay. The closing date is October 15, and in terms of the prospectus failure to do so renders previous payments liable to forfeiture. Instalments will be accepted at any branch of any bank, or at money-order offices. Receipts for moneys paid should be obtained on the space set apart on the scrip certificate. Subscribers who have not yet received their scrip certificate may obtain them in exchange for provisional receipts—in the metropolitan area at the Commonwealth Bank, and in the country at the office of original application.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Stone and Siddeley, Ltd., has been registered with a capital of £50,000 in £1 shares, of which 30,000 are to be issued as fully paid up. Its objects are to acquire the business carried on in Australia by Edward G. Stone and Ernest J. Siddeley as Stone and Siddeley, engineers, etc. The first directors are Messrs. Edward G. Stone and Ernest J. Siddeley; three others are to be appointed.

Robert Reid and Company has declared a dividend of 10 per cent. and a bonus of 5 per cent.

The general meeting of A. and E. Ellis, Ltd., was held yesterday under the presidency of Mr. A. E. Ellis. The report and balance-sheet were adopted. Messrs. A. E. Ellis, E. Ellis, F. A. Sargeant, C. R. M'Kenzie, and F. H. Guy were re-elected directors, and Messrs. L. S. Drummond and Co. auditors.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench sold yesterday a parcel of shares in the Civil Service Co-operative Society of New South Wales, Ltd., at £2 15s per share.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

There was a fairly brisk distributing demand yesterday, and prices generally were unaltered. All harvesting and shearing requisites attracted attention at full rates. Many inquiries have been made regarding fencing wire, but owing to the high quotations, few sales resulted. No. 8 black wire was worth to £16/10/ a ton, and was very scarce, even at this price. For No. 6 galvanised £18 was wanted. No. 8 galvanised brought to £18/5/, and No. 10 to £19/5/. Building materials were quiet, but firm. Small lots of cement realised 21/ a cask.

The market for cornsacks was unmistakably dull, and supplies for immediate delivery could have been secured at 8/3 net to rails. November delivery brought another 1d. Bran bags were unchanged at from 7/10 to 8/ net. January to March shipment from Calcutta was quoted at 8/2½ c.i.f. There was little inquiry for woolpacks, which were freely offered at 2/10 net to rails.

Copra, sun-dried, in bags, was quoted at £17 a ton f.o.b. export steamer, a rise of 10/ on the week.

MONDAY'S HOMEBUSH OFFERINGS.

The number of sheep and of cattle listed for Monday's sales at the Homebush yards is as follows:—

Sheep (including lambs)	25,229
Cattle (including calves)	1,548

At Darling Harbour yesterday 7 tons of wheat and 96 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

The amount of wool manifested to arrive at Darling Harbour yesterday was 6371 bales.

LONDON MARKET CABLES.

METALS.

LONDON, Oct. 7.

Closing quotations on Thursday were:—

SILVER.

Bar silver was quoted to-day at 23 5-16d an ounce standard (9/16 lower).

SUGAR.

Sugar is firm and unchanged.

BRADFORD TOPS.

The Bradford tops market is very slow. Prices are:—Sixty-fours, 29d (½d lower); super sixties, 28d (½d lower); common sixties, 27d (½d lower); fifty-sixes, 32d (unchanged); fifties, 28½d (unchanged); forty-sixes, 25d (unchanged); forties, 23d (unchanged).

CHEESE.

The market for cheese is firm. New Zealand makes are quoted at from 76/ to 77/ per cwt.

CEREALS.

The wheat market is quieter. A price of 58/ a quarter of 280lb c.i.f. is asked for Walla Walla and Bluestem, due on October 15.

Flour is firm. Oats are strong. October-November shipment of La Plata is worth 27/ a quarter of 304lb.

Peas are firm. New Zealand Maples are quoted at from 64/ to 66/ a quarter of 504lb.

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

Wheat quiet, prompt deliveries worth about 7/, outlet limited, new season's delivery to end of October 4/6. Flour, £18 to £18/2/6 net Port Adelaide; £18/10/ delivered at Adelaide. The Grain and Fodder Board is shipping 200 tons of flour to Western Australia on Saturday. The price is unchanged. Bran quiet, about 1/1 to 1/1½; pollard, 1/6 to 1/6½; chaff, tending downwards, range about £9/10/ to £7/10/; cornsacks, 8/6 stop late; branbags, 7/ to 7/3; potatoes advanced £2, Snowflakes £14 to £14/10/, Redskins £15 to £15/10/, new season's £15 to £16 in the market; onions, £10 to £11 old, £15 new.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Wheat for early November delivery has been bought from Sydney at 4/9, but supplies are now offered cheaper from South Australia, business, January-February, has been done at 3/3. Flour, £17; forward business done for export for shipment at end of December. Bran, sellers reserved, £4. Pollard scarce, £6. Oats weak, except Japanese, which are steady at 2/5½ to 2/7. Chilian are quoted up to 3/. Maize, yellow, 4/10; white irregular, 4/ to 4/3. Chaff easier, £10/10/. Potatoes rose sharply owing to the heavy demand and reports of a poor crop in New South Wales. Sellers ask £14, and buyers offer £13. Onions quiet, £5 to £5/10/; new Silverskins sold £3/10/ f.o.b. for December-January shipment. Cornsacks fell sharply owing to the large number of re-sellers, and the weakness in Calcutta; November, 8/4½, prompt 8/4 net. Branbags, 7/6; woolpacks, 2/1. Whitehead firmer, and £1 to £2 dearer; Champion's now £48 to £49.

PRODUCE.

DAIRY.

Butter met with an improved demand in Sussex-street yesterday, and more like normal conditions prevailed than during the earlier part of the week. Business was done with Western Australia, and there was a possibility of a small surplus for oversea export. It was difficult to procure supplies of bacon and cheese. Steamers bringing the latter have been delayed by rough weather, and up to noon yesterday their cargoes had not been placed on the market. Eggs showed practically no alteration. Sales, although satisfactory, could not keep pace with the heavy supplies, and the usual week-end carryover was looked upon as inevitable.

Messrs. Mossman and Ellis report having obtained the following prices at auction:—Eggs, hen, new laid /13½ to /14, railway and rivers /13 to /13½, duck, /13 to /14 per dozen; roosters, few extra to 14/, choice 11/ to 12/6, good 9/6 to 10/6, medium from 8/6, small from 7/6 per pair; hens, choice heavy to 8/, good from 7/, medium and light from 6/; ducks, English, choice suburban to 6/6, good to 5/6, medium light and old from 4/6, ditto, Muscovy, choice suburban to 9/6, good 7/6 to 8/6, medium light and old from 5/6; drakes, Muscovy, choice suburban to 15/, good 10/ to 12/6, medium and light from 8/6; turkeys, hen, choice heavy to 16/6, good 12/6 to 15/, medium and light from 11/; gobblers, choice heavy to 22/, good 2[illegible]/ to 20/, medium and light from 20/; geese to 10/; guinea fowls, 5/6 to 6/6; pigeons, choice young to 2/6, old from 2/ per pair; carcase pork, to /10½ per lb; carcase veal, to /6 per lb.

FORAGE AND GRAIN.

DEARER POTATOES AND MAIZE.

The market was bare of Tasmanian potatoes yesterday, a state of affairs brought about by a short consignment and a strong buying demand. Nominal prices were £14 for Redskins, £13/10/ for Brownells, and £12 for whites. New Zealand potatoes were worth from £11/10/ to £12, with the bulk of the business transacted at the lower figure. Victorian consignors, no doubt attracted by the high prices ruling, forwarded a shipment, which were rated at from £12 to £13. The coming week's consignment from Tasmania is expected to comprise only 5000 bags, and it was stated by one competent authority that they would bring up to £15 a ton. Onions were firm at late rates.

Maize also met a dearer market, prices making a sharp advance. An exceptionally strong demand ruled. South African was chiefly concerned, flat yellow making to 5/2, round to 5/, and white to 4/9. River grain was unaltered.

Practically no chaff dealings were put through. A little business was done in lucerne, but the fodder trade, as a whole, suffered badly from the effects of fixed prices and pending Commission decisions. The consignments to the Railway Yards have shown a marked decrease during the past week or so, and anything good enough for feed purposes is snapped up at proclaimed rates.

At the various firewood selling centres, 16 trucks were offered at auction. Prices were lower all round, week-end conditions causing the market to weaken.

PRICE OF STRAW CHAFF.

Horseowner writes:—I for one in Orange wish to congratulate the N.C. Commission on its price it fixed for straw chaff, and it is a great pity it did not make it 4d/ (Earls Bros.' cost).

I bought a bag of chaff here six weeks ago, price 12/, and when I put same on scales it weighed 50lb. I got a little bit of oaten chaff, and a big bit of straw chaff for my money. The present Government will make a lot of friends in Orange as soon as it compels all produce dealers to brand all bags of horse feed, and show the public whether they contain oaten or wheaten chaff, or a mixture of produce store rubbish. A great deal of the latter has been on sale here of late.

RAILWAY MARKET.

It is indicative of the state of the railway yard that Government wheaten chaff, which some little time back was difficult of sale in the vicinity of 4/, yesterday realised proclamation price. This is not to be wondered at, for the supplies of produce are still wofully short. A fair number of consignments were to hand yesterday morning, but, as usual, the greater number went privately at the maximum price. Of the remainder—disposed of at auction—the majority was lucerne chaff. But for the fact of Queensland absorbing the output of the Tamworth district, the Sydney yard would receive very much heavier supplies of this produce.

Potato prices are still moving on the up grade, and present conditions seem to point to still further increases. That such is the case was manifested by the state of affairs at the yard this morning. A fair-sized yarding—five trucks—was to hand, and demand being very keen, brisk bidding and extremely high prices resulted. For one consignment 12/6 per cwt was realised—the highest price since 1912, when 18/ was obtained.

Produce placed in position for sale.—Hay, straw chaff, 28; grain, 1; potatoes, 5.

Consignments manifested to arrive:—Hay, straw, chaff, 53; potatoes, 7.

Wheaten Chaff.—Ex Darling Harbour (7520), 8/6; ex Homebush (7241), 8/6; Twigg, Cowra (10082), 7/ per cwt.

Lucerne Hay.—Smith, Mudgee (9961), 15 bales 6/, balance 21 bales no offer; Cox, Mudgee (2477), passed 4/10; Flack, Mudgee (15341) green 5/3, balance 47 bales, brown, 4/; ex Nemingha (5884), 5/7; Mogg, Mudgee (9712), 5/6; Keech, Mudgee (8862), passed 4/10 per cwt.

Derrick Straw.—Lewis, Bathurst (13 08), 3/2 per cwt.

Potatoes.—Mellows, Roslyn (17224), 92 bags, Redsoil whites, 11/1; Catty, Crookwell (15286), 36 bags Up-to-dates, 10/3; 50 bags Up-to-dates 11/2; ditto, (10086), 29 bags whites 9/5, 28 bags Up-to-dates branded "W" 10/1, 15 bags Whites, Stokes Bros., 10/8, 15 bags Redsoil, Whites, branded "W," 10/, 20 bags Whites branded "X" 10/; Spackman, Crookwell (4788), 34 bags Brownell's 12/3, 14 bags Whites 10/3, 44 bags Brownells 11/3, 16 bags Whites Churchill 9/6, 13 bags Carmens branded "C" 12/6, 51 bags Redsoil Whites 11/4 per cwt.

FRUIT MARKET.

Little change occurred in prices at the fruit markets yesterday. Supplies were fair, and a good demand ruled for quality.

Quotations were:—

The quotations for locally-grown fruit do not include cases.

Passionfruit.—Local: Choice 8/ to 9/, medium 4/ to 5/, small 1/6 to 2/ a half-bushel case.

Lemons.—Local: Choice white 2/, coloured, choice 7/, medium 3/ to 4/ a bushel-case, small and inferior practically unsaleable.

Bananas.—Fiji 20/ to 21/ a case, 4/6 to 8/ a bunch, loose 9/ to 11/ a case; Cavendish, 16/ to 18/; Queensland, 12/ to 15/ a case.

American: Gravensteins, Jonathans, King Davids, 14/ to 17/6 a bushel-case.

PIG SALES.

At the City Yards yesterday 75 pigs, the bulk of which consisted of porkers, were offered at auction to the usual attendance of buyers. The representation of backfatters and baconers was poor. Competition was very keen, and values ruled equal to the best of late high rates.

Quotations were:—

Best backfatters £9, good £7 to £8/10/; others from £4/10/.

Best baconers, £5/15/, good £5 to £5/5/, medium £4 to £4/10/, light from £3/10/.

Best porkers 65/ to 70/, good 56/ to 62/, medium 45/ to 50/; prime light 33/ to 38/, inferior from 25/.

New South Wales butchers' hides: Picked lines of heavy-weights, 10½d and up; heavy-weights (56lb and up), 9d to 10½d; medium-weights (42lb to 56lb), 8¾d to 10½d; light-weights (32lb to 40lb), 8d to 9½d; cut hides, to 8½d; dry hides, to 11d; bulls, to 7½d; calfskins, to 5/6 each; yearlings, to 17/; horsehides, to 11/.

The unassociated brokers also held sales.

PROPERTY MARKET.

Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., report that this week has shown a falling-off from the very encouraging results of September. There are two reasons for this—the holiday in the week, and the weather. Usually, after a holiday, inquiries as to beach lots come in, but this week the only inquiries for holiday and week-end blocks have been for mountain property. Yet we sold lots at Woy Woy and Cronulla to customers who had previously called. Among home sites, Belgrade Estate, Bexley, and Longbrown Estate, Clyde, each with four lots, headed the list. Inquiries for farms are still numerous, and the firm is proceeding to prepare other farm properties for the market. It is notable that very many of the farm-seekers are townsmen. Farms near beaches will doubtless meet with more favour during the hot summer months, and Woonberal, within a few minutes of a fine beach, should find favour.

Next Saturday the company will hold a clearance sale of the remaining lots of Dobroyd Point Estate, constituting a part of Haberfield most favoured by nature.

MINING.

EDNA MAY DEEP LEVELS.

"SHORTS" OPERATING.

OTHERWISE MARKET QUIET BUT STEADY.

The feature of the market yesterday morning was a strong run on the shares of the Edna May Deep Levels. It was not due to telegraphic information from Western Australia that the marvellously rich reef of the Edna May mine had been cut. It was due solely to "rush" wires from Adelaide and Melbourne Stock Exchange operators to buy at any price.

"The 'bears' have been caught in Adelaide and Melbourne," soloquised a local operator. "It is now our turn to reap the harvest." And they started in to supply Melbourne and Adelaide from 19/10½ to 19/7½, then at 20/, for ordinary delivery, also on six weeks' terms at 19/9 to 20/. This scrip had, it is calculated, cost them on an average 18/ to 18/9, so they did well out of the Melbourne and Adelaide "bear" movement.

There was clear evidence that the Adelaide Stock Exchange operators were "shorting" the scrip, for in the past two weeks they had sold 60,000 contributing shares in a company that has only 40,000 contributing scrip. Possibly they had also helped to start a similar movement in Melbourne, as the demand for Sydney scrip came from both the eastern cities. As soon as the local "run" was over the vestibule settled down to ordinary routine business.

This did not prove very enlivening. The expectation of a 3/ per share dividend being approved by the directors at present visiting the Hampden-Cloncurry copper mine held the shares in a firm position, whilst the solid nature of the ore developments in the 1200ft level of the North Mount Lyell mine has stiffened the holders of Mount Lyell shares.

Interest in the tin section centred in the Tarping Valley dredges, and good business was recorded in Kampongs and Kamuntings, whilst solid offers were refused in the case of Katoo Deebook and Deebook Dredging. Australian tin stocks were very much in the background. Towards the close of the day speculation was very listless from a buying point of view, whilst sellers were rather disposed to mark time than to make a close market.

MINING NOTES.

In the latest report to hand (by telegram) from the manager of the Black Range West gold mine (W.A.), the reef in the face of the No. 3 south level is 5ft 6in wide of low grade. In a crosscut started for the footwall the face is improving in value, with 3ft of quartz showing good mineral. In the face of the No. 2 south level the reef is 2ft, and the last assays gave 55/ per ton.

In his report for last week the manager of the White Crystal tin mine states:—"Main shaft, No. 1 level, stopes continuing on good ore. Intermediate level, south drive in 270ft; lode channel improving in values. Murphy's shaft, south drive in 21ft; lode of good value. Stackpool's shaft, lode carrying payable ore the full width of the shaft. Mine stopped for one day for Eight-hours anniversary."

Mr. E. S. Smith, secretary of the Bolivia Silver-Lead Mining Syndicate, writes:—"The manager reports a very curious development in the mine. After bagging a good quantity of galena at a higher level, he commenced to drive south from the 55ft level, and very shortly afterwards struck payable tin, which has continued, and is showing very strong under foot. A sample sent to the registered office last week assayed 29.5 per cent. tin."

A clean-up was made at the Great Britain Sluicing Company's Y Creek plant for five tons tin oxide (estimated), as the result of sluicing 241 hours since September 7. The water supply at Y Creek is ample, but that at the Britain is almost exhausted, and if heavy rain does not fall soon work must be suspended. In view of this the board has decided to defer the declaration of a dividend.

At the conclusion of an exhaustive report from the secretary of the Broken Hill Block 10 on the gold mine on Misima Island (off the coast of New Guinea), now being tested on a working option, the document states, under the heading of "General":—"The mine development this month shows a big improvement, in that the two seams at No. 1 level have junctioned, and the lode has widened out to over 25ft. Up above at No. 8 tunnel, although values are low, there is a considerably better width of ore."

AUSTRALIAN SAPPHIRES.

EFFECT OF THE WAR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—No community in Australia has been harder hit by the war than the sapphire miners of Central Queensland, owing to the bulk of these beautiful gems having been purchased in the rough by German buyers, and sent to Germany, where they were cut and polished, and distributed throughout the markets of the world. Quite a number of them are sent back to this country, and sold in this finished state. Owing to the war business in rough stones is, for the time being, suspended. Efforts are being made to find fresh markets, and over 50 per cent. of the gem miners have left the field (many of them going to the front). A number are endeavouring to hold out until better times come. A number of our miners and residents here have beautiful cut sapphires to dispose of—blue, green, and yellow, in sets, and single stones—as we now have a first-class lapidary on the field. Patriotic Australians marrying or giving in marriage, or desirous of giving presents to friends, have an opportunity of showing some practical patriotism, and, at the same time, obtaining a genuine gem, not cut in Germany, but mined and cut in Australia. They will also help the people here to hold this little community together, until better times arise. As secretary of the Sapphiretown Progress Association, I shall be pleased to answer any inquiry re gem stones. Thanking you in anticipation for space in your columns for this appeal, I am, etc.,

J. STEWART NISBET,

Hon. Sec. Progress Association Sapphiretown, Queensland.

UMEARI GOLD, LIMITED.

The dredge master of the Umeari Gold Company's dredge, Philippine Islands, writing under date August 31, reports he had reached the eight-mile peg with the dredge. This is about halfway up a 1000 yard shallow stretch of river, where a thick layer of clay comes almost to the surface. At the time of writing, however, the clay had decreased considerably. Moreover, rain had fallen, and there were indications that the dry spell had broken, in which case much better progress would now be possible. The present objective is the 11-mile peg, where it is affirmed good values will be found. The wet season usually starts in September.

B.H. SOUTH MINE.

The mill of the B.H. South mine, for the four weeks ended October 2, treated 31,440 tons crude, assaying 15.2 per cent. lead, 7.4oz silver, and 13.4 per cent. zinc, producing 5950 tons concentrates, assaying 60.6 per cent. lead, 25.5oz silver, and 9.6 per cent. zinc. The mill recoveries were 75.7 per cent. lead, 60.1oz silver, and 11.8 per cent. zinc. During the same period 19,754 tons of zinc tailings were sent to the Amalgamated Zinc (De Bavays).

TIN-MINING REPORTS.

Bourke's Hill Tin-sluicing (Emmaville), Oct. 1:—No. 1 plant: Sluicing overburden; fair progress; good prospects; deepening sluice race; water supply fair.

Elsmore Tin-sluicing (Elsmore), Oct. 1:—No. 1 plant: Sluicing overburden; prospects fair. No. 2 plant: Sluicing overburden; good progress. Water supply good.

Melbourne Cope's Creek Tin Sluicing (Tingha), Oct. 1.—No. 1 plant: Now pumping water; expect float barge about the middle of next week.

AMALGAMATED ZINC.

ESTIMATED PROFIT ON MONTH'S WORKING ACCOUNT, £8897.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The return of the Amalgamated Zinc (De Bavays), Ltd., for the four weeks ended September 25 is as follows:—Tailings treated 31,524 tons, zinc concentrates produced 3672 tons, and lead concentrates produced 151 tons. Estimated income on working account, taking spelter at £22 per ton, £27,501. Estimated profit on working account, taking spelter at £22 per ton (after allowing for the B.H. South Company's proportion of profit), £8897. Under the present conditions, no reliable estimates of net profits can be made.

WILD CHERRY TIN MINE.

The report for the week ended September 30 states:—No. 1 level: Timbering passes, preparing for mullocking. Rise over north drive risen 5½ft, total 27ft. Very fair tin showing in footwall, with splashes of rich ore at intervals. No. 2 level: Back stope south progressing in good ore. Rise, north drive extended 3ft, total 3ft in good ore. Burns' block: Mark's shaft, completed timbering, and sinking on new make of ore from surface. Surface: Prospecting south of battery continues to expose profitable ore. The greater part of ore going through the mill is coming from here. Let contract for excavating, filling, trucking, and tipping.

AMALGAMATED HILL END, LIMITED.

The managing director reports for the month of September:—

Main shaft: This has been sunk 25ft, and the bottom is now 150ft below the lower tunnel level. The vein in the shaft still carried low values—a little gold only shown by dollying.

Mica vein: Extended level 20ft, the face being now 160ft north of the Star of Peace shaft. The country is very broken, and the vein poor in the face, which cannot be a great distance from Herman's blow. Stoping has been continued above the lower level with varying results, the best stone being now some 20ft north of the old Star of Peace shaft. We have some 15 tons of average stone in the hoppers.

Early in the month crushed 70 tons of mica vein stone for 40oz retorted gold. The tributers, Pisley and party, crushed 10 tons from Phillipson's vein for 13oz.

GREAT COBAR, LIMITED.

COBAR, Friday.

At the Warden's Court this afternoon the Great Cobar, Limited, was granted a three months' suspension of labour covenants on its Cobar gold mine and Chesney leases. Advices from London state that money to resume operations has been subscribed, and that the unwatering of the mines will commence immediately.

WESTERN AUSTRALIAN MINES.

KALGOORLIE, Friday.

During September the Menzies Consolidated Co. treated 2487 tons of ore for gold valued at £4548. The expenditure was £4646. The Ida H. treated 1410 tons for gold worth £4007. The expenditure was £4695. The Ivanhoe treated 20,210 tons gold for £31,435; expenditure £22,430.

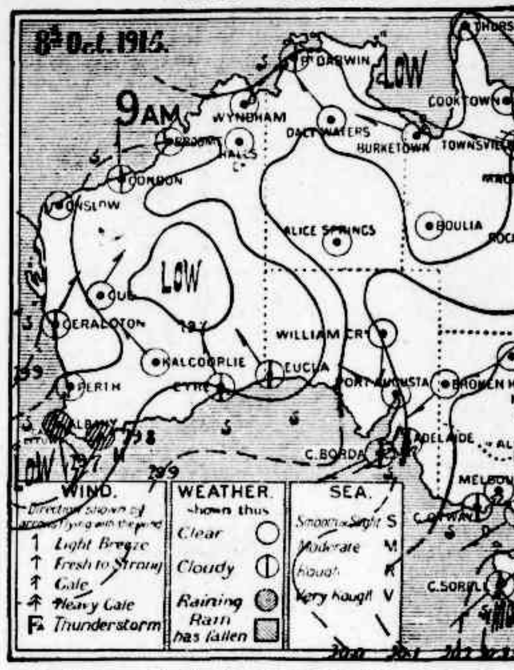
AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



Since 9 a.m. on Thursday the great eastern high pressure has steadily slumped in barometric values, and become dissociated. Now two "highs" are shown on the chart, one occupying the south-east States, with its centre to the south-west of Tasmania, a favourable indication for coastal showers and squally southerlies. The other lies over New Zealand. Between them is the disturbance responsible for the recent boisterous conditions. It is of cyclonic character.

Over the western half of the continent the depression has further developed, and now a closed-curve centre covers the whole State. It has two centres of energy; one in the south-east districts, and the other just off the Leeuwin.

Indeed, low pressure control appears the chief feature in the pressure distribution to-day, for not only the western half, but all tropical Australia comes under its influence.

For the present, except for clearing seaboard showers, the weather should be fine and cool generally; but milder conditions approaching, with northerly winds.

Ocean Forecast.—Generally smooth to moderate squally south-easterly winds on the North Queensland coast.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

The final day of the A.J.C. Spring Meeting provides an outing for metropolitan sporting folk this afternoon; the Spring reunion of the Victoria Amateur Turf Club opens at Caulfield, and the South Australian Jockey Club's Spring Meeting also commences at Victoria Park. The Wallsend Jockey Club furnishes an afternoon's sport for northern district race-goers, while at Brisbane the Albion Park Jockey Club holds a meeting.

Interest in the Victoria Amateur Turf Club's Spring Meeting has been greatly discounted by its opening day clashing with the final day of the A.J.C. meeting. The principal events to be decided at Caulfield this afternoon are the Debutant Stakes, the Caulfield Stakes, the Caulfield Guineas, and the Toorak Handicap. There are 18 acceptors for the Debutant Stakes, among whom are the Sydney representatives Maori Mat, Certes, Smoky, Poitrina, Tintometer, and Helidon Spa. The most likely to run well are Manaro, Buckowina, Tintometer, and Maori Mat; and the places may be filled by Manaro, Tintometer, and Buckowina. The battle for the Caulfield Stakes should be fought out among Traquette, Golden Wire, and Cyklon, who may finish in that order. The acceptors for the Caulfield Guineas number 14, but several appear to have been left in by oversight. The contest may be fought out among Patrobas, Rowanna, and Two, who may pass the judge as named. Traquette heads the list of 15 for the Toorak Handicap, in which Flash of Steel is the only representative of this State. Traquette is also engaged in the Caulfield Stakes, and is not likely to appear the second time in one day. She is, however, nicely in with 9st 3lb. Golden Wire is also in both races, but with 8st 9lb he must have a good chance in the mile handicap event; while Flash of Steel and Lavendo have been fairly used, and the numbers may be hoisted for Flash of Steel, Lavendo, and Golden Wire.

Messrs. H. Chisholm and Co. hold their annual spring sale of blood stock at their stables, Randwick, on Monday next. The lots catalogued include the racehorses Secrete, Gigandra, Prince Positano, Clash of Arms (imp.), Allaru, Third Prize, Tofua, Lanoline, Mythic, The Fortune Hunter, Simon Frisco, Sundial, Cheri Cheri, and other well-known performers; while Flavidin, Coominya, M.E.W., Attend, and Moaria, as well as the brood mare Ditt, in the estate of the late Mr. A. M. White, of Bolivia, will also be brought under the hammer.

AUSTRALIAN JOCKEY CLUB.

SPRING MEETING.

FOURTH (RANDWICK PLATE) DAY.

ANTICIPATIONS.

The Spring reunion of the Australian Jockey Club will be brought to a close this afternoon at Randwick, and a very interesting bill of fare foreshadows a continuation of the high-class sport witnessed during the previous three days of the campaign. The late rainfall has freshened up the track and reserves at headquarters, and the going should be exceptionally good. The customary facilities of transit by road and rail will be in vogue, and the general arrangements at the scene of action leave nothing to be desired.

The sport commences at 1 p.m. with the Highweight Handicap, for which a large field may be expected at the post; and at the weights, La Balfour, Cairn Wallace, Speedfast, Panacre, and Tarpan, seem the most attractive, while the numbers may be hoisted for Cairn Wallace, Tarpan, and Speedfast.

Firm, Onazer, Allaru, Sir Vive, and Royal Rufus should have the settlement of the Waverley Handicap among them, and the situations may go to Allaru, Onazer, and Sir Vive.

An interesting contest is promised for the Dowling Steeplechase, in which the most prominent parts should be played by Briarberry, Tim Doolan, Torone, and Canadium, and the judge may declare for Torone, Canadium, and Briarberry.

The Grantham Stakes promises a good battle, in which Westcourt, Panacre, Three Star, Royal Parade, and Common Law, should be in the fighting line towards the business end of the trip, and Westcourt, Three Star, and Panacre may pass the post in that order.

A great race may be anticipated for the Randwick Plate, in which the best w.f.a. talent will measure strides. The most likely to be battling it out when the whips are being brought into play are St. Carwyne, Ulva's Isle, Cagou, Reputation, and Cetigne, and the honours may be divided by Reputation, St. Carwyne, and Cetigne.

The meeting concludes with the Final Handicap, in which the chances of Golden Hop, Toa Tere, Allaru, Offa, and the Fortune Hunter appear to be the brightest, and the places may be occupied by Toa Tere, Golden Hop, and Offa.

The programme is subjoined:—

AUSTRALIAN TROTTING CLUB.

BROWN BOY WINS FLYING HANDICAP.

RETFORD BELLS A.T.C. HANDICAP.

The Australian Trotting Club was favoured by the weather yesterday. The acceptances for the six events were exceptionally numerous, but the racing did not produce the customary close finishes. The Flying Mile was won by Brown Boy, about whom the ringmen asked for 6 to 4. The A.T.C. Handicap went to Retford Bells and 4 to 1 was obtainable about her chance at the barrier rise. Details:—

BOXING.

LES. DARCY v DYER.

Les Darcy and Fred Dyer will decide the middleweight championship of Australia when they meet at the Stadium to-night. The contest is creating considerable interest, as some months ago in Brisbane Darcy only narrowly defeated Dyer on points. The contest will be preceded by two six-round preliminary bouts, provided by Jimmy Barry v Fred Brett and Jack Cole v Les. Gleeson. The first pair will be in the ring at 7.45 sharp.

AMUSEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"Potash and Perlmutter" has proved the central attraction of race-week, the humorous bickering between the two partners, as portrayed by Messrs. Paul Burns and Sam Le Bert, forming the mainstay of a comedy which also shows their warm-heartedness and their straightforward business management. There will be a matinee on Wednesday.

THEATRE ROYAL.

The final performance of Rex Beach's strong drama of mining life in Alaska will take place to-night at the Theatre Royal, after which Messrs. Beaumont Smith and Leslie Hoskins will close their dramatic season. "The Barrier," which is beautifully staged, deals touchingly with the hopeless love of the devoted French trapper (Cyril Mackay) for the heroine (Olive Wilton).

CRITERION THEATRE.

"Stop Thief" is in its last six nights at the Criterion Theatre, where the new piece reaches its laughing climax in the final act. This new J. C. Williamson combination is now rehearsing "A Pair of Sixes," an American farce, the title of which refers to the decision of two business partners to decide the terms of separation by a hand of poker, the loser having to serve as butler to the winner. Subsequent developments are ingeniously humorous. Ethel Dane and Tom Shelford will join, and Florence Gleeson will reappear, for this production, the partners, Boggs Jones and Geo. B. Nettleton, falling to John Webster and Mr. Shelford. "A Pair of Sixes" will be produced next Saturday.

"THE WAYBACKS" AT THE PALACE.

This afternoon, at 2 o'clock, there will be an extra matinee of "The Waybacks at Home and in Town" at the Palace Theatre, where Mr. Philip Lytton's company has settled down comfortably in the new play. The Waybacks, whether at Dingo Flat, or in Sydney at the Emu Coffee Palace, contrive to keep successive audiences in a state of uproarious laughter.

ADELPHI THEATRE.

"Robbery Under Arms" will continue until Wednesday next, when Mr. Marlow will stage the new drama of life, "The Midnight Mail," in which a full-sized railway engine will be seen at express speed, and it is here that the thrilling fight takes place on the tender of the engine. In another big scene the Waifs' Refuge will be shown, wherein 50 small children will be heard singing a simple hymn, accompanied by a large organ. The plans are at Nicholson's.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

At the Tivoli Theatre, both afternoon and evening, new acts will be introduced from the United States in the persons of Edward Marshall, described as "chalkographist and general fun merchant," and Le Roy Sisters, specialty artists from England. Many favourite artists will appear, including Ella Caspers, Mary Law, Frank Stafford and Co. in "A Hunter's Game," Jack Birchley, and others.

The exclusive heavy-weight champion fight pictures, Johnson v Willard, will be shown at 10.30, 11.30, 12.30, and 5 p.m., after the matinee. They are proving a big draw.

LITTLE THEATRE—"THE STROLLERS."

The Royal Strollers will give a matinee performance at the Little Theatre to-day (2.30), after which they will enter upon the last seven nights of their season at this playhouse under the J. and N. Tait management. Mr. Sydney James, assisted by the impudent "Billy," will head this clever combination in a bright farewell programme.

PICTURES AT THEATRE ROYAL.

Next Saturday a picture season of one week will be opened at the Theatre Royal by Mr. Wm. A. Read, who will introduce the official films of the Panama Exposition. The new movies will include a sensational series showing an automobile race through the exhibition streets, with a catastrophe in turning a corner, and Art. Smith will be depicted looping-the-loop in an aeroplane.

MME. CHARVIN'S WAR CONCERT.

Flower processions, a parade of the States, and an allegorical products representation, will form vivid spectacular features at the concert at the Town Hall to-night in aid of all the regimental comforts committees. Mme. Charvin (Yvonne Leverrier), who has been indefatigable organising the whole affair, will join with Mr. W. J. Coad in Vincent d'Indy's "Sonata for Violin and Piano" (op. 59), which will then be performed for the first time in Australia. Lady Helen Munro Ferguson and suite and the Allied Consuls have notified that they will be present. Mrs. Hugh Ward, Misses Emilie Fenn, Gertrude Lambert, Messrs. Percy French, Malcolm McEacharn, W. J. Coad, Ernest Truman, and Lawrence Campbell will assist. Mr. J. E. Brownlow is honorary concert director.

THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The Sydney Symphony Orchestra will give the final concert of the 1915 season in the Conservatorium on Saturday, October 23, at 3 p.m. The Great Symphony (No. 2), by Borodin (first time), will be performed; the overture, "Lenore," No. 3, Beethoven; "Entrance of the Gods in Walhalla," Wagner; and Casse Noisette Suite (Nutcracker), Tschaikowsky. Madam Stapelfeldt and Mr. C. Smith will sing the "Buffa Duet" from "Don Pasquale" (Donizetti). The combination of the best professional players for this concert will number 75. Plan at Paling's on Wednesday next.

CALEDONIAN SOCIETY'S CONCERT.

The Caledonian Society will give its regular concert at the Southern Cross Hall to-night, when Mr. J. O. Love will direct, Mrs. W. Cummings will be the accompanist, and Misses Ina Riley, Lilian Gibson, Jessie Sheath (pupils of Isa Coutts), Messrs. David Mackenzie, F. Harrington, W. Cumming, L. A. Wright, and Bobby Watson will assist.

NORTH SYDNEY SOLDIERS' WELCOME.

A welcome concert and social will be given to the Northern Suburbs returned soldiers, at the North Sydney School of Arts, to-night. A procession of motor cars and band will leave Milson's Point at 7.30 p.m., with the returned men, for the School of Arts. The Premier and others will speak.

MILITARY HOSPITAL, MIDDLE HEAD.

With a view to enlisting the support of the Mosman people for the new military hospital for convalescent soldiers at Middle Head, a concert has been arranged in the Mosman Town Hall on Tuesday next, when Miss Muriel Barton, Mr. Herford, Miss Enid Allman, Mr. Claude Ledustrier, Miss Dorothy Hopkins, and the "Bariston Glee Club," under the baton of Miss Barre Johnston, will assist. Miss E. Langhorne is hon. secretary.

THE ILLINGWORTH'S RECITALS.

Mr. Nelson Illingworth will devote his final song recital in aid of the Allies' Day at the Repertory Theatre on Wednesday next, to compositions by Messrs. Roy Agnew, Joseph Bradley, Fritz Hart, Alfred Hill, W. Arundel Orchard, Rex de Cairos Rego, Mirrie Solomon, and Ernest Wunderlich. The Austral String Quartet will assist. Mr. Walter Thomas will be the accompanist. The plan is at Nicholson's.

CONCERT FOR WAR CHEST FUNDS.

It is intended to shortly hold a concert at the Conservatorium of Music in aid of the War Chest Funds. Mrs. E. Antill and Mrs. Murray Campbell are the hon. secretaries. A preliminary meeting will be held on Thursday morning next at 11 o'clock in the cloakroom at the Town Hall. All those who are interested are cordially invited to be present.

NEW PLAY, "NATURALISED."

On Thursday afternoon next, "Naturalised," a comedy by a young Australian girl, Eileen Hayes, will be staged at the Criterion Theatre, in aid of Allies' Day. Misses Mollie Carmody, Grace McDonald, Alma Breen, Narla and Kitty Mason, Kathleen and Dulcie French, Rose Bowey, Bonnie Quinlan, Myra Alan, Lyal Donaldson, and Nota Brakwell (secretary) will appear.

THE FRANCESCHI CONCERT.

Miss Emma Franceschi, an operatic soprano, who has been studying in Italy, will make her first appearance since her return at the Town Hall next Saturday evening, in aid of soldiers blinded in the war, when she will sing "Ritorna Vincitor," the Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria," and other favourite songs. Mr. Henry Seymour (baritone), Mr. F. Mowat Carter, Signor B. Truda, Signor A. Pansetta, and Mr. Harold Whittle (accompanist) will assist in an attractive programme. The plan will open at Nicholson's this morning.

POLISH RELIEF FUND RECITAL.

On Saturday next Miss Nellie Fehon (from the studio of Mr. Andrew Black) will give a recital in the Repertory Theatre in aid of the Polish Relief Fund. The contralto will sing such favourite numbers as "Oh, Love, from thy Power" (Saint Saens), "In Haven" (Elgar), "Ombra mai fu" (Handel), and "Three Fishers" (Hullah). Miss Florence Brown, Mr. Frank Hutchens, Mr. A. J. Morris (tenor), Mr. Harry Thomas, and Mr. G. Vern Barnett (accompanist) will assist. The plan is at Nicholson's.

Mr. SID. MACDONALD.

For a month past Mr. Sid. Macdonald has been seriously ill from heart strain and general breakdown, due to overwork. Music-lovers will now be delighted to learn that this favourite tenor is resuming duty in much improved health. No artist has sung more often for charity than Mr. Macdonald, and his recovery will be welcomed.

MISS GRACE STAFFORD'S RECITAL.

On Wednesday, October 20, Miss Grace Stafford will give an elocutionary recital at St. James's Hall, when she will be assisted on the musical side by Mrs. Hugh Ward, Messrs. Frank Hannell, Warrington Reynolds, and the Gibson Orchestra. Miss Stafford, besides recitations, will appear in the wordless play "The Other Man."

"THE MANOEUVRES OF JANE."

On Saturday, October 23, and five following nights, Mr. Frederick Ward will present Henry Arthur Jones's brilliant comedy, "The Manoeuvres of Jane," with a carefully-formed cast, at the Little Theatre. The production will be in aid of "Allies' Day," under the auspices of an influential committee. A meeting will be held at Mr. Ward's studio, Penzance-chambers, on Monday, at 4 o'clock, to arrange all details.

NEW REVUE AT LITTLE THEATRE.

A new Australian revue with the title "Are We Downhearted?" will be presented at the Little Theatre on Saturday, October 30, by a large company, headed by the old-time favourite comedian, Mr. Howard Vernon, and Miss Vina Deloitte. The production will be a travesty on the "Ocean Beach, Manly," and events of the day, with caricatures of well-known people, and will include a number of novelties in the way of song and dance. A crowd of dancers and choristers are being rehearsed, and there will be scenery by the Cilnis.

THE JENSEN STUDENTS.

The students of Miss Jensen's Danish Academy of Music gave their usual monthly invitation concert in Paling's Concert Hall on Wednesday last. The students taking part were Mrs. Defries (flute), Master Leslie Williamson (trombone), Master Shakespeare Jensen (piano), Misses Stone and Marcelles (vocalists), and the two orchestras. Mr. Cowie, who is leaving for the front next Wednesday, was enthusiastically received for his recitation of "The Day."

STRAWBERRY FETE.

On Saturday afternoon, October 23, a strawberry fete will be held at Yarralla, Concord, in aid of the 2nd Battalion Comforts Fund, from 2.30 to 6 p.m. There will then be music and other attractions. His Excellency the Governor and Lady Helen Munro Ferguson will be present. Steamers from Fort Macquarie direct to the gardens. The treasurer is Miss Edith Walker.

MR. D. H. STEWART'S CONCERT.

Mr. D. Henry Stewart's twelfth annual pupils' pianoforte recital, in aid of the wounded soldiers, will take place on November 6, and will include some original compositions, heard for the first time here. Assisting artists will be Messrs. Sid. M'Donald, Harry Thomas, and Percy Wharton (accompanist).

MALINI, MAGIC, AND MUSIC.

Clever conjurer Malini again entertained a large audience in St. James's Hall last night. The last of his farewell series is announced for next Monday night in the same hall. On this last occasion Malini's card and coin manipulation will be supplemented by contralto solos by Miss Ivy Smith, and piano selections by Miss Rene Lees. Plans for Monday night are at Paling's and the Hotel Australia.

WEST'S PICTURES.

West's directors announce that there will be the usual matinees to-day at 2.30 at both the Glaciarium and Olympia Theatres, when the feature for both houses will be the Edison four-act drama "On Dangerous Paths," which stars Viola Dana, the little Broadway child. In addition is shown the Australian Gazette, the new Keystone "A Lover's Lost Control," and other comedies and industrials. On Monday at both houses will be shown a Selig feature entitled "Pals in Blue," which should appeal particularly to picture-lovers. It is the life story of two cowboys, who join a travelling circus. With this will be shown a specially attractive programme of interesting items. At all performances De Groen's Vice-regal Orchestras are in attendance and supply special music.

LYCEUM THEATRE.

The star film at the Lyceum Theatre to-day is "Ashes of Revenge," a London Film Company's three-reel feature drama, featuring Edna Flugrath. The pictures at this theatre are continuous.

PICTURE BLOCK THEATRES.

To-day's programme at the Crystal Palace Theatre includes "Help Wanted," adapted from the stage play which enjoyed a full year's run in New York. At the Lyric Theatre the star film features Evelyn Thaw, wife of Harry Thaw, in "The Threads of Destiny." "The 100,000-Dollar Bill," a two-reel Domino feature, is being shown at the Colonial Theatre; and the programme at the Empire Theatre is headed by "The Beast," a Lubin production.

WATERSIDE WORKERS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In the Federal Arbitration Court yesterday, before Mr. Justice Higgins, the hearing of respondent's case in the matter of the Waterside Workers' Federation against the Commonwealth Steamship Owners' Association and others, was proceeded with.

Captain John Ogilvie, director of the Victorian Stevedoring and Contracting Company, said the men handled wheat in large quantities, about one ton being placed in the slings. He had never heard of men getting their fingers crushed or otherwise injured through handling kerosene cases. During the course of the year there were as many as 800 or 900 regular hands employed on vessels at Melbourne. Foremen generally picked the men to be employed, and he acted on the principle of getting men who would suit him best. As far as oversea ships were concerned, wharf-labourers had always worked under conditions of Port Melbourne stevedores—46½ hours a week. Stevedores had not for years asked for a reduction of hours of employment. Both parties arrived at an agreement, and there had been no trouble since. The average man, however, only worked about 26 hours weekly. He thought 46½ hours constituted a fair week's work, and to reduce the number of ordinary working hours would simply mean an increase in the number of "overtime" hours. Double time was paid for Sunday work at present.

The case is part heard.

ALLEGED UNION FRAUDS.

ACCUSED HONOURABLY ACQUITTED.

The hearing of charges against George Clifford Bodkin of defrauding the Railway Workers and General Labourers' Association of various sums of money was resumed yesterday before Mr. M. S. Love, S.M., in the Industrial Magistrates' Court.

Mr. Leslie Gannon appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. J. C. Gannon, K.C., and Mr. Hodgson, instructed by Mr. J. R. Moffatt, for the defence. Bodkin pleaded not guilty.

Mr. W. Rosser (president of the union) concluded his evidence for the defence. The magistrate then said he did not wish to hear any further evidence. Originally there had been three charges, which he had reduced to one. The allegations of irregularities had been inquired into by the executive of the union, which came to the conclusion that the defendant's explanation was eminently satisfactory, and he received a unanimous vote of confidence. Mr. Love added that he could not understand how an unauthorised member could see fit to file three separate criminal charges which should never have been made. The proceedings were absolutely unwarranted.

The magistrate allowed £15 15s professional costs, and £4 16s witnesses' expenses, in default 21 days' imprisonment. Three weeks time was allowed for payment of costs.

ACCOUNTANCY EXAMINATIONS, 1916.
WE COACH FOR ALL ACCOUNTANCY EXAMINATIONS IN AUSTRALIA.
Our Students are thoroughly trained—not "crammed." By enrolling with us you save time and money by our clear and compact Home Study Courses. You are guided by instructors possessing the highest degrees, under the personal direction of our Mr. C. V. Robertson, F.I.A.V., F.P.A., etc, who has had 20 years' experience of teaching Accountancy by mail.
Every conscientious Student should join the School that will work earnestly for HIM. All papers carefully corrected and promptly returned. Fees are very reasonable, and include entire cost. No extras or extension fees. One fee until we put you through.
During the next fortnight we should be pleased to post, free of charge, to those sending their names and addresses our Accountancy Guide. Complete information given in reference to Accountancy Examinations. An invaluable book to those seeking progress in commercial occupations, and an undoubted guide to opportunity and success for Bookkeepers, Cashiers, Clerks, Office Men, Managers, and others depending upon "knowing how" for their livelihood.
Our methods of teaching Accountancy and Bookkeeping are private, individual, and inexpensive. We have a success list of 1500 Accountancy Candidates—a record unequalled in Australia.
ABOUT BOOKKEEPING.
ABOUT BOOKKEEPING.
Is a knowledge of everyday practical Business Bookkeeping of value to you? Have you ever thought how easy it is to learn WHEN TAUGHT ON PROPER LINES?
We can teach you at home, in your spare time, at a very small cost. We guarantee success. Our Special Course—complete in itself—has been written and compiled by men who have had 20 years' experience of all methods of Bookkeeping, and who have handled over 20,000 Students in all walks of life. These men also give their whole attention to Coaching you personally and individually.
Write to-day for "WHY PAY MORE?" It is an interesting little booklet, and tells you all about this Course. Don't fail to get a copy if you want to learn how to keep books properly.

Mr. JAMES McMAHON, 21 Loftus-street, writes:—
"I desire to express my high appreciation of your systematic method. When I joined your school I had not the slightest knowledge of motor mechanism, and had never attempted to drive; but the tuition was so systematic and easy that I could not fail to get on."
Our country pupils find their lodging expenses light. If you make full inquiries at the large garages you will join no other school. Call or write for testimonials, 64 OXFORD-ST, city (2 doors below G.P.O.).

SHORTHAND IN 30 DAYS.
THE BOYD SYSTEM.
TAUGHT PERSONALLY OR BY CORRESPONDENCE.
(Success Guaranteed.)
We have just introduced
A NEW METHOD OF PAYMENT, which enables anyone who cares to attend fairly REGULARLY (at the day or night classes) to secure a thorough working knowledge of BOYD SHORTHAND
for
FIVE GUINEAS CASH.
Under our old method of payment we allowed a twelve months' margin within which the lessons could be taken, and we have found that this led to abuse. Our new method puts a premium on PROMPTNESS—the worker secures the advantage.

WATERS' GLOVES ARE BEST

FOR RACE WEAR—FOR EVERYDAY WEAR,

BECAUSE PERFECT IN FIT

AND DEPENDABLE IN QUALITY.

It is a sound principle of economics that the best is always the cheapest, and this applies particularly to such goods as Gloves, Shoes, and Hose.

A pair of either in an inferior quality will go to pieces after having been worn a few times, whilst if they are in dependable qualities, as stocked by us, you can depend upon getting full value for your money in service, in fit, and in their smart appearance.

Established Over 30 Years.

SUFFER NO LONGER.

Your case, however bad, is not hopeless.

DR. PARKER'S

GREAT INDIAN

RHEUMATIC REMEDY

has benefited thousands of sufferers from Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, etc., and will undoubtedly give you relief from pain.

CHRONIC RHEUMATISM.

Miss Ellen Findlay, 94 Burnley-street, Richmond, Vic., suffered for three years from Rheumatoid Arthritis. She was a helpless cripple, with all joints stiffened, swollen, and distorted. The case was pronounced incurable by many leading physicians of Melbourne, and she gave up hope of ever walking again. After taking six supplies of DR. PARKER'S GREAT INDIAN RHEUMATIC REMEDY she was able to do all her household duties. Miss Findlay has kept well since.

Send 5/6 to-day, and medicine will be forwarded free of charge to any address, or WRITE FOR FREE PAMPHLET.
(Postage 2d).

THE FACT AND TRUTH ON ELECTROLYSIS

FOR THE REMOVAL OF SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS.

THERE IS ONLY ONE WAY,

and as many ladies may have a wrong impression of the above, I will endeavour to give them a correct one.

THE TERM ELECTROLYSIS means the application of an electric current to remove or destroy by electro-chemical means any growth or tissue with which it is brought in contact, and the process takes place by forming a chemical action under the skin. It is conveyed to the parts by an electrode and needle holder. When the needle is injected into the follicle of the

it decomposes, and after a few seconds the hair is removed with the root attached. It cannot grow again when removed by an expert, but if people work with a reduced current there will not be sufficient power to destroy the follicle, and the skin only will be affected.

It is similar to trying to kill the nerve of a tooth without sufficient dressing being used; only the top of the nerve is affected, and you will receive complications.

SO BE WARNED, and make quite sure about a cure before you have superfluous hairs removed.

FOR FIFTEEN YEARS

I have practised on thousands of Women

WITHOUT FAILURE,

and have also spent time and money in investigating all kinds of batteries and electro means, including freezing, etc., and know that Electrolysis can only be successfully practised one way, and that way is simplicity itself—it removes the hair for ever, and leaves NO SCAR when the work is done by an experienced operator and proper care taken.

IF FAILURE CAN BE PROVED by any of my patients treated, or about to be treated,

ONE HUNDRED POUNDS IS THE FORFEIT.

MOLES OF ALL KINDS,

which are now looked upon as a blemish, and not an enhance to beauty, can be removed by the treatment.

FACE MASSAGE.

The natural way to prevent wrinkles is to help nature. This I do by proper manipulation and massage, and claim to give you a healthy clear complexion, thereby removing all blemishes.

LADIES ONLY TREATED.

NETTOYER CREAM FOR FRECKLES
is only 5/ per pot, 6d extra for postage.

NETTOYER FACE CREAM
prevents wrinkles and clears the skin. It is a different cream to above. Only 5/-. Posted 4/.
